FORT IN A CONSPIRACY!

Democrats Campaign Document Tells of the "Baneful" Influence of the Church.

SALOON PAMPHLETS

Bitter Attack on the Bishops' Law —Church Accused of Abusing Its Privileges.

"——the ever increasing baneful influence of the church which is bound to go to any extent abusing its privileges, and which will in a given time undermine the very foundations of the republic. It may be likened to a coral reef growing up forever and ever from the deep sea of popular ignorance and superstition, coming nearer to the surface little by little until one day we shall see the Ship of State founder upon it, and go to pieces dismally."

——An extract from a pamphlet entitled "Against Fanaticism in New Jersey," which is being circulated by some of the saloons of Union county in support of the Democratic party in the present fight.

Enemies of the bishops' law, backing the Democratic party in the present political fight, have entered upon a campaign of "education." In several saloons in the city there have been distributed hundreds of copies of a pamphlet entitled "Against Fanatism in New Jersey." The word "Fanatism," according to Webster, is very rare, fanaticism being the commonly accepted term, but according to George F. Herz, editor of the pamphlet, the thing is anything but rare, and threatens to deprive the people of New Jersey of the dearest possession, "personal liberty." The pamphlet was issued last year, but was thought so good an argument now against the retention of a party which would be guilty of passing the bishops' bill that it was decided to use it as a campaign text book in behalf of the Democrats. The price of the booklet, stated on the fly leaf, is twenty-five cents. But one can have all the copies he wants for the asking.

A persusal of the reading matter, sandwiched in between three or four hundred saloon advertisements, reveals a virulent attack on the bishops' law and the clergy. The first chapter, headed "Personal Liberty," and written by someone who signs himself "J.," contains such sentiments as these:

"Is it not fanaticism to pour into the gutters an immense quantity of the finest wines and other liquors, one of the most wonderful gifts of Providence?"

Here is another:

"The intention (of those who want to preserve the sancity of the Sabbath) is to bring them into some church, to force them into ennui."

The chapter closes with the statement that this law (presumably the bishops' law) is only the first of a series of steps to bring us all under State tutelage.

The second chapter, "Church and State," by the same writer, referring to those responsible for the passage of the bishops' bill, contains this statement:

"It is rather, combined with them (the voters who stay at home) the ever-increasing baneful influence of the church which is bound to go to any extent abusing its privileges, and which will in a given time undermine the very foundations of the republic. It may be likened to a coral reef growing up for ever and ever from the deep sea of popular ignorance and superstition, coming nearer to the surface little by little till one day we shall see the ship of State founder upon it and go to pieces dismally."

The writer then admits that there are some worthy clergymen, and outlines what they ought to do in detail. He then says:

"The worst thing, however, on the part of the church is dabbling in politics or mixing politics and religion."

The chapter ends with the awful warning that the clergy are trying to make a prohibition State out of New Jersey, and "think what this would mean," says the writer:

"They would make us all drink poorer and dearer stuff."

"They will, in the end, ruin the State financially and politically."

The next chapter, "The Bishops Law and the Societies," tells all to be very, very careful of such men as J. Franklin Fort, who was one of the three judges who upheld the constitutionality of the bishops' bill.

"Let the members of whatever organization, if connected with the liquor traffic, look out before it is too late!" shouts the expositor. Because:

"It is surely in their interest not to be forced to stop all festivities and social affairs at 12 o'clock on Saturday nights. To be sure the whole thing is as ridiculous as it is shameful; for it's treating them like children, to break up their gathering at 12 o'clock and send them home. And how about the Sunday excursions

BIG GROCERY FIRM TO OPEN LOCAL STORE

Acker, Merrall & Condit, the well-known wholesale and retail grocery firm of New York, has completed arrangements for opening a branch store in this city, as exclusively announced in The Daily Press a few weeks ago. The firm has leased one of the stores in the Stirling Building, adjoining that of The Plainfield Trust Company, and the branch will be opened there January 1. Mr. Whitney, a representative of the firm who has had charge of the suburban business for the grocery house, will manage the Plainfield business. He has leased a residence at Netherwood and will make his home here.

The firm has a large patronage in Plainfield and throughout this vicinity and was largely persuaded to establish a branch here by a number of Plainfielders who have been trading with this house for years. At first the concern was a little skeptical about the wisdom of such a move, but the assurances of a sufficient number of customers to make the venture a paying one removed all doubt.

In addition to supplying the Plainfield trade, the branch will also serve as a distributing station for the smaller towns in this vicinity, and while the service heretofore from the main store in New York has been excellent this will be still further improved.

TENTH ANNIVERSARY AS HEAD OF SOCIETY

The all-day sewing meeting of the Missionary and Aid Society of Warren chapel, held at the chapel, yesterday, proved a great success. Many pleasing features combined to make the occasion a happy one for the fifty members and their friends present. One of the surprises was the presentation of a handsome set of dishes to Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman, who completed her tenth year as president of the society. Her faithfulness and earnest efforts were commented upon and she was heartily congratulated by everyone.

The women gathered at 10 o'clock in the morning and during the day three quilts were quilted and sewed for the missionary box. At 1 o'clock a hot luncheon was served. The tables were elaborately decorated with chrysanthemums and flowers and the new dishes and silverware belonging to the chapel were used for the first time.

During the luncheon, Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor, presided at the table and Joseph W. Gavett was also among those present. He offered grace, and after the luncheon Mr. McKelvey spoke of the success of the society, praising the women for their efforts. He then presented Mrs. Honeyman with the set of dishes as a gift from the society. The committee having charge of the details for the presentation comprised Mrs. J. H. Snyder, Mrs. Theodore Martin, Mrs. John Green, Mrs. John Higgins, Mrs. James Burner and Mrs. Benjamin Moore. The sewing was in charge of Mrs. Gibson Smith and Mrs. J. W. Gavett.

Beautiful Views at Meeting.

Something unique is being offered at the series of meetings at the Christian church. Each service consists o fa talk and special songs beautifully illustrated by about fifty views projected on a large screen by a double lime light lantern, producing a picture eleven feet square in colors. These views can be seen nowhere else in the world, as they are made by the owner of the lantern and there are no duplicates of the slides in existence. Before the meeting closes a series covering two evenings will be offered which has never been given before. These are now in preparation and will be sent out as soon as completed and exhibited for the first time. Announcement was made last night that there would not be any meeting Saturday evenings. A special service is planned for Sunday evening which will excell anything yet offered. These services are all free and all are made welcome.

Mrs. Sarah E. Wheeler's Funeral.

The funeral of Mrs. Sarah E. Wheeler, wife of Chauncey P. Wheeler, who died yesterday noon, will be held at her late home, 237 Somerset street, Sunday afternoon at 4:30. Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, will be in charge. Burial will be made Monday in Elmwood cemetery, New Brunswick.

Minstrels by School Boys.

A minstrel show for the benefit of the city high school athletic association will be given in the school auditorium Saturday night. In connection with the show, the class of 1910 will present "The Haunted House," a playlet, and "Michief in the Studio," a pantomine in two acts.

"TOM JONES" INTRODUCED

English Comic Opera Direct from London Apollo Gets Hearty Reception Here.

SEASON'S BEST SHOW

Unstinted Applause Given Meritorious Cast of Players—Mr. Savage Much Pleased.

"Tom Jones," the new English comic opera that has been a ringing success at the Apollo theatre in London for the past year, was presented at the New Plainfield theatre for the first time in America last night. It was received with unstinted enthusiasm by a capacity audience that included a dozen of the best known theatrical men in the country, including the producer, Colonel Henry W. Savage. He declared after the performance that he was very well pleased with every part of it and that he appreciated the interest taken in it by the local people.

The new opera is one of two that Colonel Savage selected to bring to New York this year, the other being "The Merry Widow," now captivating large audiences nightly in the metropolis. "Tom Jones" is in a class by itself and is founded on Fielding's famous novel of the eighteenth century, with which almost everyone is familiar. The libretto was arranged by Messrs. Courtneidge and Thompson and their strong foundation has been embellished with lyrics by Edward German, considered by many the most talented composer England now has. He was brought to this country to supervise the initial performances and was in the leader's chair last night.

In the three acts which are required to relate "Tom Jones," adventures in dramatic form, thirty characters are introduced, offering effective contrasts in comedy and romance of the drama. There are parts that call for capital comedy acting and there are romantic roles of young persons for whom live is not made easy, and there are persons who try to comjass their own ends at cost to others. So the thirty characters sing and act and create laughter betimes. They are reinforced by a big chorus of fifty young women and men and their singing and dancing was a delight to the ear and eye. All three of the acts are magnificently pictured, the third especially, wherein a garden effect with innumerable electric lights is shown, while the costumes, in great variety, are of rare beauty and richness.

Van Rensselaer Wheeler made a captital "Tom Jones," and Miss Louise Gunning as "Sophia," captured the audience with her personal charm and singing. She was recalled several times after every solo. Most of the comedy was entrusted to Gertrude Quinlan, who was last seen here as "Flora Wiggins" in "The College Widow;" William Norris and John Bunny. Norris was especially funny in the role of a busy-body barber, or male gossip, and his work was one of the hits of the evening. Others in the cast were Vaughn Trevor, Henry Norman, Florence Burdett and Laura Butler.

Besides Colonel Savage, the performance was viewed by Messrs. Wagenhals and Kemper, owners of the Astor theatre; Manuel Klein, composer of the Hippodrome lyrics and leader of its orchestra; Robert Cortleidge, one of the authors of the book; John Pratt, of Mr. Savage's personal staff, and a party of Mr. German's friends who accompanied him from England. The company went from this city to Washington, where the opera will be presented for a week, after which it goes into the Astor theatre for a winter run.

It was 12:10 before the curtain fell on the last act but despite the lateness of the hour the audience applauded for several minutes and called for Mr. Savage. The curtain was raised a dozen times and the cast and chorus bowed but the colonel modestly remained in the background.

Crairman Ginna "On the Job."

Councilman Daniel F. Ginna, chairman of the street committee, in company with City Engineer A. J. Gavett, made a tour of the city yesterday inspecting the sewer, brick pavement and trolley improvement. He expressed himself as being well pleased with the progress made. Speaking of the brick pavement work he said that from its inception in the council obstacles were thrown in its way and the city is now reaping the benefit of it. He said that there was no reason why the pavement could not have been laid during the summer, but other members of the council saw fit to holding the ordinance and in consequence the work has to be done late in the season, when bad weather is threatened.

The borough high school eleven will go to Essex Fels tomorrow to play the Essex Fels high school team there.

VASSAR'S HEAD TALKS

Dr. James M. Taylor Champions the Higher Education for Young Women.

CROWD AT THE CASINO

Address Given Under Auspices of the Hartridge School—A Reception Follows Lecture.

"Education was the subject of a lecture given by Dr. James M. Taylor, president of Vassar College, at the Casino, last night, under the auspices of the Hartridge School. The treatment of the theme was purely from the standpoint of the young woman. The speaker strongly advocated a college education for young women all things being equal. He was not inclined to the belief that the higher education for women is an extraordinary thing, but on the other hand quite normal and proper.

Dr. Taylor declared that a college education meant a little more training of the mind than that received in the high school and the added knowledge is something to be desired in fighting the battles of life. He spoke strongly in favor of the practical in education and urged the study of those branches that would tend that way. While the study of Latin, Greek and mathematics might always be useful they tended to train the mind to solve important questions that were constantly coming up in life, he declared.

Dr. Taylor in explaining this said that a person does not adopt the exercise of the dumb-bells simply as an excuse for doing something, but because it tends to strengthen the muscles and improves the general condition of the body. So it is in the study of higher branches. It tends to broaden the mind and improve the intellect.

In speaking of the private schools and those preparatory to college, he urged the practical studies as a foundation for the more advanced work if the pupil intends pursuing a college course. He laid special emphasis on this point.

Dr. Taylor spoke for about an hour and afterward an opportunity was given those present to meet the professor. The reception and social features proved a pleasing part of the program. A great many remained to shake hands with Dr. Taylor and express their appreciation of his interesting talk.

GAVE A BRIDGE WHIST FOR LOCAL CHARITY

Under the patronage of a large number of society women a successful bridge whist party was given at Truell Hall, yesterday afternoon, for the benefit of the Day Nursery, the charity maintained by the City Union of The King's Daughters. There were twenty tables and eighty people participating in the play. While many of the women who were in charge are members of the Loyal Daughters' Circle, King's Daughters, the affair was not given by the circle.

Among the prize-winners were Mrs. Coudert, of Cranford; Mrs. William Radcliffe, Mrs. E. T. Wilson, Miss Moore, Miss Breck, Mrs. Howard Williams and Mrs. W. L. Lockwood. After the play the company was served with refreshments by Mrs. J. R. Truell, who took this means of assisting in the worthy charity. The committee who arranged the affair comprised Mrs. E. E. Iremonger, Mrs. A. B. Davies, Mrs. W. L. Lockwood and Mrs. S. S. Schuyler.

Matters of public interest will be discussed, including electric light and definite action will be taken. Opportunity will be given all voters to express their opinions. Henry S. Fullerton, Republican, and Simon Peter Dobbie, Democrat, who are running for membership on the Township Committee, have both been invited to attend and express themselves on these questions. The society, as its platform implies, stands for progress, and has a membership of all the most influential men of the township. William Jeffery will be the speaker for the society. An interesting meeting is expected.

Mrs. Eliza Barrett, of New York, is visiting her son, John Y. Barrett, of Regent street, the borough.

John R. Truell and daughter, Mrs. Violet Truell Johnson, leave today for a six weeks' trip abroad. They expect to visit London and Paris.

HALLOWE'EN CELEBRATED

Merrymakers in the City and Borough Had Lots of Fun Last Night.

MANY PARTIES GIVEN

Ball At Saengerbund Hall and Jolly Gatherings At Numerous Private Homes.

With mummers of all sorts, shapes and sizes parading the streets with noise-making instruments, small boys flinging corn and stealing gates and their older brothers and sisters holding house parties, Hallowe'en was celebrated in rousing fashion in this city last night. Contrary to custom, there was less malicious mischief accomplished under the guise of "having fun" but there has never been a year when so many people roamed about in costume. The business section of the city was crowded with masked youngsters as early as 7 o'clock and from the terrific blowing of honrs everyone must have had lung power above the ordinary. Later in the evening, young women masquerading in men's clothes could be counted by the dozen and there were lots of dresses going down the streets that had been "borrowed by brother."

A squad of plain clothes policemen that Chief Kiely sent out kept down the exuberant spirits of the boys and hardly a bit of damage was occasioned. About the usual number of gates, porch chairs and rugs were carried off and a lot of signs were exchanged but that was about all. Several wagon owners reported early last night that their vehicles had disappeared from yards and sheds but they were found this morning.

There were no big celebrations in either the city or borough but Hallow'en parties were unusually numerous.

High School Fun.

The senior class of the city high school had their own Hallowe'en celebration at the school building, last night, when the members held a masquerade dance after a class collation served early in the evening. The members gathered at the school by 6 o'oclock and supper was served in the auditorium by the girls of the class. After the "feed," the floor was cleared for dancing, which was continued until a late hour. There were many clever masquerade costumes worn by the pupils of the class, and in the voting by the class, Miss Carola Hart won the honors as best costumed girl and Stanley Karner was haled as the best costumed boy. Miss Mary Collier furnished music for the dancing. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Miss Sara Sanderson, Miss Esther Crampton, Miss Helen Dorothy, Walter Caldwell and Chauncey Murphey. A flashlight photograph of the class in costume was taken early iln the evening.

Fun At Y. W. C. A.

The members of the Young Women's Christian Association were mystically but delightfully entertained by real "spooks" at the association rooms last night. As they entered the front door they were greeted by an uncanny young ghost leaning against a cornshack and pointing its finger up the stairs. At the head of the stairs another ghostly figure conducted the young ladies to the cloakroom, which was dimly lighted and inhabited only by a dummy. Led down stairs again, they found cornshocks and apples and jack-o'-lanterns on every side, and different ones of the white-robed sisters conducted each and every one present to some mysterious corner, where they were displaying the games of real ghostland.

In a far-away room, beyond a crooked patch of corn-stalks sat the witch reading palms by the light of a candle. This was the most popular past time introduced by the spooky sisters from spook-land, and they found that their fortune-teller could not go the rounds of all the earthly maidens they were attempting to entertain. With diving for apples, or cutting the flour-cake for a ring, or joining in some ghostly game, the evening passed very quickly for the one hundred young ladies present. Coffee and doughnuts were served by the spooks who had so graciously entertained throughout the evening. Special thanks for the enjoyment of the evening are due the committee in charge, consisting of Miss Adele Masters, Miss Dean, Miss Lillian Fredderman, Miss Marion McCutchen, Miss Florence Jennings and Miss Olga Lockert.

Scottish Reunion.

The Hallowe'en party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Doig, of 309 Stebbins place, last night, took the form of a Scotch reunion all of the guests being Scots. The first part of the evening was devoted to playing appropriate games, after which songs and readings contributed to make

"SPEAK EASY" TESTIMONY CAUSES PERJURY CHARGE

Because John Van Fleet, who was arrested in the raid on John Consoli's alleged "speak easy" last Sunday, testified in the borough police court at the hearing Monday night that there had been beer and whiskey for sale at the place in violation of the Bishops' law. Consoli has made complaint against him charging perjury. The hearing will be tonight in the borough court before Justice of the Peace Snape. Consoli claims that he had no liquor there and was not selling.

Van Fleet's testimony, as taken at Consoli's hearing, will be used against the Italian when he is brought up at the next term of the grand jury on charges preferred by Chief Marshal Weiss for running a "speak-easy" and selling liquor on Sunday. Consoli was fined $15 at the session of the borough court for disturbing the peace on Sunday, and in connection with the hearing, testimony was taken from the four men arrested in the place which showed that liquor was being sold and that there was a big supply of beer and whiskey in the store.

Consoli has not brought this charge of perjury against any of the other witnesses, though the others also testified that liquor was being sold. Both sides have retained lawyers in the matter.

MISS ELEANOR WILLIAMS NOW MRS. G. H. O'DONNELL

Miss Eleanor Boulden Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Williams, of West Seventh street, and George Harold O'Donnell, formerly of Newton, Sussex county, but now of New York, will be married in the Church of the Heavenly Rest at 6 o'clock this evening, by the rector, Rev. Charles Townsend. The invitations to the ceremony were restricted to the relatives and intimate friends, owning to the limited seating capacity of the church, but a large number were issued to the reception which will be held at the home of the bride's parents immediately following the wedding.

Mrs. William S. Loizeaux, a sister, will attend the bride as matron-of-honor, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Mabel Bogardus, of this city, and Miss Clorita S. Wingerd, of New York. C. Allen Hayden, of New York, will be the best man. John N. Gellatly, of New York; Russell G. Inslee, of Newton; Richard Elkins, of Elkins, W. V., and Ralph L. Crow, of Rye, N. Y., will be the ushers. The groom, Mr. Hayden, Mr. Elkins and Mr. Crow were members of the Tiger Inn Club, of Princeton University, class 1900. After a wedding trip the couple will reside in New York, where the groom is engaged in the practice of law.

PRESIDENT OF VASSAR COLLEGE TALKS AT CITY HIGH SCHOOL.

Dr. James M. Taylor, president of Vassar College, who spoke at the Casino, last night, made an address before the pupils of the local high school at the opening exercises this morning. He spoke of the value of high school work as a means of training the mind, and dwelt especially upon the point that though the studies in themselves seemed of no practical value, they have a great value in teaching the pupil to systematize his work and to train him to work with despatch. College men are today in great demand in the business world just because they have learned with their college Latin, Greek and mathematics how to train their minds to wor kto the best practical advantage, and the same thing holds true, on a smaller scale, with high school pupils.

Dr. Taylor also spoke of the duty each pupil at the high school owed to the State. "Schools are educational institutions, supported by the State," he said, "and the State calls upon the pupils to grow up to be good citizens in return for the educational opportunities extended them in the public school system."

Double Tracks Partly in Use.

The Public Service Corporation put a large gang of Italians to work last night and completed the re-arrangement of its tracks on Watchung avenue at the stand and at Watchung avenue and East Front street. The gang worked all night and the double tracks now extend from Fourth street to East Front street. The new tracks are in use today with a crossover switch near Second street. The gang is now hustling the work on East Front street with a view to completing the double tracking system as soon as possible.

JURY AGAIN DISAGREES

Second Trial Against Charles T. Vail Results the Same As the First.

INDICTMENT STANDS

Probabilities Are That Hunterdon County Authorities Will Not Make a Third Attempt At Conviction.

For the second time since he was arrested last November, charged with instigating the burning of the post-office building at West Portal, a jury at Flemington, in the case against Charles T. Vail, formerly of this city, failed to reach a verdict Wednesday night. The trial was the second that he has gone through and closed Wednesday morning after three days of testimony taking and cross-examining. The jurors deliberated all day but as in the previous hearing they could not arrive at conviction or acquittal.

The indictment against Vail is still standing but it is not probable that the authorities will attempt a third trial. The matter is being considered and in the meantime the accused man will be admitted to bail.

Vail wast postmaster at West Portal and owned the building in which the office was located, conducting a grocery and general store in addition. He employed a mail carrier and helper named Jacob Cyphers and one day while the latter was in the place, a stove was overturned and the structure burned to the ground. There were circumstances that led to an investigation and it resulted in Cyphers alleging that Vail had instructed him to knock the stove over. He further stated that the postmaster and a Plainfield woman named Miss Gillen were in a conspiracy to destroy the building and get the insurance. Vail, he said, told him what to do after the stove was dumped and what to say in explanation to people when they rushed up to help put out the fire.

Vail and Miss Gillen, who was also arrested and against whom there is an indictment, branded Cyphers' stores as falsehoods and declared they were in Plainfield at the time the fire occurred. It was brought out at the second trial that the mail carrier had remarked to friends that he had told his story to the authorities just to "get square" with the postmaster.

BOTH CLAIM VICTORY.

Democrats See Victory in Union County, Yes.

Brig. General Dennis F. Collins, chairman of the Union County Democratic Committee, announced today that he believed that the dissatisfaction among the Plainfield commuter element against President Roosevelt would result in the county going Democratic by a few hundred. He also predicted that Elizabeth would give the Democratic ticket a substantial majority.

In the opiuon of County Chairman F. H. Smith, of the Republican Committee, the county will give a majority of 2,500 for the ticket, and that the State will give J. Franklin Fort, the gubernatorial candidate, a large majority.

"The Kingdom of God."

An "Every Other Sunday Evening Course of Sermons" will begin on Sunday evening at All Saints' church at 7.45. Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, of New York, will preach in "Man Naturally a Child of God." This will be the first sermon in the course. Mr. Slicer was one of the preachers at Chicago University last year. He made one of the opening addresses at the recent International Conference of Liberals in Boston, and is always given a most cordial reception and generous hearing here. The seats at All Saints' church are all free.

Street Improvements Progressing.

Park avenue, between the railroad and Fourth street, will probably be thrown open to traffic on Monday or Tuesday. Yesterday the expansion joints were filled with tar, which is the finishing touch. A few days are required to allow the cement to set properly, while the work of culling and rolling brick preparatory to the process of cementing was finished on Somerset street. Contractor Meeker has also commenced his concrete work on Watchung avenue and Fourth street, following up the trolley company in its improvements.

Rum Grains Intoxicate Sparrows.

A novel way to capture sparrows alive was brought to the attention of Jesse C. Green, an automobilist, who in travelling along upper Broad street, Bloomfield, yesterday, saw an Italian walk over to a field where a number of the birds had congregated and, without any difficulty whatever, throw a net over the birds, and then one by one place them in a basket. Green asked how the birds were caught so easily, and the fellow said he soaked grain in rum and scattered it on the ground. The birds eating it become stupified and he then gathered in his prize. The birds are used by Italians in making a certain kind of soup.

Henpecked King of Beasts.

"Should some of the strenuous ladies of the United States happen to visit the New York zoo," said the animal painter, "they would be encouraged in their contempt of man. The lion is often lauded as the creature of pre-eminent courage. But in domestic life he isn't a circumstance compared with the lioness. When she smiles, he humbly approaches and fawns upon her. When she frowns, he lingers trembling in the corner. And if perchance she emits a growl, he crouches close to the floor until her majesty may feel in better humor. No, indeed. Many human husbands may feel that their wives are inclined to domineer. But of meek, henpecked males the lion is the most striking example."—New York Press.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

PLAINFIELD AND FANWOOD.

The unusual Hallowe'en pranks were indulged in last night, by the younger element in town, taken altogether everyone remained within bounds, the principal nuisances being flour throwing. Nearly every one venturing out on the street came in for a share of the distribution. Several who neglected to take care of their gates before darkness settled are having the trouble of hunting them up today.

Consecration services will be held at All Saints' Episcopal church Wednesday morning, November 6. The arrangements are in charge of the rector, Rev. William Mulford. Bishop Scarborough is expected to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Archibald, who have been visiting relatives in Washington Valley, have returned to their home in Westfield.

Election day is only four days off, still neither party has begun any strenuous campaign work as yet.

The weekly prayer and praise meeting will be held tonight in the Baptist church.

A meeting of the Township Committee will be held tonight in the town rooms.

A Hallowe'en dance was held last night in the borough fire house.

DUNELLEN.

With Election Day only four days off, borough political enthusiasm is rapidly nearing the boiling point. Both parties are active, though the Democrats have made the most of a show at their activity. The meetings of the past week, Katzenbach's visit and the big mass meeting of Democrats held in the borough hall Wednesday night, have rallied the cohorts of the Democracy to the support of their standard by the speeches. The Republicans have held no mass meeting, but are working quietly, man to man, and claim that they are accomplishing just as much.

Hallowe'en has come and gone. Last night the boys, old and young, were out with the pranks of the season and confetti and split peas are much in evidence on the streets today. With the young people, gatherings of a social nature were predominant. Seasonable games and Hallowe'en forecasts of the future in love and wealth occupied the interest of these functions, of which there were many. A party of thirty gathered at the home of Elston Lowrie and the evening was passed with games and jollity. Refreshments were served before the affair broke up.

At the session of the board of registry and elections this year, eighteen names were added to the list, and the total registration is now 456, as against 413 last year. This gives a gain of twenty-five for this year. This is the largest list in the history of the borough, and with such anti-election interest, it looks as though a heavy vote were to be polled. At New Market, sixteen new names were added to the voting list and one was removed, leaving a total of 349.

Mrs. W. W. Casselberry, Mrs. E. C. Dutcher and Miss Anna Todd are at Montclair today, attending the sessions of the annual fall meeting of the State Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

A party of fifteen of the borough young people went to Plainfield last night to witness the opening performance of "Tom Jones."

The regular monthly meeting of Engine Company, No. 1, was held last night, when routine business was transacted.

A. A. Garretson has been serving since Monday at New Brunswick on the petit jury. He expects to be home tomorrow.

The season for birds and small game opens November 10 and local hunters are preparing for some shooting.

Celebrated Seventeenth Anniversary.

It was the seventeenth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Snyder, Jr., of Bank place, that was celebrated this week, and not the thirtieth as previously stated.

Fort in Bloomfield Tonight.

J. Franklin Fort, Senator Everett Colby and Prosecutor William H. Speer, of Hudson, will speak in Bloomfield, Nutley, Montclair and Belleville tonight.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Liquor Dealers' Choice.

The liquor dealers do not want the Republican candidate for Governor elected. Neither do the lobbyists. In his speech at Paterson Monday night Mr. Fort said that he was opposed to the corrupt lobbyists. He added, "if elected I will drive them out of the State if I possibly can." There is nothing weak or evasive in such a statement as that.—Elizabeth Journal.

Candidate Without Shame.

I have been among you nearly thirty-nine years, and I hope to be here thirty-nine more. As your Mayor I have never done anything of which I am ashamed, and I think you all know me well enough to know I would approve of no law that would violate the peace and good order of any day of the week.—Katzenbach at Trenton.

If the Democratic candidate for Governor has no regret in connection with his administration of the affairs of the city of Trenton, when the liquor laws were shamefully violated, the only conclusion that it is possible to arrive at is that he is a man without shame. "When Mr. Katzenbach was Mayor of Trenton," says the New York Tribune, "there was, as there now is, a strict law against the Sunday opening of liquor saloons. But about every saloon whose proprietors wanted it open was open on Sunday, by the side door. The law was openly and notoriously violated. Trenton was known as a wide-open city, by the side door. Mr. Katzenbach's administration was an administration under which law-breaking flourished with impunity." Do the people of New Jersey want that kind of a "liberal" Governor? Do they want the Chief Executive who will wink at the lawbreakers? We have faith enough in the honesty and intelligence of the people of this State to believe that they do not want such a ruler. Elizabeth Journal.

WORTH KNOWING.

It is estimated that there are 2,500,000 dogs in Great Britain.

A square foot of a Persian rug means twenty-three days' work for the weaver.

Paris possesses the largest public gardens and the largest hospital.

Nearly half the meat eaten in Berlin is beef; pork comes next, then mutton, while veal is fourth.

In 1830 the world contained but 210 miles of railway; now there are over 350,000 miles of line.

Germany produces more honey than any other European country, furnishing 20,000 tons annually.

Posters in Paris.

French law gives the authorities of every village and commune complete control over posters. "No one," writes our consul general, "is permitted in France to deface streets and public places with crude, ostentatious announcements of his business or other subject. Billboards are infrequent in Paris and are generally built permanently into a wall, where they are taxed according to their superficial area. When a building is in construction and board screens are erected to shield the public from dust and other annoyance such temporary screen will soon be covered with posters of amusements and other business, but each poster so displayed has been previously submitted to the authorities, a license obtained, and each sheet bears the canceled revenue stamp, according to its size."

A Pretty Fast Clock.

He was standing in front of the circular elevator indicator in one of the office buildings, watch in hand. It was the morning after, and I suppose that he had forgotten to concern himself with the frivolous detail of winding his timepiece the previous evening. His equilibrium was far from stable, and his eyes unsteadily following the indicator hand blinked with efforts at comprehension as he tried to set his watch.

"'Diculous clock (hic)—very 'musing (hic)—very fast we live (hic) thesh timer (hic)—pretty fast fer my ole timer (hic)—'diculous—can't seem t' catch it (hic)—whoa! —there you are—gone again (hic). Pshaw!—'diculous clock."

I left him still trying to get his watch into conformity with the speeding indicator.—Boston Traveler.

How a Flea Jumps.

It is said that a flea leaps 200 times its height, and while it usually does land on its feet, it often fails, especially when it falls on a perfectly smooth surface, where the claws can get only a slight hold. A flea has six legs, whose great length and bulk make them so heavy that they must be a great help in keeping their owner right side up when it makes one of those gigantic jumps, and when it lands upside down or in some other way its ability to kick is so great that not more than one wriggle is needed to set things right. A flea's wings are mere scales and of no use. But small and worthless as they are, they tell the entomologist something about the proper classification of the insect. To the flea itself they have no value.—St. Nicholas.

Might Be Worse.

Mark Twain once received a letter from his brother, who complained that he was afflicted with a boil and the jumping toothache at the same time and inquired if he had ever heard of a worse combination. "No," wrote the sympathetic Mark, "and I can imagine only one that might be worse—that would be to have inflammatory rheumatism and St. Vitus' dance at the same time."—Lippincott's Magazine.

A Korean Romance.

A romantic little story comes from the Chuksan district. One of the residents having died of illness, his only wife declared her intention of killing herself. Arguing that it was not right for a woman to remain alive after her husband was dead and that she would be far happier if she followed him, she put her plan into execution and committed suicide the same night. She was only twenty.—Korea Daily Times.

Polishing Small Articles.

It is said that a high polish may be obtained after nickel plating on small steel articles, such as screws, by tumbling them with leather and dry rouge. The articles are placed in a tumbling barrel with leather scraps. Some dry rouge is put into the barrel along with the screws and leather and the whole tumbled for some time. The rouge coats the surface of the leather and causes it to act like a polishing wheel. Canvas scraps may be used in place of leather.

Politeness.

Lady (to Irish gardner, who "obliges" by the lady)—Well, Dan, and what do I owe you for today? Dan—Sure, ma'am, I'd sooner be taking the half crown you'd be offering me than the 2 shillings I'd be asking of you.—Punch.

Birds and Feathers.

Mistress—Mary, have you any rooted objections to using a feather duster? This room looks as if you had. Maid—Yes, mum, I have. I belongs to the Audubon society.—Harper's Weekly.

It is contended by some historians that coal was used by the ancient Britons, but the fact, if fact it was, is not proved. It may be said that coal was practically unknown prior to the twelfth century. It was first made an article of trade in England in 1381.—London Mail.

"A Value Always Better Than Elsewhere."

A Watson Suit Is as Good as It Looks.

You know style when you see it. And nobody can fool you about the fit of a suit. But even the keenest eyes can't look down into the "insides" of a suit and tell whether it's planned right and built right, strain points strengthened, seams reinforced, sagging and stretching prevented.

So the name of Watson is a guarantee that these unseen things are always as they should be – and the suit really is as good as it looks.

Which means its elegance, style and fit will be lasting.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

The first round match play for the Golf Committee and Green Committee consolation cups will be the feature at the Plainfield Country Club today. The play will be continued on Election Day and the Saturday following.

Match play for the October cup will be the attraction at the Park Golf Club today. This together with all other events will be concluded on Election Day.

"Marty" O'Loughlin, who has secured the position of professional at the Southern Pines Golf Club, Pinehurst, N. C., will have an excellent chance to keep in fine condition for next season's play; besides he will meet the crack professionals of the country and secure lots of practice.

Charles B. Morse, who is the winner of the President's cup, and may possibly win the Golf Club trophy, has been playing a steady, consistent game at the Park Golf Club. He has improved considerably over his playing of other seasons.

FOOTBALL.

The Yale football team is putting in hard work this week in the hope that it will win tomorrow's game. The wearers of the blue have not come up to expectation, but it is believed that when the test comes they will be on the spot.

The Princeton football squad is getting long and stiff practice this week. The followers of the eleven are rejoicing in the appearance of "Bill" Edwards, the famous guard, who was umpire at the Carlisle-Penn game on Saturday. All the regulars are out and nothing is being left undone in preparation for the game tomorrow against the Indians.

The football practice of the Carlisle Indians is even more strenuous than ever this week, owing to the game with Princeton tomorrow. The Indians feel that they will defeat the Tigers, but Warner has cautioned them not to be overconfident.

"The Big Four" are in poor shape this season. The Princeton and Yale linesmen are raw and undeveloped. Harvard's work has caused a deal of dissatisfaction at Cambridge, and Pennsylvania played like a minor college against the Indians.

In the game with Cornell Saturday the Princeton ends handled the forward pass very poorly, and unless a marked improvement is shown soon there may be more surprises in store.

As Yale and West Point are the only teams in the East unscored upon at present the Yale followers are counting the chances of keeping a clean slate. The coaches profess to be satisfied that Eli will keep up her record.

The arrival of Frank Hinkey, Yale's great end of several years ago, will be the event of the week at New Haven. He is one of the most successful coaches that ever handled the Yale players.

Harvard freshmen and Andover will not meet this season owing to the managers of these teams being unable to agree upon a date. This is the first time in the history of football that Andover and the Harvard youngsters have not met.

The forward pass, which was introduced for the purpose of opening up the game, has upset the coaching plans at the big universities. All methods for straight football have gone away, and former great coaches are now at sea.

TWO WEEKS OF SERVICES.

Well Known Evangelists Will Conduct Them in W. C. T. U. Rooms.

Under the auspices of the Plainfield Rescue Mission special evangelistic services will be held for two weeks in the W. C. T. U. rooms on Madison avenue, commencing tomorrow night. Rev. Charles S. Dennis, a well-known religious worker will speak and conduct these services and Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Baker, the singing evangelists, of Brooklyn, will sing at the Sunday services to be held at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon and 7:45 o'clock in the evening.

As an evangelist Mr. Dennis has had remarkable success during the past five years. Prior to his conversion he was a professional burglar. Seventeen years ago he was converted on the Bowery, New York, and ever since has been engaged in mission work throughout New York city and in various parts of the country. He comes to Plainfield highly recommended by press and pulpit as a forceful and energetic speaker. All men and women are invited to attend the services.

Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., will hold a regular conclave Monday night.

Plainfield Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., will have initiation at its meeting Monday night.

The Women's Relief Corps will hold a regular meeting tonight, and after the business an informal program of music will be enjoyed.

A WORD TO THE CLERGY.

The one vital issue in the present campaign is the liquor question. It is a case of the "liberal" Sunday agitators against the Christian citizens and Sabbath observers. With the election but a few days off, the Democratic standard bearer, behind whom the brewery forces present a solid front, maintains silence on the paramount issue, while his opponent, the Republican choice, comes out fearlessly and aggressively in favor of keeping God's day sacred.

"There is one issue in this campaign," says the Republican nominee. "The Democratic platform is the same as ours except on one point, and that is the excise question. Their home rule plank might have referred to it, but their candidate says it does not, so we must take his word for it.

"When I went into this campaign I said that I would dodge no issue, and I will not. Two years ago a bill known as the Bishops bill was passed. I can't for the life of me see why anyone should object to its provisions.

"I don't believe that the people of New Jersey want to violate any law. I told him in Newark Wednesday night that if they wanted a law making it legal to have the screens up on Sunday a bill to that effect could be passed over the veto of the Governor. I told them that if elected I proposed to be Governor, and I would sign no bill which I did not believe to be for the good of the people. I said that I was not like my opponent; that I would not sign any bill that was presented to me. I will see that the Bishops law is enforced and that it is observed as long as it remains a law, and it will not be repealed if I can help it."

VOTING MACHINES UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

New Jersey's Democracy, which has taken a decided stand in its platform against the voting machine, is rejoicing over a decision handed down yesterday in the Supreme Court of Massachusetts. In that commonwealth, there has been much controversy over the use of the patent voting device, and the upshot of the whole discussion resulted in proceedings being brought to question the constitutionality of the machine. The rescript signed by a majority of the judges makes the decision apply not only to the particular case but to the entire State. In a nutshell, the lengthy opinion sets forth that any method of voting which hides the ballot from the voter is unconstitutional.

HOSPITAL TAX AGITATION.

Such representative citizens as A. H. Atterbury, Charles A. Reed, L. V. F. Randolph, James F. Buckle, Edward Pearson, William M. Stillman, Samuel Huntington and Isaac L. Miller have given their views through the columns of this paper, on the proposition to levy a tax for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital. The discussion has been an exceedingly interesting one, and as the voters will decide the question next Tuesday, The Daily Press will be glad to hear from others, pro and con, before that time.

To Address the Mothers.

Mrs. Edward C. Grice, secretary of the National Congress of Mothers, will speak before the Plainfield Mothers' Association this afternoon in the city high school auditorium. This is one of the regular meetings of the association and the lecture will be at 3:30 o'clock. The topic is to be "Parents' Association with the Schools."

RUSHED HIM TO PRISON

White Girl's Negro Assailant Convicted, Begins 20-Year Term, All in a Day.

COURT FEARS MASKERS

Brute Beat Young Woman in Fiendish Assault—Fear of Mob Violence.

James Battle, the colored man arrested Tuesday night for assaulting Miss Mary Sherlock, in Morristown, confessed the crime to Chief of Police Holloway, of that place, yesterday, and was taken before Judge Alfred E. Mills, who sentenced him to twenty years in State prison. Sentence was passed upon him just before 6 o'clock, and at 8 o'clock sheriff George Shaw was on his way to Trenton with his prisoner, going across country in an automobile driven by Willis Dutton.

The reason for the sheriff's haste in getting his prisoner safe within the walls of the State prison is because an ugly feeling has developed here because of Battle's brutality, the manner in which Miss Sherlock was beaten about the face and body alone being sufficient to arouse the anger of men to frenzy.

It was feared that during the Hallowe'en celebration, last night, when hundreds of masked men paraded the streets, a rush might be made upon the jail and the negro lynched.

There was a report at Morristown that a party of 300 men was organized to take Battle out of the county jail last night if he had still been there. The girl says that Battle held a razor over her and threatened to cut her throat, besides choking and beating her into insensibility.

Battle confessed only when shown absolutely conclusive evidences of his guilt. Much of this evidence was furnished by his wife who, among other things, identified a medal worn by him which the policee found in the barn where the struggle occurred.

When asked by Judge Mills if he had anything to say in his own behalf, Battle made a stammering acknowledgment that he had been bad and promised, if released, to always be good. After this he received the full term of imprisonment for his crime.

FORT IN A CONSPIRACY

and picnics, with plenty to eat, but nothing to drink, so the boys will be nice and sober?"

And this bit of wisdom:

"There is no doubt that the really desperate advocates of the bishops' law are only a comparatively small minority of the voters of this State."

"For those who do not wish to be treated like babies, or become mean sneaks, cowards and habitual lawbreakers, the point is to get out the full vote, and be dead sure whom the vote for."

The chapter concludes by repeating the assertion that "this Sunday law" is only the first step in the effort to make New Jersey a Prohibition State, and therefore "the friends of liberty would better be up and doing now and all the time."

The chapter following casts some ridicule at Governor Stokes and indirectly attacks that clause of the bishops' bill which prohobits the "back room." The writer takes no open stand on this question, for obvious reasons. He concludes by asserting that he is in sympathy with that portion of the bill which prohibits the selling of liquor to children, but says:

"Certainly not all minors are children. The law ought to read children that go to school, common or high, or to corresponding private institutions."

In the remaining chapters much the same sentiments are repated, an attack is made on the "yellow press" which uphold the bishops' bill, and effort is made to show that beer is beneficial, another onslaught is made on the bishops' bill and the clergy, all making entirely too lengthy an essay to reprint here. One half of the mook is given over to a German translation of all this.

No License, Fined $2.

Abraham Litwak was arrested on Somerset street by Chief Marshal Weiss yesterday for peddling without a license. He was going from house to house with a stock of dress goods. At the session of court last night Borough Recorder Dolliver ned him $2. The man left town for New York, where he said he lived.

CALLS HOSPITAL TAX WRONG IN PRINCIPLE

The following communication bearing on the proposition to levy a tax for the support of Muhlenberg Hospital is contributed by Isaac L. Miller, a lawyer and a property-owner:

Editor, The Daily Press:

As one greatly interested in, and an annual contributor to the Muhlenberg Hospital, I beg to join with Mr. Atterbury and Judge Stillman, in protesting against the proposition to be voted on next Tuesday.

Aside from the very grave question of the constitutionality of the act pursuant to which the proposition is to be submitted to the electors and which if adopted will probably involve the city inexpensive litigation, the project appears to me to be of doubtful expediency and wrong in principle.

In addition to the suggestion of Judge Stillman, that if the money needed is raised by taxation, the voluntary contributions will probably be lessened, is the further consideration, that the knowledge that the municipality is behind the institution will almost inevitably (and here I speak with great respect to my friends the Governors) lead to undue extravagance in the management.

The assumption by our city even to a limited extent of the support of an institution no matter how worthy, seems to me to be incorrect in theory.

As Grover Cleveland well said, "While it is the duty of the citizen to support the government it by no means follows that it is the duty of the government to support the citizens," and this remark is just as true when apply to an institution as to an individual.

ISAAC L. MILLER.

HALLOWE'EN CELEBRATION

the affair a happy one. Refreshments were served and the festivities closed with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne." The party was arranged by Mr. and Mrs. William Doig and Mr. and Mrs. R. Baillie.

The borough police took special precaution to prevent any too enthusiastic prankers from disturbing the peace, and special officers John Johnson, Richard McDonald and John Reiman were on duty last night. There were no arrests of the merrymakers and no damage has been reported.

A bunch of young fellows had fun with Jerry O'Connor, who owns a blacksmith shop on Chatham street and caused a lot of trouble for him when he went to work this morning. They visited the shop last night, plugged up the chimney and nailed the door shut, moving the heavy street roller against the door as an additional trouble maker. When the blacksmith arrived this morning, he had a lot of work to get in the shop, and when he started the fire, the plugged chimney caused the place to fill with smoke, temporarily arousing the fire of Jerry's wrath. He had lot of trouble cleaning out the flue that the smoke could pass off.

An Annual Ball.

At Saengerbund hall, the "Him, Her and I Social Club" got together for their first annual ball. There were about eighty couples on the floor and the dancing was continued until late. A two dollar and a half gold piece was awarded as prize to the best costumed man and woman on the floor, and there was a big variety of costumes, several of them very elaborate. The committee had a scheme whereby they planned to serve liquid refreshments of a cheering nature, but Chief Marshal Weiss put a stop to the game before a single bottle had been opened. The chairman of the affair was John Lamaire, and Clinton Conover, "Garry" Sheppard, William Davy and Claude Hand served with him on the committee. The music was by Suhr's Imperial orchestra.

Miss Martin's Party.

Throughout the residential section of the borough, merrymakers gathered within doors for the quieter forms of the season's festivities. Sounds of music and singing came from many of the houses, and over on Watchung avenue, where a bunch of Rutgers College students were being entertained, the "Rah, Rah boys" kept things lively till a late hour. Miss Hazel Martin, of Duer street, entertained a party of about twenty-five young people at her home. The evening was passed in playing progressive hearts. Of the women, Miss Mazie Gray took first prize and Miss Snyder the booby prize, Messrs. Gray and Kirch carried off the maximum and minimum honors among the men.

Greenbrook's Celebration.

At the home of J. W. Beetham, of Greenbrook, about fifty guests spent the evening dancing in masquerade costume. The house was handsomely decorated with chrysanthemums by Anthony Zorlinezk and there was a big delegation from the J. Franklin Fort Club present. Charles P. Sebring, president from the organization, made a "ringing speech" on the bishops' bill, which was received with "sustained applause." The merrymaking lasted till a late hour, a collation being served at midnight.

At Joseph's Randall's.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Randall, of Brook avenue, entertained a party of friends, last night, including about a dozen young women from the Woodhull & Martin Company. The evening was given up to Hallowe'en festivities after which refreshments were served.

Miss Alice Peacock, of Westervelt avenue, was tendered a Hallowe'en surprise by thirty of her young friends. The affair was arranged by Miss Helen Berkhan and Miss Helen Roberts and the self-invited guests arrived in costume befitting the occasion. During the evening vocal nd instrumental music was enjoyed and Hallowe'en games were played, among them ducking for apples, spin-the-plate and chase-the-goose. Refreshments were served in conclusion.

Forty Merrymakers.

A Hallowe'en party was held last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Wilson, of East Fourth street. The company numbered forty in all. Each member was masqueraded, and marched down town to the strains of many musical instruments. The notes of Bonnie Dundee were rendered by a coon cornet-player, before entering the house. Dances and songs followed, accompanied by a miniature orchestra of the instruments, cornet, violin and piano.

Odd Fellows Hold a Smoker.

Under the auspices of Queen City Lodge, No. 226, Independent Order Odd Fellows, a smoker and informal entertainment was enjoyed Wednesday night. The affair was largely attended by the members. Past Grand A. G. Barber was chairman of the committee in charge, and he made a short address in opening the program. There were selections by the Queen City Orchestra, vocal solos by Messrs. Staats, Patterson and Gray, Wilson, Manson, Mixener and Eedger. Cigars were generously distributed and the social features greatly enjoyed.

THE MILLIONAIRE AND THE MOTOR CAR.

There was a man who saved and saved
And got a little cash,
Aand soon among the bulls and bears
Of Wall street cut a dash,
By buying here with foresight wise,
And shrewedly selling there,
He woke one morning bright to find Himself a millionaire.

He bought a costly motor-car
His wealth to celebrate,
The merry tooting of its horn
Re-echoed long and late.
"Oh, this is life," he gayly cried,
"Oh, this is something like,"
As daily in the big machine
He whizzed along the pike.

But what with tires exploding fast
And fines in every town,
Repairs and gasoline, his gold
Like snokflakes melted down,
And now upon a trolley car
Each day he rides to work,
And draws his modest ten per week,
Once more an humble clerk.
—Minna Irving in The Bohemian for October.

TO CLEAN LIGHT FELT HATS.

Felt hats of light color may be cleaned with block magnesia, fuller's earth or laundry starch; always remember to rub and brush with the nap.

Dust or finger marks may be removed from light colored woolen goods by rubbing (with the nap) with bread. If the marks are obstinate, sprinkle a little salt on them, then rub with the bread.

Laces may be dyed to match material of any color by using a reliable dye and following carefully the directions supplied with it.

Feathers may be freshened by shaking them over the fire, on which a little salt has been thrown; this fluffs them out and makes the ends curl under. If more curl is desired, the filaments should be drawn over a dull knife blade.

Feathers may also be washed or dyed by the exercise of a little care and patience.

Velvet that is wrinkled or crushed may be restored by steaming, or may be made in to "mirrowed" velvet by ironing with a moderately warm iron, on the right side and in the direction of the pile or nap.

LADYLIKE GEOMETRY.

Figures of the same shape don't always have the same style.

Figures of the same size never consider themselves equivalent.

A straight line is the shortest distance between two millinery openings.

A plain figure is one all points of which have been neglected by the dressmaker.

A mixed line is a line composing the reception committee of a club's presidential candidate.

A broken line is a series of successive straight lines described by a woman alighting from a street car.

A straight line determined by two bargain tables is considered as prolonged both ways until the store closes.

Women equal to the same thing are not always equal to each other.
—Nellie Parker Jones in Chicago Record-Herald.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS.

In assorting clothes for washing, use cold water for stains such as perspiration. Stains that are from fruit or coffee must be treated with boiling water. Hours of rubbing will be saved by following these simple precautions.

Laundry irons often become rough from bits of starch baking on the edges. The very best way to keep them smooth and clean is to wash them thoroughly in soap suds. Be sure that they are well dried, or rust will gather.

The more the feet are bathed and rubbed the better their condition, and there is less tendency to enlarge. Rubbing the soles of the feet with a cut lemon will freshen and ease them when fatigued.

A spoonful of mustard in a gallon of water or a good drenching with lime water will kill insects in the earth of potted plants.

A Long Swim.

A tramp has beaten all known records by swimming twenty-seven miles in thirty minutes. He did not mean to do it. He merely tried to steal a ride from St. Louis to Chicago on the rear of a locomotive tender. When the train started he fell over backward through the open manhole into the water tank. The noise of the train drowned his cries for help, and he was obliged to swim until the first stop was reached at Alton. When taken out he was nearly dead, but the engineer was so unfeeling as to call his attention to the fact that the water was only four feet deep, and he might have stood up. The conductor, also unfeeling, asked him for his ticket, but the tramp said he had not come by rail, but by water.

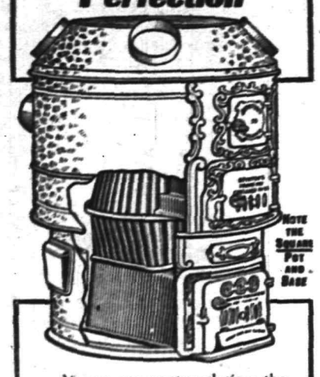
The Boynton Square Pot Brings Furnace Perfection



If you are contemplating the installation of furnace equipment, stop right here and see what big advantages await you in the patent Square Fire Pot found only in the Boynton Furnaces.

The sides are nearly perpendicular, so that ashes can't collect and hinder heat radiation; the grate bars operate with uniform motion under the whole fire bed, making ash clearance quick and complete.

The perfect combustion resulting gives you maximum of heat from minimum of fuel, with least trouble on your part. Large, deep, square ash pit—easiest to clean, best draught.

All plumbers, steam-fitters and tinsmiths sell Boyntons, the only furnace with the Square Pot. Inquire about them.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for steam or hot water. Also ranges.

ONLY NECESSARY TO TREAT THE STOMACH

The new theory advanced by L. T. Cooper relative to the human stomach has attracted such widespread attention that the public in cities visited by the young man has been joined by many physicians in a discussion of his beliefs and medicines.

Mr. Cooper says that human health is dependent almost entirely upon the stomach. He says that no disease can be conquered without first alleviating all stomach disorders. He further says that most men and women of this generation are half-sick, owing to degenerate stomachs. And lastly, he claims that his New Discovery medicine will rejuvenate the human stomach in 90 days.

Cooper has been traveling from one city to another, conducting in each what he calls a campaign of education. For the past year he has met the public in the larger cities of the country, and his success has been phenomenal. Thousands of people have flocked to his headquarters wherever he has gone, and the sale of his medicine has been beyond anything of the kind ever before witnessed.

Possibly the most interesting feature of the attention this young man has attracted is what his army of followers, whom he has converted to his beliefs through his medicines, have to say on the subject. The following statements are from two well known residents of Chicago and Boston, respectively, and the enthusiasm of these is characteristic of Cooper's admirers generally.

Mrs. H. B. Mack, of 3201 State street, Chicago, says: "I have been suffering for 12 years from a combination of stomach troubles, catarrh and constipation. I had a gnawing pain in the pit of my stomach, a sort of a dull pain that I could not quite understand. Then there was a dull headache, and my mind seemed to be wandering continually. I could not eat, and what little solid food I did eat I could not retain on my stomach. I tried every remedy I could think of, and also tried out a number of patent medicines, but without any apparent result. It was through one of my friends that I heard of Cooper's preparation, and I immediately decided to try some of it. It is two weeks since I took my first dose of it, and I feel like a new woman. The headache seems to have disappeared, and the pain in my stomach along with it. The medicine is worth its weight in gold, and I want to thank Mr. Cooper for what he has done for me."

Mr. Edwin F. Morse, of 20 Oakley street, Dorchester, a suburb of Boston, says: "For three years I had not a well day. My stomach was in frightful shape; the mere thought of food would nauseate me, and I really had a horror of anything to eat. All solid food would cause me extreme indigestion, bloating and gas on my stomach, and nothing tasted right. Some time ago I got some of this Cooper's medicines, about which there is so much talk. I actually feel as well and strong as a boy ever since the first bottle. Every sign of stomach trouble has disappeared, and I have a hearty appetite and eat three square meals; every thing seems to taste good. Anyone who knows what chronic indigestion is can appreciate what this means to me. I consider this the most remarkable medicine I ever heard of."

We sell Mr. Cooper's medicines, and find them to be all he claims.

I PRITHEE SEND ME BACK MY HEART.

I prithee send me back my heart
Since I cannot have thine,
For, if from yours you will not part,
Why, then, shouldst thou have mine?

Yet, now I think on't, let it lie;
To find it were in vain,
For thou'st a thief in either eye
Would steal it back again.

Why should two hearts in one breast lie
And yet not lodge together?
O Love, where is thy sympathy
If thus our breasts thou sever?

But love is such a mystery
I cannot find it out,
For when I think I'm best resolved
I am the mast in doubt.

Then farewell care, and farewell woe!
I will not longer pine,
For I'll believe I have her heart
As much as she has mine.

Where Polly Beats Wisdom.

Dr. Emil Reich, the famous lecturer and historian, was once discussing marriage at a dinner in New York.

"That was a wise saying of the old Greek philosopher," murmured an electrician, "'Whether you marry or not, you will regret it.'"

"I knew an old maid in my native Eperjes," said Dr. Reich, "who once got off a saying almost as good as the immortal Greek one.

"'Auntie,' said her little niece to her, 'what would you do if you had your life to live over again?'

"The lonely spinster with a sour smile answered:

"'Get married before I had sense enough to decide to be an old maid.'"

The Origin of Single Combat.

Just where and when the first affaire de-honneur took place is not known and obviously cannot ever be known. Homer makes frequent reference to single combat, and the story of David and Goliath is only added Biblicl testimony that dues were known to the early Hebrews and other ancient Asiatics, as they were known to the Arabs at the time of Mohammed. Ie remained, however, for the barbarians who overran the Roman empire to apply the first touch of poetry to what had previously been mere brutal conflicts, for they conceived the idea that a wager of battle was an appeal to the decision of the gods and that success was a proof of right.—Louis J. Meader in Century.

The First Rose.

According to a very ancient legend, the first rose appeared upon the earth at Gulistran. The lotus had long reigned alone, but the flowers became dissatisfied because their drowsy queen could only keep awake by day. They wished for one who would be as fair in revels under the moon as in the garish day. It was then the rose appeared and was chosen the queen of flowers. She sprang into being at the song of the nightingale and was purest white until colored with the blood from the nightingale's breast. As earth's sweetest singers are those who have felt the thorn, so, it is said, the nightingale sings his exquisite music to the rose with his breast upon a thorn.—Circle.

Doubtful Compliments.

The compliments paid by the poor are often put in an amusing way. One old woman who was very fond of the rector said to Mr. Bernays, "You know, sir, us likes the rector; 'is ears are so clean;" surely an add reason for parochial acection. Another admirer once declared with regard to the whole staff of clergy, "You are all so plain"—a word of high commendation—"but as for the vicar, 'e's beautiful." The greatest compliment, though at the same time the most curious, Mr. Bernays ever heard was paid by a workingman to a certain bishop, famous for his simple kindliness, "What I likes 'bout the bishop is 'e's not a gentleman."
—Westminster Gazette.

Banana Eating Contest.

A banana eating contest is being arranged between "Senator" Jim Walker, of Owensville, Ind., and Melvin Smith, of Petersburg, says an Owensville dispatch to the New York Sun. A few days ago Smith ate forty-eight bananas in two hours. Immediately following he ate two pounds of bolongna and one pound of crackers without water. He was ill for several days, but finally pulled through and is now willing to compete with Walker in a banana eating contest.

Strange Bequests.

In his will Stephen Swain, of the parish of St. Olave, Southwark, gave to John Abbott and Mary, his wife, sixpence each "to buy for each of them a halter for fear the sheriffs should not be provided," and John Aylett Stow left the sum of 5 guineas for the purchase of the picture of a viper biting the hand of his rescuer to be presented to an eminent K. C. as a reminder of "his ingratitude and insolence."—Grand Magazine.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"A Millionaire's Revenge" will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tonight. The drama is by Hal Reid, and founded on the late Scene in "A Millionaire's Revenge," at New Plainfield Theatre Tonight.

New York Madison Square Roof Garden tragedy. The organization is directed by the Mittenthal Brothers, and is a very pretentious production.

Those who remember James

James O'Neill in "Virginius" at the New Plainfield Theatre Saturday, matinee and night.

O'Neill as leading man in prominent stock companies both in the East and West, also with Edwin Forrest, Edwin Booth, Barry Sullivan, Charlotte Cushman and Adelaide Neilsen, some twenty-five years ago, and his fine interpretation of Shakespearian and other classical roles, have often expressed a desire once more to see his "Virginius" with the added finis of the experience and study of intervening years. All must recognize in his rare elocutionary powers, magnetic personality and intellectual reading, gifts which fit him pre-eminently for the part of the heroic Roman father so beautifully drawn by Sheridan Knowles. Mr. O'Neill has been appearing during a run at the Lyric theatre, New York, to large and enthusiastic audiences who are demonstrative at each performance in showing their admiration for this sterling actor of recognized ability and genius. Mr. O'Neill has been secured to appear at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night.

"Monte Cristo" will be presented at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night by Joseph King's excellent company. The American public today finds greatest delight in the drama that has a big human note, that deals with elemental passions and sorrows, and that tells a gripping vital story. It is a rare relish. You know "Monte Cristo" contains these elements. How often have you said, "I would like to see it played by a good company."

The musical comedy has proven so successful during recent years that many plays here-to-fore successful as plays, have added the charms of music to the entertainment of the drama. Among the more noteworthy is "The Girl in the Barracks" in which Louis Mann, the famous German dialect star, appeared with Clara Lipman, a couple of seasons ago. This play spicy in its humor and beautiful in its scenic environment, has been made a musical farce, and the tuneful songs, beautiful gowns of the ladies and dashing uniforms of the actors, help to make it attractive to the ear and eye. The piece will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre next Wednesday night. In support of Mr. Standish and Miss Beaugarde, Allan E. Reid, who presents this clever musical farce, has engaged the following cast of well-known players: Cora Belle Greene, Virginia Ackerman, Louise Meyers, Frances Francis, Gladys Greene, Mae Hubbard, Wm. H. Woodside, Robert Strauss, Charles N. Kinsley, Gooffrey H. Heath, Louis Fitz Roy, Arthur Kelly, Wm. S. Davis and Edward Swift.

The favorite actress, Miss Mamie Fleming, will appear in this city next Tuesday afternoon and night at the New Plainfield theatre, when she will be seen in a new and up-to-date Western melodrama, "Girl of Eagle Ranch," and an excellent cast surrounds her. The press in all the cities visited proclaim it the best melodrama in which she has so far appeared. The patrons at the local theatre are assured of a delightful and thrilling performance during Miss Fleming's engagement. High class vaudeville will be introduced.

THE MAIN CAUSE OF BALDNESS.

Commencing at the top of the human body, we find the hat. Now, a woman's hat, while ridiculous enough, with its stuffed birds and silly artificial flowers and so on—the woman's hat is far less unwholesome than the man's. The reason for this is that the woman's hat is generally affixed to her coiffure by means of long hat pins, and does not, therefore, make any pressure upon the scalp.

The man's hat, however, is a tight box, cylindrical or rounded, the lower edge of which fits tightly upon the scalp. The pressure of this tight band around the head causes a closure of the vessels which conduct blood for the sustenance of the hair at the top of the head. This means starvation of the hair follicles and consequent baldness.

It must be understood that the hair grows very much like an onion—that the stalk arises bfor a bulb and that the bulb derives its nourishment from the blood which is brought to it by the blood tubes. Now, when, through the pressure of a tight hat band, the flow of blood is cut off from the hair follicles ors bulbs, the follicles themselves are starved, the hair loses its tone and drops out; that is to say, the hair is merely starved for lack of food.

There are several causes of baldness, but the most common and far-reaching is the wearing of hats.—Health Culture.

How Plants Travel.

The dandelion, with its parachute, has gone with Peary within the arctic circle and has also made its appearance in the southern hemisphere. The rose of Jericho curls up in a ball, with the seed inside and the wind rolls it over the deserts of Syria and Egypt. The seed pods of the furze and broom are like little guns. In August and September you may hear them crack, crack, as they burst, scattering the seeds like bullets. The cranesbill, or wild geranium, has its seeds arranged so that five arms are thrown out like a sling, throwing the seeds with considerable force. The mangrove grows in salt water swamps and shallow sea water. The plants require to be rooted in the mud.

"Marty" Gets a Winter Job.

"Marty" O'Loughlin returned yesterday from Brookline, Mass., where he took part in the Eastern Professional Golfers' Association tournament. He did not get a place because several things combined to upset him in his game. The first day he played in a hard storm and not being wholly familiar with the course he failed to make as good a showing as he expected. On January 1, "Marty" will leave for Pinehurst, N. C., where he has accepted an excellent position for the winter as professional at the Southern Pines Golf Club. While south he will have an opportunity to compete with many of the crack professionals, including Donald Ross and Alec Smith.

No Long Green; Long Pink Now.

The American Bankers' Association while in session at Atlantic City, N. J., adopted a resolution requesting the secretary of the treasury to have bills of different denominations printed on paper or different colors, says the New York Journal. The idea is that a bank teller's desk can be more readily handled by reason of the ease with which bills can be piled up according to their color. The colors decided on for the different denominations are: Slate, $1; brown, $2; green, $5; blue, $10; yellow, $20; pink, $50; white, $100, and over.

To Relieve the Dogs.

The medical department of Cornell University, which is located in New York city, in a handsome building erected by the generosity of Col. Oliver H. Payne, has decided to turn its attention to the cure of distemper in dogs, a disease which the college authorities declare has been too long overlooked in the scientific pursuit of others matters. An expert is to be engaged under the direction of three eminent medical men, and he will begin a thorough pursuit of the causes of the disease and the discovery of a remedy.

The Parrot Tongue.

A little girl had been in the habit for a long time of saying a prayer very morning in which were the two lines:

All through the day, I humbly pray,
Be thou my guard and guide.

One day when she had finished she electrified her aunt by saying:

"Aunt Emma, that is the most foolish prayer I ever heard. What do I want with a garden guide?"

Silks and ribbons should be also steamed and stretched between the hands.

If a drop light gas pipe leaks you you need not buy a new one, but wind securely with electric tape.

LOTUS GLEE CLUB CONCERT AT GRACE M. E. CHURCH

An unusually appreciative audience heard the Lotus Glee Club quartet at the Grace M. E. church, last night, when the first of the series of the three special entertainments of the winter was given in the church auditorium. About two hundred parishioners were out, and the numbers of the program were well received and excellently rendered. "The Grasshopper," the last number on the program, was a comic selection especially well received. The program follows:

"Hungaria's Hussars," (Herbert), Lotus Glee Club; "A Song of Thanksgiving," (Allitsen), Harvey Hindermyer; "The Three Fishers," (Goldbeck), Lotus Glee Club; "Three for Jack," (Fox), Charles L. Lewis; "Alcala," (Murray), Lotus Glee Club; "The Rosy Morn," (Stuart), G. Morgan Stricklett; quartette, (selected), Lotus Glee Club; "The Bandalero," (Stuart), George Bemus; "The Grasshopper," (Ingram), Lotus Glee Club.

Rev. C. W. Parsons, pastor of the church, and Dr. H. K. Carroll were the committee in charge of the entertainment. The next affair will be December 5, when there will be a grand concert, with a program of vocal and instrumental selections and readings by New York talent.

8 MONTHS OLD BABY WEIGHS 110 POUNDS

A dispatch to The Chicago Tribune from Parkersburg, W. Va., says:

A remarkable freak of nature is the infant son of W. H. Banes, an employe of a factory at Matoeka. The babe, which is named William Edward Banes, is only eight months old and weighs 110 pounds.

The babe at birth was of normal weight, but has increased steadily in weight, until it is now a prodigy, and weighs almost as much as its mother.

The smallest child in Gloucester county, New Jersey, is the one which the stork left with Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cox, of Westville, Tuesday. It weighs two and one-half pounds, bpt is in apparently good health.

Calls a "What-Is-It" a "Pudamuck."

Two men from Bloomfield, William D. Hart and Theodore Harvey, Jr., captured a "what-is-it" while driving along Park street in Upper Montclair yesterday. The creature is about ten inches long, with a head like a turtle. Its mouth resembles that of a fish, and it has bulging eyes. It has four legs, and its body is somewhat similar to that of an alligator. Hart, who makes some pretensions as a naturalist, declares that the creature is a "pudamuck."

G. O. P. CLAIM STATE FOR FORT BY 21,450

The Republican State Committee met in Newark yesterday afternoon and heard reports from the various counties as to the political outlook in the several districts. Based on the reports of the committeeman from each of the twenty-one counties in the State, the committee arrived at an estimate on the plurality which it declares John Franklin Fort, the nominee for Governor, will have over Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., his Democratic opponent. It was said that Mr. Fort's plurality will be at least 21,450 votes. The estimate follows:

OBITUARY.

Peter Bowers.

Peter Bowers, for many years one of the best known farmers in Somerset county, died this morning at his home on Fritz place, to which he moved from Warrenville a short time ago. Acute indigestion was the cause. Mr. Bowers was born in Germany eighty-two years ago and came to this country with his brothers, Rev. Nicholas Bowers and Rev. George Bowers, when a young man. They located near Coontown and remained their for many years. Peter Bowers afterward moved to Warrenville and continued farming until his retirement, since which he has lived in the borough. He was a member of the Warren Township Committee for ten years and was active in all the affairs of the county. He leaves three sons and three daughters, one of the latter being Mrs. Edward E. Cooper, wife of Somerset county's sheriff.

DEAD PET BURIED IN A SILK-LINED COFFIN

COUPLE BECAME VERY FOND OF ANIMAL THAT HAD STRAYED TO THEM.

St. Louis.—Undeterred by the presence of some friends gathered, it is to be assumed through motives of curiosity, aged Mrs. Isabella Fettig did not attempt to restrain a flood of tears as she stood in her parlor on Hebert street, beside the silk and plush-lined coffin that contained the body of her pet dog Gypsy.

Half an hour later the sealed casket was interred somewhere in St. Louis county by Undertaker Charles Kron, who had specially made the coffin.

It had been Mrs. Fettig's desire to bury the pet in her back yard alongside the body of a dog named Nellie, who had been buried with special services three years ago, but the police and health authorities refused permission, and the undertaker agreed to see that Gypsy was given a formal, decent burial in the county.

With this assurance Mrs. Fettig permitted the body to be taken away, but first exacted a promise from the undertaker that he would not cast the dog into the river or leave it on the roadside, where it would be reached by despoilers.

When Gypsy died sympathetic boys, at the request of the aged mourner, sat up all night with the body.

Mrs. Fettig lives alone with her husband. They have never had any children, but the wife has always manifested a fondness for pets.

After the death of Nellie, buried three years ago, the household had been without a dog until the first of the year, when Gypsy strayed into the yard. From that day until its death the dog had as much attention as a child.

SAYS LASH WOULD REFORM.

Akron's Mayor Advocates Whipping Post for Wife-Beaters.

Akron, O.—Mayor Charles W. Kempel is in favor of the whipping post for wife-beaters and men who neglect their families.

"I believe," he said, "that a good flogging would do a world more good than imprisonment for men who seem to take pleasure in beating their wives. If I send them to the workhouse or give them heavy fines they soon forget. When they return from prison they often go back to their old tricks. But when a man gets a good, wholesome flogging, he never forgets it.

"I have had many cases in my court in which I willingly would have sentenced men to be flogged and felt like laying on a few lashes myself."

The statement was inspired by the case of Fred Smith, who beat his wife until her eyes were blackened and her face swollen because she permitted one of the children to drink a bottle of milk. He is now in the workhouse and the city will have to provide for his family for nearly a year.

"In cases like this," said the mayor, "I think the legislature should pass a law providing that a prisoner with a family sentenced to the workhouse should be allowed wages there, and these wages turned over to the wife and family during the term of imprisonment.

Big Catfish Drowns a Negro.

Gulfport, Miss.—While a negro fisherman was rolling a cigarette he tied his line about his neck. The next moment a great catfish swallowed the bait. For several minutes a battle royal waged, then the catfish sprang high into the air, leaped away and pulled the unfortunate man after him. The onlookers were terrified to see the fish start straight for the sea, with the body of the negro in tow. A boat was put out after him, but the crafty fish soon left the surface, so the search proved fruitless. The negro surely was drowned.

Woman Puts Rattler in Bosom.

Centralia, Pa.—At the bottom of a basket of huckleberries sold by Anna Riscavage, a Bohemian, was a large rattlesnake. The woman picked it up and put it in the bosom of her dress. She said she had extracted its fangs.

FURRY NIGHTMARE TIPPLING "MONK"

HOW GOTHAM ALDERMAN'S GRAY PET, SMILING TEDDY, MURDERS A FAMILY'S SLEEP.

PICNIC HIGHBALLS TOO STRONG

Abraham Fenichel and His Seven Children Innocent Victims of Simian Spree—Dishes and Furniture Broken.

New York.—Politics and highballs were the undoing of "Smiling Teddy," a gray monkey owned by Alderman Frank Datzler, which returned at night after a two days' carouse that began at a picnic of the Frank Datzler association at Point View Grove.

In the course of his debauch "Smiling Teddy" nearly frightened to death the family of Abraham Fenichel of 7 Manhattan street, and did succeed in breaking much of the Fenichel crockery in a midnight raid he made on the apartment.

In company with his trainer, "Boston" George, the monkey spends much of his time in the saloon of Frank Conlon, in Houston street, where the Datzler political clansmen foregather. "Red Nose Henry" and others of his friends taught "Smiling Teddy" to drink highballs and beer, and when a treat goes round the monkey is always at the bar clamoring for his.

When the Frank Datzler association went by special steamboat to Point View Grove for its annual outing the gray monkey went too. On that day he had his fill of highballs, and when he returned to the Conlon saloon at night he was hilariously intoxicated. His keeper forgot to chain him to the ice box, and so, while his political colleagues were discussing matters of statecraft, Teddy slipped into a back room and out through a window into the night.

Abraham Fenichel and his seven children slept soundly. A little after midnight Abraham was awakened by some furry thing pulling his ear. Grumbling, he turned over, thinking it was a nightmare, but a bite on his neck and the tinkle of a bell aroused him to full consciousness, and he sprang up in bed with a shriek that awakened the seven sleepers—his children.

Violently he struck about him, shouting and praying by turns, but the furry thing had vanished from his bed. Next there came a scream from the bed of Yetta, Abraham Fenichel's seven-year-old daughter.

"Help, papa, help!" she cried; "I am bit."

Teddy had crawled into Yetta's bed to escape the tumult, but leaped out again when she became violent, and, losing his bearings, perhaps still feeling the giddiness brought on by his potations, ran at random through the small flat. The tinkle of a small bell attached to his collar enabled the members of the Fenichel family, now all awake and screaming, to follow the movements.

By this time it was morning and no lights could be turned. Dishes and furniture were being broken in the frenzied rush about the flat when some of the neighbors came with lights. When his trainer tried to get him the Fenichel family declared it would hold him hostage until the damage he had done was paid for.

"Boston" George, promising payment from Alderman Datzler, finally gained possession of the monkey and carried him back to Conlon's saloon, where Teddy again drank highballs.

French Nobles Duel in Paris.

Paris.—Count de Rozan and Marquis de Sardelys fought a duel in the Bois de Boulogne, as the result of a private quarrel. After exchanging two shots with pistols, without effect, the duel was resumed with swords and the count sustained a wound in the right arm, which caused the seconds to separate the combatants. The wound is not serious.

Baby Born on Trolley Car.

Easton, Pa.—Mrs. Sarah Riegel, a passenger on a trolley car, gave birth to a daughter. The car was switched off its run and hurried to the Easton hospital, where Mrs. Riegel and the youngster are now doing very well.

A Bit of Life

By HELEN J. CLELAND

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Trinity church is ablaze with lights. The chancel is fragrant with the perfume of rare exotics. The rustle of silken gowns is heard as guests pass up the aisle. Voices are hushed and anxious looks toward the western door show the eagerness with which they await the coming of the bridal party.

One by one the carriages roll up, deposit their fair burdens and pass down the other side of the street. Outside the thick flashes of snow come down soft and fast.

A sudden little gust of wind blows a miniature avalanche around a corner, and for a moment almost blinds a swiftly passing pedestrian, who suffers accordingly from the unexpected assault by bringing his umbrella in direct collision with that of some one coming towards him.

Both hurriedly look up, and both simultaneously grasp hands and exclaim: "My dear boy!"

"'Pon my word, Geoff, where did you drop from?" gasps the younger man. "Odd thing, that, d'ye know. Bob Lathrop and I were speaking of you this morning at the club; wondered if one of your royal Bengals had taken a notion to swallow you whole. Bob said: 'No. Trust Geoff for that; nothing so tame for him. Plucky man, Geoff!' Bob suggested some East Indian beauty and all that sort of thing; might be, you had said 'good by' to the land of your forefathers forever. But now old man, we have you with us again. Welcome back! Tell you, I'm delighted!"

The serious gray eyes of Geoffry Thorne had reflected many lights during his friend's speech. At the mention of falling in love, they had saddened perceptibly, but had relighted as if with some sudden thought and turning to the other, he answered:

"No, Jack, it was not that. Fighting tigers is not half bad, and there are pretty girls all the world over, but to tell you the truth, three years is a long time to knock around and I've come to stay. The Etruria dropped anchor six hours ago and here I am tubbed, dressed and making for the club; pretty good time, eh?"

"Pretty good!" echoed Jack Lenox, absently. "By the way, Geoff, I was thinking instead of going to the club, suppose you take this card and drop into Trinity there; wedding going on—old friend, I believe, too—was going myself, but changed my mind. Good-by, old man! Meet you to-morrom at the Metropolitan!" and waving his hand, was off; saying to himself: "Odd thing, that—just happened to think—old flame of his, Marian Strong—wonder how he'll take it!"

Thorne glanced at the card carelessly. "Please present this at the church," stood irresolute a minute, and then turned toward the long line of carriages, saying: "Well, I might as well—can go to the club later and Jack says it is an old friend—wonder who?" and turning up his coat collar to the now icy wind, says softly to himself: "Three long years and now back again! Back to Marian!" How lovingly he dwells upon that name, dearer to him than all the world. "Marian! what will she say? Does she care? Who knows? Nothing but silence—all of my letters unanswered—nothing left me but this little ring that she took off her finger the night I said 'Good by!' and told me to trust her—and I have trusted. Can I wait until to-morrow, I wonder?"

His thoughts were brought to an abrupt close by the obnoxious umbrella coming in contact with an awning stretched from the doorway of the church to the street, under which he now passes and into the glare.

The bridal party are at the altar. From his seat near the door he hears the impressive Episcopal service being read, while the tender strain of de Koven's "O Promise Me" softly steals through the heavy perfumed air. Now the notes have changed to a more joyous tone: the triumphant song of Mendelssohn pealing forth from master fingers.

They have turned and are slowly passing down the aisle. Geoffrey begins to feel a bit bewildered. He says he cannot see distinctly, and yet, there is something strangely familiar—"Gad, this collar chokes me!" He turns nervously to loosen it.

They are nearing him. The bride seems pale; and is it not a forced smile rather than a natural one that lights the beautiful face? The look of bewilderment on Geoffrey's face has changed suddenly to one of horror and then to a misery that time will never heal. There is spreading over his face an ashy pallor that brings in prominence every line; determination, too, is written there.

"My God!" he mutters, "can it be Marian? Marian, darling, come back, come back!" he whispers feverishly and stretches out his arms.

Nothing but space answers him. The warden taps him on his shoulder. He looks hastily around and sees he is alone in the church. He steps out into the frosty air and looks around. Where is he? What has happened? Why is that heavy pain at his heart? and why does everything look so dreary? "Yes, yes," he sighs, "I remember it all." Then the look of determination comes back.

Hastily calling a cab, he jumps in and gives directions to the driver is soon among the long line of carriages drawn up in front of the handsome avenue home that he knows so well.

"I will see her! I will know from her own lips," he mutters as he alights and passes in among the guests. He reaches a quiet doorway where he can see and yet be unobserved. He takes a long breath. "Ah, how beautiful she is!" He sees the same clear cut features crowned by that same beautiful hair that he had once reverently touched; the pure white throat rises like chiseled marble from the gleam of her wedding gown. "Her wedding gown! The wife of another!" the thought maddens him. He cannot bear it. "Marian!" he groans and turns away. He will leave the house—it is only agony to stay—he will go away again—all is over—only memory left—that will never go! He reaches the door and then as if impelled by a will stronger than his own—enters the drawing-room.

She is receiving her congratulations with ease and grace always characteristic of Marian Strong, but today there is a restlessness, a tremor of excitement about her that she cannot conquer. Her eyes are nervously scanning the room; they look at every one who enters. She gives a sudden gasp. A look of terror spreads over her face and passing away, leaves her deathly white. Some one is approaching, and with a superhuman effort she controls herself.

"May I offer my congratulations, Mrs. Wyman?" a low, steady voice is saying, but she hears nothing. Faces around her have become indistinct. She thinks she hears music somewhere. Her hand is held out mechanically and touched. "Geoffrey, Geoffrey!" she cries faintly. It is stifling, and yet she is growing colder each minute.

"Such a surprise!" the voice is saying in well modulated tones. "I only returned from India this morning—met Jack Lawrence on the street; he told me an old friend was being married at Trinity and gave me his card—Such a surprise!" he repeated. "Couldn't believe my own eyes—had to come to the house to be convinced. You have my best wishes, Mrs. Wyman. I should like to see you again, but I sail to-morrow for England. I had expected to remain in New York, but my plans have been changed," and with a forced smile of adieu, he passes on and out in the cooling night.

The room grows suddenly dark to Miriam. The light has gone from her life forever.

"Mrs. Wyman is ill; the strain has been too much for her!" is whispered around. As the guests leave the room, some one says: "Beastly custom, anyway, standing two hours. Poor girls! I wonder there are not more cases of nervous prostration after these wedding receptions."

As Geoffrey boards the Kron Prinz the next morning, a note is handed him. It is only a little cream, crested affair, and reads thus:

"They told me you were dead; that you had been killed in a fight with natives. My letters were returned. Father urged me to marry Mr. Wyman, and at last I yielded. Oh Geoffrey! why did you come back too late?"

Jack Lawrence hears the news of Geoffrey's departure next morning at the club and twirls his mustache thoughtfully as he says to himself: "By Jove! there must have been something in that old affair after all. Jack, it wasn't quite fair in you! Poor old Geoff!" then calls for a brandy and soda.

NEW DODGE OF THIEVES.

Shrewd Scheme to Mulct Bride of Wedding Presents.

Lecoq, the detective, waved the reporters back.

"Madame," he said to Mrs. Van Astorbilt, "take my advice and don't have a list of your daughter's wedding presents printed."

But, regarding the blaze of diamonds, the pale sheen of pearls and the glitter of massed gold and silver on the long table, Mrs. Van Astorbilt said regretfully, rebelliously:

"Oh, why not, Mr. Lecoq?"

"Madame, I'll tell you," said the great detective; and he began in thrilling accents, while the reporters listened with an air of incredulity and displeasure:

"Madame, there is a new dodge out in the profesh. A crook gets a list of the presents at a fashionable wedding, and then forges a letter—say from Mr. Brown, whose gift was a rock crystal ewer—and old Brown says in this here letter that he is sorry to see the bride got two other crystal ewers, and he wishes her to return his to him by bearer, and he'll send her a rope of pearls in its place.

"Of course the bride complies. She sends away the ewer, she waits for the pearls, and days, weeks, go by. The pearls don't arrive, but, for fear of hurting Brown's feelings, the bride says nothing to him about his strange remissness, and thus the thief has plenty of chance to get off.

"Carefully worked, this dodge is almost bound to succeed, and lists of valuable presents like these here should on that account never be made public."

Value of After-Dinner Nap.

Complete relaxation after eating—a suspension of mental and physical activity—will favor the processes of natural digestion, not only because of its tranquilizing effect upon the nerves, but because the stomach may use the surplus unsued energies of the body in the processes of digestion. Happy the man or woman who can take an "after-dinner nap." It means health, happiness and long life.

BEFORE AND AFTER MARRIAGE.

The least neglect blights it. It cannot thrive on silence.

But the poor little wife has become used to being made much of, and misses it cruelly.

The man who imagines that after marriage his wife will be satisfied to take his love for granted does not know woman.

The thing to do is to think of that now and let no opportunity of assuring them of our love and appreciation pass by.

He can still say pretty things to other girls if the opportunity arises, so why leave out the girl who loves him best of all?

Sometimes, when it is too late, we feel we would give anything on earth to be able to tell our dear ones how much we loved them.

Then after marriage he, practical and unsentimental, would like to settle into a life of routine, where love is taken for granted.

Treat it with reverence and gentleness and it will tarry long, but neglect and treat it harshly and it will open its wings and fly away.

She would like her new gown to be praised, and when she tires herself out getting up a nice dinner she would like to know that her efforts are appreciated.

Not many of us have the happy knack of making pretty, loving speeches to the ones we love, and yet we all know how pleasant it is to hear them ourselves.

Before marriage he never wearies of reiterating his love. The woman lives in an atmosphere of petting and praise, an atmosphere that all human beings take very kindly to.

She does not expect that her husband should be always reassuring her of his undying devotion, of course, but she would like him to go back just once in a while to the dear old days of courting.

DYSPEPTIC PHILOSOPHY.

A friend is a man who never tells us his troubles.

A sweeping assertion must be the kind that throws dust in the other fellow's eyes.

An optimist is a man who believes in mascots; a pessimist is one who believes in hoodoos.

Why should a church mouse be considered so poor? He doesn't have to live on the collections.

The only reason a woman doesn't tell all she hears is because she has two ears and only one tongue.

Mr. Barnes, American

By Archibald Clavering Gunter

Author of Mr. Barnes of New York, Mr. Potter of Texas, That Frenchman, etc.

A Sequel to Mr. Barnes of New York

COPYRIGHT, 1907, DODD MEAD & CO. N.Y.

"At my cry of terror," continues Emory, "the dagger that was right over my breast was stayed, and one of them snarls: 'Diavolo, this isn't the accursed murderer, Barnes of New York.' Then they whispered some words to me that I don't care about repeating before the ladies and one of them held the knife over me and the other sneaked down towards you, but was too late. You had already got the girls into the boat, I reckon. He came back. They cursed me and let me go. But when they saw I was scooting down the wharf, they started after me, so I jumped into the water and made the boat. They are cursing themselves now, I guess, for letting me get away to warn you."

"Well, they'll hardly dare to follow us on board the yacht," smiles Barnes, for Edwin has hailed: "Sagull, ahoy!" to some vessel looming up in the fog.

"Aye, aye," comes the reply, and a moment later the naval officer has laid the boat alongside of the yacht, from which a side ladder has been put over.

"This is Andrew Graham, the mate," says Emory, as an alert young Scotchman assists the ladies to the deck.

"You want to get into dry clothes," remarks Burton. "We'll discuss this affair a little further after we have had dinner, which I imagine is prepared."

Five minutes later, Emory having gone forward and procured a change of togs from the mate, they all sit down in the little cabin, which is brilliantly lighted and its table beautifully set with crystal and china, even some fresh flowers adorning it.

"You've done everything mighty nice, Emory," says Barnes, genially, to the detective, "and I hope your wetting hasn't destroyed your appetite."

"Not a bite," answers the American representative of Pinkerston'.

"Why doesn't Edwin come down?" whispers Marina, nervously.

"Oh, he's skipper now," replies Burton. "He's making all shipshape with Mr. Graham and getting under way."

After giving the mate his directions as to the course and bidding him keep a good lookout for steamers coming up from Naples, Nice and other ports to the eastward, Edwin joins the party at table.

Lieut. Anstruther, after a glance at his bride, remarks: "Now, with a deck under my feet, I feel shipshape and ready for either pirates or land sharks," and devotes himself with a sailor appetite to his meal. Delicate little confections and ices as well as some magnificent fruit are put upon the table afterwards by the steward, whose fiery red hair and decided Scotch twang indicate he comes from the north of the Tay.

"Altogether," Enid contentedly remarks, "it is about as good a dinner as one could get at the best restaurant in Paris."

A few minutes later the gentlemen go on deck to smoke their cigars. Edwin takes his stand beside his Scotch mate, saying: "We'll take it watch and watch, Graham, until the morning," and sends the young fellow below to turn in.

The two ladies are busily making their arrangements in the cabin. The schooner has a main salon, which is used as a dining-room, and two little quarter staterooms, one of which is assigned to Edwin and his bride, the other to Miss Anstruther.

Under these circumstances, the detective and Barnes have a chance for private conversation. They stroll amidships and seat themselves beside one of the boats.

"How shall I put you on shore?" says Barnes.

"Well, in an hour more we'll be off Bandol, I reckon, and if you'll tell Edwin to drop in to the shore a little, you can put me off in one of the boats."

"All right," replies Burton, and speaking to Anstruther, the yacht's course is changed.

"When you are ashore, you'll get the railway, I suppose, to Marseilles. Pay my hotel bill at the Grand there and remember to meet me at Nice at the time appointed."

Here the detective dismays his American employer; he drawls slowly: "Y-e-s, but I'd like to give up this matter!"

"Give up this matter?"

"Yes. When that Corsican had his knife over my heart he said a few words of warning, telling me to look out how I got into a blood feud; that this matter was to the death, and if I wanted to live I had better leave it alone."

"You're frightened of the man?" asks Barnes.

"No, not exactly frightened, but mighty cautious of him," replies the Yankee, "for a fellow who can fix it so that my two French sleuths were thrown off the track and he and his pal took their very places and rode behind your carriage unsuspected and only by God's mercy were prevented from jumping you and doing you up as you placed the ladies in the boat, is a man whose brains make him mighty dangerous."

"Not dangerous enough to cause you to desert these ladies in their extremity. You, an American—I have been told you have a very good nerve."

"Yes, but this kind of an assassinating in the cl—m biz 's mighty ticklish —however, I'll go you again," returns the detective, after a few more whiffs of his cigar. "I'll risk it once more for the sake of the ladies. With such a crafty devil agin you, what you want to do is to suspect everybody," continued the detective. "You see you cannot be sure where such a snaky fellow will strike you. If it hadn't been for me fortunately walking up that path wondering why my men came down to you, they would have been upon you while you were putting the ladies in your boat, and would have had some of you sure. I know you can shoot quick and straight, but knives at close quarters are better than revolvers, especially in the darkness. You can bless God for having saved you tonight. Suspect everyone!"

"Suspect everyone!" Barnes mutters to himself and turns his eyes about upon the deck as he speaks.

"Oh, they're all safe here—those bra' Scotch sailor laddies. You saw the mate, he is Scotch also and can be trusted. If you'll put me on shore, I'll be at that villa at Nice ready to tell you everything when you make it. Don't you think the lady—I mean Anstruther's wife—could stand a voyage to England through the Bay of Biscay?" The detective's voice shows how anxious he is that his suggestion be taken.

"As a physician, I don't think she could," remarks Barnes. "You see her neurotic state has been added to by the attack upon us at the landing. It is not her fears for herself, but her fears for her husband."

"Suspect Everybody!" Lingers in His Mind.

They are now interrupted by Edwin. "The lights over there are those of Bandol. We're in ten fathoms of water. I don't want to venture in any further at night." Then the voice of the young English officer rings out, ordering the cutter to be lowered and manned.

"I go with you as far as the shore," says Barnes.

"No, you stay with the ladies," whispers Emory. "That's what you want to look after. You're the point of danger now. I'll only suffer if I get too nigh to you." As the Pinkerton man goes over the side, he whispers to Barnes: "Suspect everybody—even your own emotions and doings, and especially those of the women with that crafty cuss who had his dagger so cursed near my heart, working on them."

"Could you recognize the man?" asks Burton eagerly.

"Hardly, but in the struggle my hand caught his face, and I felt a scar over his left eye."

"Great Scott!" ejaculates the American. He is now certain it is Correggio Cipriano Danella who is bent upon revenge for the blood of his dead brother.

As the Yankee detective is rowed away, Barnes paces the deck.

The night is very fine, though extremely dark, and they being near the land, somewhat misty. The yacht's lights, however, burn brightly and a careful lookout is kept. Barnes thinks he has little fear from the sea while the vessel is in command of Edwin Anstruther. Still the detective's last warning, "Suspect everybody!" lingers in his mind.

Some remarks from the ladies in the cabin indicate that they are not coming on deck this evening.

"You can wager your grog money, Barnes, you'd be happier if you'd spliced before taking this cruise," observes Anstruther, sotto voce to his friend. "You'd have a bride with you, like me. Now, no danger of pirates boarding us, Marina and I can forget care for a few days in—in love."

"You may, I cannot," remarks Burton, grimly.

"Ah, Enid's a little offish, is she? Won't come up even and say good-night," grins the sailor. "Didn't like your not accepting what was offered you, eh? When you get a chance take it, my hearty, especially with girls. Now if you'd hunted up the minister, as I recommended to-day, you wouldn't have to stow yourself away on the cabin settee to-night."

This sea-dog suggestion is so disquieting that poor Burton paces the deck and sighs.

The boat has now returned, and as the men scramble on deck, Edwin demands: "Did you put your passenger on shore at Bandol?"

"Aye, aye, sir, but the loon went up the dock as cautious as if he feared land sharks."

This revives in Barnes' mind Emory's warning. "Suspect everybody!"

The vessel is soon under way again. He paces the deck smoking his cigar and thinking: "No one can board us in all probability unobserved. We are safe here with the Scotch crew and the Scotch mate." Suddenly the cigar drops from Barnes' fingers; with a start he mutters to himself: "By heaven, no Scotchman ever concocted that filet mignon and that creme d'asperge. There's one man on this boat I must keep my eye upon."

"Thinking of land sharks," laughs Anstruther, slapping him on the back.

"No," answers Barnes, shortly, "I was meditating on our French cook!"

CHAPTER V.

"For the Love of Heaven Don't Kill the Cook!"

To this rather astonishing announcement the young English naval officer says: "By Jove, the beggar did give us a good dinner."

"Too good!" remarks Barnes, gloomily.

"You wouldn't say that," replies Edwin, "if you had been knocking round the orient on wardroom commons for the last year. What do you mean by 'too good?' No cook is too good."

"And yet I'd feel easier," is Burton's comment, "if the fellow had given us lob-scouse, plum-duff, roast beef and dishes a plain Johnny Bull cook would have been apt to concoct. I don't propose to blindly trust anyone with foreign associations. They may be all right, and they may not. So I'm going to investigate this fellow."

"If you find anything suspicious about him," replies Anstruther, grimly, "I'll put him ashore if he can make salt horse taste like broiled chicken."

Acting on this, by a few deft questions to the members of the watch on deck, Barnes discovers that the nautical chef's name is Felix Leboeuf. "That's as I twang it," remarks Gillie, who is standing at the wheel giving him the information. "Coswhite, Mr. Jamieson's regular cook, went along with him to the auld country, and this chiel only come aboard to-day to take his place i' the galley."

"Hum, a new arrival?"

"Aye, sir, and the men dinna like him o'er muckle. Thae loon puts garlic i' th' lob-scouse."

At this Barnes laughs slightly, strolls forward and takes a look into the cook's galley. The fires are out and the regular snoring that issues from it shows the Frenchman is asleep upon his cook chest. "I don't think I'll trouble him to-night," sleepily thinks the American, hesitating to disturb the rest of an artist who had given him such a dinner, "but to-morrow morning I'll have a chat with Monsieur of the dishpans."

The next morning the sun rises brightly on the Mediterranean; its waves are silver. The yacht's course during the night has placed the little pleasure craft well out upon the open sea, Corsica to the southeast of her.

Apparently, the night's rest has increased the ladies' vivacity and the certainty of no danger being near them has improved their spirits.

"Everybody hungry, I hope!" cries Barnes cheerfully, notwithstanding his greeting from his fiancee has been rather formal as they sit down to a delightful breakfast sent in by the artist of the galley and served by the Scotch steward.

Apparently the pleasant meal produces almost frivolity in Miss Anstruther; she cries enthusiastically: "And coffee with the aroma of Mocha, and this omelette worthy of the Maison Dore! I feel as if I were in Paris. We have a great man in the galley, my brother."

"Yes, the fellow forward could put appetite into anyone," assents Barnes, assisting Edwin to do duty on the beefsteak.

"If we could arrange that we run about from one little harbor to another, I think the cruise could be made quite enjoyable," remarks Enid, struggling to be vivacious, but, catching an abrupt gleam of passion in her betrothed's face, her eyes that might even now have been his bride's eyes, grow suddenly haughty, though the young lady's fair lips emit some hidden sighs as she attempts the remainder of her breakfast.

Some little time after, chancing to glance up from his work with his knife, the sailor husband stays his eating as he places honeymoon eyes upon his bride. For Marina is asking nervously: "Any signs of pursuit during the night?"

"Pursuit?" sneers the tar. "Do you think our friend Cipriano Danella has a couple of revenue cutters in commission to run us down? The Seagull is quick enough to show her heels to most sailing craft. Besides, how can he tell what course we've taken? On the water we are safe. When we land the climax of this affair begins." Then the sailor suddenly exclaims: "My heavens, what's the matter, dear one?" for at her husband's last suggestion, Marina, though she utters no word, has grown of a sickly pallor.

"Nothing," stammers the bride, hiding her face from his glance by picking up her table implements, "only I am not a very good sailor, therefore this delightful cuisine has no charm for me."

As the young Corsican lady rises from the table the English girl gets up also; she seems to be anxious to end her contiguity to a betrothed whose reproachful glances at her cold and rather haughty face have grown embarrassing.

"Would that I dared to take Marina over the surges of the Atlantic to England," mutters the young husband moodily, as Enid and his spouse disappear into their staterooms.

About this time the mate, Mr. Graham, puts his head down the companionway and announces that Frenchy, the cook, is jabbering for something that none of them can make out—some folderol or other for his work.

This gives Barnes the opportunity that he wishes of examining the only foreigner on board. He steps up the companion ladder and strolls forward. Monsieur Leboeuf, a dapper little Frenchman in immaculate white apron and cook's cap, his moustache bristling ferociously and his black eyes blazing, is savagely smoking a cigar outside his galley. Barnes offers him a cigarette and thanks him for the two delightful meals he has furnished them.

"Ah, you speak a little French," cries the little Gaul. "C'est magnifique! Not a man understands ven I demand ze implements of my art."

"But you have been on English yachts before?" remarks the American, diplomatically.

"Mais, oui, vith my Lord Edgarton and vith Monsieur Ogilvie ze Scotch. They had ze big steamboats. Their stewards spoke ze language of la belle France. But on zis leetle vessel no one understands ven from zem I demand ze proper implements of my profession, so at once I must be put on shore to buy une couloire. If it is not to me, I cannot steam the pounding a l'Angais, my masterpiece."

Mr. Barnes discovers that Leboeuf wishes a colander.

"All right, you want some holes in a tin pan." The pistol shot steps into the galley. "Will this one do?"

A moment after he has climbed out and hung it on the end of the main boom which runs well out over the stern of the schooner. Producing his revolver and standing amidship, the American calls out to the ladies below not to be frightened at the reports as he is going in for pistol practice. Then he makes the tin pan his target and very shortly the Frenchman is screaming in astonishment: "Diable, an artist with ze shoot! Sacre bleu, my initials, F. L., in round holes all in ze bottom."

"Might as well keep my hand in," thinks Mr. Barnes, and forthwith gives an exhibition of marksmanship that causes the crew to cheer. He smashes bottles flung helter skelter in the air by the Jack-tars and puts bullets through potatoes tossed on high. Finally he tacks a playing card on the tip of the bowsprit and shoots the spots out of it.

"This will be a warning to this dish-pan artist, who is the only man of the crew of whom I feel a doubt, not to make me shoot at him," cogitates the marksman, grimly.

But his exploits with the pistol seem to enthuse the Frenchman, rather than dismay him. In his excited Latin way, Leboeuf shouts louder than anyone on deck and fairly screams with Gallic enthusiasm as Barnes winds up by placing a card on edge and splitting it with his unerring bullet.

Later on Monsieur Leboeuf sets Mr. Barnes to thinking again. He makes his appearance and demands determinedly that the yacht anchor off some landing where they can obtain fresh ice.

"Nonsense!" dissents the American. "Emory told me enough was put on board yesterday to last for several days."

"Then Monsieur has been robbed by ze ice-man," answers the Frenchman. "If Monsieur vil observe," he leads the way to his galley, which connects with the vessel's ice-chest. Opening this, he remarks: "Ze cold storage, it has all run out. Ver is it? Gone! Voila, not enough for ices ce soir; not enough to frappe ze champagne; not enough to preserve ze legumes and ze beurre."

Barnes discovers that what Leboeuf tells him is correct. During this hot weather ice is absolutely an essential. After a short consultation with Edwin, Anstruther grumblingly sets the Seagull's course for the French coast.

Three hours before sunset they anchor in the little harbor of St. Tropez. Looking at the retired old French seaport, Edwin remarks: "I don't think there's much danger of these Corsican assassins discovering us in this out-of-the-way place for a few hours," and sends the dingy on shore carrying Monsieur Leboeuf and directing him to make the necessary purchases and bring them off at once.

"We'll keep the ladies safe on board, and no shore boats shall come alongside," says the skipper.

But a few minutes after, Barnes suddenly remarks that he wants some more cartridges for his pistols, and obtaining the cutter, is rapidly rowed to the landing and disappears in the sixteenth century architecture of the town.

Consequently, when Marina and Enid come on deck, the latter discovers her swain is absent and, being now inclined to find fault with her gallant, pouts mentally: "Burton might have asked if I'd like a run on shore also."

But both boats being now at the landing, the ladies are compelled to spend their time rather monotonously looking at the picturesque little port, though Marina does little of this. The very sight of France seems in some occult manner to affright the beautiful woman as she leans upon her husband's arm. To him she whispers, nervously: "Will we get to Nice to-day?"

"Not with this wind," remarks Edwin. To this he adds, suddenly: "Dear one, you seem afraid of that place."

"Not while I have you by my side," she answers, ambiguously; and clings more tightly to his arm.

ITS PLATFORM INSULTS ALMIGHTY GOD--STOKES

In an address at the Republican mass meeting at Burlington last night, Governor Edward C. Stokes told 1,000 hearers in the Auditorium that the Democratic party in New Jersey had reached the lowest level of political degradation.

The Republican party, he declared, has ever reflected the public pulse and he declared that in standing by the Bishops' law it struck a blow for public decency that might prove a forerunner of the movement for total abolition of licenses, which with iddesistable force is sweeping in from the South and West.

Paying high tribute to Justice J. Franklin Fort as the man of the hour when New Jersey's morals are threatened, he declared that if the Republican party is defeated it will be because of its stand for decency and that no party in the next twenty years will have the courage again to touch the excise question.

Democrats, he said, are offering no evidence of sincerity in their stand as reformers, as the very crew that dragged the State's name into the mire of graft and scandal twelve years ago are today at the helm.

The moral question, he said, overshadows all others in the present campaign. The Republican party has cause to feel proud of the Bishops law enacted at the request of the best interests of the State.

Attacking the Democratic platform that would let down the Sunday bars, he said: The willingness of the Democratic party as stipulated in their platform to submit the Ten Commandments or any part of them to a public vote is an insult to Almighty God and the conscience of an American republic.

"This nation has grown great with an American Sabbath that has stood sacred to the welfare of man. It is a day for rest and relaxation, and lawful recreation and the day of worship. Any community that submits the observance of this day to a popular vote takes a backward step in civilization.

"From on high we have the edict, 'Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy.'

"Just as the Republican party drove out race track gamblers, it took up the cudgel against another form of immorality attacked in the Bishops' law, and in standing by that law it reflects the greatest question this country is facing today."

CHANGES IN THE FLAG.

Will Be Made July 4, 1908, in Oklahoma's Honor.

Although Oklahoma will be admitted to the Union of States by the proclamation of the President on November 16 next, that fact will not be formally recognized on the American flag until July 4, 1908. On and after that date the blue field of the national emblem will contain forty-six stars instead of forty-five, as at present. The law governing the addition of a star to the flag provides that such addition shall not be made until the Independence Day following the admission of the new State. The forty-fifth star was added July 4, 1906, to symbolize Utah, which had been admitted to the Union in the preceding March.

Several months ago a joint board of the army and navy, of which Admiral Dewey was chairman, adopted a plan for the rearrangement of the stars in the flag upon the admission of a new State, and the scheme was approved by the Secretaries of War and the Navy and by the President in turn. The forty-five stars now in the flag are arranged in six rows, the first, third and fifth having eight stars and the second, fourth and sixth having seven each.

Under the new arrangement, which was effected without materially altering the general scheme, the first, third, fourth and sixth rows will have eight stars and the second and fifth row seven stars each.

INDIAN "WIRELESS."

The Smoke Signals and Fire Arrows of the Red Man.

Ages before Marconi invented wireless telegraphy the Indians of North America had a system of "wireless" communication of their own by means of smoke signals and fire arrows.

The settler's wife, looking out from her lonely cabin on the prairie at the band of roving Indians, learned to note and understand the Indian smoke signals puffing lightly into the clear blue of the prairie sky. These smoke signals were sent up in puffs or rings, so that there was no chance of mistaking them for a campfire. The puffs were made by covering a fire with a blanket for a minute. Then the blanket was lifted quickly, and the smoke ascended. The blanketing process was repeated until a column of rings warned the Indians far and near to "look out" or "be on the watch." Two smokes built close together meant "Camp here."

Signaling at night was carried on by means of fire arrows. Their meaning was like that of the smokes. The fiery trail left by the arrow in its flight through the darkness was the same signal as one smoke. The others tallied, and a flight of several fiery arrows said, "The enemy is too strong for us."

MAYOR ISSUES PROCLAMATION ON SPECIAL ELECTION

Mr. Fisk Instructs Citizens How to Cast Vote on Hospital Tax Proposition.

LETTERS FROM MANY PEOPLE.

Mr. Atterbury Replies to His Critics —W. L. C. Glenney Gives His Views On the Subject.

Within the last few days much interest has been aroused on the hospital tax question, which comes before the voters tomorrow, as a result of letters and statements made to the people through the columns of The Daily Press by representative citizens. The proposition is to include the hospital in the tax budget the same as if it were a public institution in the eye of the law by levying a tax of one-third of a mill on the $100.

In a proclamation published in another part of this issue, to which the attention of the voters is called, Mayor Fisk explains how a vote may be cast and makes a manly and fair statement of what action he intends to take if a failure to vote is counted as an affirmative vote when the voting machine is used. He will not sign any appropriation measure if by means of such failures to vote, the scheme is considered by others as carried. Furthermore, he says he will carry the matter to the Supreme Court to have his position upheld to prevent any injustice being done the people.

Instruction to voters is given by the Mayor in the concluding paragraph of his proclamation which reads:

"Voting machines are used in the following voting districts: First District—First ward; First District—Second ward; First District, Third ward; First district—Fourth ward.

"Voters in the above districts voting on the question "For the adoption of the provisions of an act entitled 'An Act to enable cities which have no hospitals maintained by the city or enter into contracts for the purpose of supporting, maintaining and caring for indigent patients in any regular incorporated hospital located in such city,'" must vote "yes" or "no" by moving the indicator, which will be found directly under the question, so that it will point to the word "yes" or "no." Only votes indicated in this way on voting machines will be counted.

"Voters in other election districts, where the paper ballot is used, wishing to vote for the proposition will vote ballot as printed. Those wishing to vote against must mark off or deface proposition by drawing a line through same with a black pencil."

The following letters have been received today bearing on the hospital tax proposition:

Editor, The Daily Press:

The discussion about the tax for the hospital, in so far as it has found defenders, shows it to be largely a matter of opinion, and about opinions it is uesless to argue. In order, however, that my own position should not be misunderstood I would like to emphasize a few points.

First. I wish to express my hearty and unqualified admiration for the work of the hospital and its managers. It is a noble charity and a most valuable institution, and it deserves the hearty support of the community. The results obtained by the managers have been remarkable, and they are entitled to the highest honor for their labor.

Second. I feel that the community can be justly condemned for its failure to support it more liberally. This condemnation cannot be directed, even in thought, against particular individuals, for no one can judge another in that respect, but it is absurd that out of a city of 25,000 inhabitants there should be only 197 contributors with a total of $4,000. That this is not due to lack of ability is shown by the large receipts from the carnivals and charity balls and similar enterprises.

Third. I have carefully read the two letters in your paper in answer to my first communication, and I do not see that they meet my objections. I said then, and I now repeat, that it is right that the city and county should pay for medical services rendered to their paupers. (N. B. I use the word "pauper" in its technical sense, and not in a term of reproach). This they do in full measure. Plainfield and Union county pay nearly $6,000 a year. If that is not enough it should be increased; if too much, diminished; but much or little it should be limited to this particular purpose. The city as a political body is under no obligation to provide free medical services for those in strained circumstances, any more than food, clothing, fuel or shelter.

This has been in the past, the true American system of self-help; want and physical suffering have taken "their chances of relief by private benevolence," and private benevolence has always responded to the demand. This country is full of splendid monuments of true charity, great buildings, princely endowments, wise administrators, all testifying to the fact that private benevolence is adequate for the purpose.

Insane asylums and orphan institutions are not in point, for their inmates are not sui juris, and the State owes them its protection. Public schools are supported by taxation because we have universal suffrage and it is unwise to have an ignorant electorate.

City streets are State highways opened and controlled by the right of eminent domain, and the sprinkling of streets is incidental to their care. Not one of these instances can justify the use of public money for the personal and private benefit of certain favored individuals. It is not the duty of the city "to take care of the poor" either in sickness or in health; public money should not be used to provide high-class medical treatment "for those of limited means at such a cheap rate that they can avail themselves of it."

These arguments reflect the growing tendency towards socialistic remedies for our social ills; and yet we have always laughed at such remedies as quack nostrums, which in other lands have been tried and found wanting.

Fourth. I wish to emphasize the point which others have made in your paper against the propriety of using public money to support a private institution over which the public authorities have no control. I do not see how it can be lawful, but lawful or not it is very inexpedient. We have the fullest confidence in the managers of the hospital, but where is it to end? If public money is given to one set of persons why not to another? If Muhlenberg Hospital can claim public support how can you refuse it to the Relief Association or the Children's Home? Who is to decide as to the beneficiary and who is to be responsible to the taxpayers for the expenditure of the money?

Fifth. In conclusion I repeat the main point of my first letter. The judicious and discriminating relief of those who suffer in mind, body, or estate is charity in its noblest and best sense. It is not and never can be attained by public relief. Such relief is mechanical and debasing; a necessary evil to be confined within the narrowest limits. Charity is an individual virtue and a personal privilege; it blesseth him that gives and him that takes, and the blessing is on the giver even more than on the receiver.

ALBERT H. ATTERBURY.

Editor, The Daily Press:

I have read with interest the various letters which you have recently published regarding the proposed addition to the city budget of an item toward support of Muhlenberg Hospital, to be met by an increase in the city tax rate.

The idea of deriving a part of the support of the hospital from the general public may have some good points; but to one who has a knowledge of the present sources from which the revenues of the hospital are derived the proposed plan certainly seems decidedly more disadvantageous than otherwise.

It is undoubtedly true that, as at present conducted, the hospital does not derive anything like a proper proportion of its support from the people whom it most benefits, and it is urged that a tax for this purpose would fall upon all alike according to their means. Were the proposition to provide for the entire support of the hospital there would be much in this argument; but as I understand it, the sum to be derived from the tax is about $7,000.

The treasurer's report for the past year shows that the average annual expense of running the hospital is about $30,000. To meet this there is an average annual income from the hospital itself, interest on investments and county contribution amounting to about $15,800, which with the $7,000 to be received from the proposed tax would amount to $22,800, leaving a balance of about $8,000 to be derived from the only other source of revenue which the hospital has, namely, donations, charitable gifts, carnivals, etc. This latter source of income amounted last year to over $15,000. Just the moment a tax is imposed upon property-holders for the support of the hospital this support will be, to a great extent, cut off. At the "Carnival" last year and at the recent "Gathering of the Clans" the greater part of the money received was paid in, not by the people who derive the most benefit from the hospital, but from the men of means in the town whose motives in giving are purely

SAVING LITTLE CHILDREN

Clerk of N. Y. Juvenile Court Tells How They are Helped to Follow Straight Path.

THEY GET SPLENDID RESULTS.

Saved from Life of Crime by Judge Who Also Acts as Jury—Ten Sent to Institutions.

Under the auspices of the Young People's Association of the First Baptist church, Ernest K. Coulter, a New York lawyer and clerk of the Children's Court in that city, gave an interesting talk last night, telling something of the experiences in that well known court, where thousands of children are arraigned every year. Mr. Coulter was also the founder of the Big Brothers' Society, composed of about forty men who have pledged themselves to look out for as many boys each year.

Mr. Coulter stated that the Children's Court was the direct result of the inhuman treatment given to Mary Ellen, a little girl who was found in a tenement district in the big city. Influential men interested themselves, secured the enactment of proper laws and the Children's Court was established in a separate building. Children up to sixteen years of age are taken to this court and everything possible is done to save them from a life of crime. The judge acts as a jury and prosecutor and it is solely his purpose to do that which is best for the child. He is supposed to act as a father and it given wide discretion.

"The wisdom of the court," Mr. Coulter said, "is shown in the fact that only fifteen per cent. of the children brought to the court have to be sent to institutions. The other percentage make such excellent progress that they never get into the court more than once." Mr. Coulter related a great many amsuing and vathetic incidents which have come under his observation as clerk of the court, showing both the dark and bright sides of the lives of many children in New York.

In conclusion Mr. Coulter spoke a few words about the Big Brothers Society and added that if the need is in Plainfield the Men's Club of the church could do no better work than that taken up by the Big Brothers' Society in New York.

During the service the choir rendered special music, including a soprano solo by Miss Luella C. Harris, and a violin solo. Paul Scarborough, president of the association, took part in the service by reading the Scripture lesson.

CATHOLICS OFFER PRAYERS FOR THE DEAD

According to the annual custom, the members of the local Catholic churches and those from parishes in nearby places, assembled in St. Mary's cemetery yesterday afternoon, for the purpose of offering public prayers for the dead. With the addition of people interested in the ceremony the number in the gathering was at least 4,000.

Rev. Father B. M. Bogan, rector of St. Mary's church, was in charge of the service and first assembled with the societies of the parish at Sixth and Liberty streets at 1:15. From there they marched to the cemetery, the women proceeding to the scene by trolley. A procession was formed at the entrance gates and the parishioners filed to the center of the burying ground where the prayers were offered.

Father Bogan delivered an address appropriate to the occasion and he was assisted in the offering of prayers by his church assistants, Fathers Delehanty and Schiola and also Rev. Father Miller, of St. Joseph's church. The entire gathering joined in singing a hymn at the close of the service.

Herbert T. Putnam Baptized.

Herbert Titsworth Putnam, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert B. Putnam, of Troy, N. Y., was baptized at Grace church, yesterday, following the morning service. Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, rector-emeritus, performed the ceremony. The sponsors were Mrs. John D. Titsworth, an aunt of Mrs. Putnam, and Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson. There were just a few friends at the ceremony. Mrs. Putnam was formerly Miss Ella Titsworth, of this city.

Mrs. Bridget Dake.

Mrs. Bridget Dake, aged forty years, died last night at her home on Liberty street, near Third. She had been ill with a complication of diseases. She leaves a daughter, Miss Catherine Dake, and a son, Lawreence Dake. The funeral will be held at St. Mary's church tomorrow morning at 8:30.

SCHOOLBOYS' MINSTRELS

City High School Pupils Made a Hit as Burnt Cork Artists.

FOUR CLASSES GAVE PLAYS.

School Entertainment Saturday Night Helped Boys' Athletic Association Treasury—Mygrant as Cornetist.

With each of the four classes of the school taking part in the program, the entertainment given by the pupils of the city high school at the school auditorium Saturday night, was a most successful affair. The audience, which included many of the alumni of the school was large and enthusiastic and nearly $60 was netted by the entertainment. The money will be turned over to the boys' athletic association of the school. The girls took in a neat sum for their athletic association by the sale of home-made candy at prettily decorated tables.

The program consisted of three parts, a one-act playlet, "The Haunted House," by the sophomore class; a two-act sketch, "Mischief in the Studio," given in pantomine by members of the freshman class, and a "merry, monster musical melange of black faced melody," in which the minstrel talent of the senior and junior classes of the school showed up to an excellent advantage. Just before the minstrels, Percy Mygrant, of the senior class, rendered several cornet solos and his expression in playing, fullness of tone and accuracy of execution won him sustained applause and showed that the title of "eminent cornetist," in the program was not at misnomer.

The first part of the program was the presentation of "The Haunted House," by the sophomores. In this there were two characters, Clifford Vail, the house owner, and James Mauger, a colored white-washer. The latter character is the victim of ghosts' pranks while at work in the house and Mauger's presentation of the part was good because of his excellent dialect and spasms of fear, which gave opportunity for some well executed stage business.

Members of the class of 1911 next came on the stage in a presentation of "Mischief in the Studio." The playlet, given in pantomine, showed the havoc wrought in an art studio where an assistant, whose part was taken by Earle Moran, falls in love with a fair Indian maid (Miss Margaret Van Deventer), who is posing for a masterpiece. Herbert Trembath took the part of the studio owner, Winslow Dorthy was a milkman, and Miss Evalois St. John and Frank Clark decorated the studio as statues. The difficulties of a pantomine presentation were, on the whole, cleverly surmounted by the work of the entire cast.

Then came the minstrels. The sixteen "black face artists" appeared in the minstrel semi-circle in the full glory of Primrosian lavishness of collar, expanse of tie and varigation of hosiery. The rattle of tambos and bones put lots of snap in the singing and dancing, and the local "roasts" in the pupils of the school, with some clever limricks, won the applause and laughter of the house. "Billy" Briggs, as end man, stirred the best hand rattles with his spontaniety, good control of dialect and run of stage business. Clyde Doane on the other end of the semi-circle also got off some good ones, and he sang "If I'm Goin' to Die, I'm Goin' to Have Some Fun," in a georgemcohanesque way which brought some more palm pulsations. Guion Fountain, as the "golden-voiced tenor," made a hit with his song, "When You Know You're Not Forgotten by the Girl You Can't Forget," and the troupe came out strong on "School Days" and "San Antonio." Walter B. Caldwell, as interlocutor, was especially good in the burlesque on hypnotism which was a novelty introduced by S. B. Howe, of the school faculty. It afforded "Billy" Briggs and Clyde Doane an excellent opportunity for some good acting. The dance by Jack Riffert made lots of dust down front, but was appreciated by the gallery.

The black face caste consisted of: Interlocutor, Walter B. Caldwell, '08; bones: Guion Fountain, '09; Osgood Sewall, '11, and Clyde Doane, 09; tambos: Jack Riffert, '09; Arthur Bingaman, '09, and William Briggs, '09; chorus, Charles Lozeaux, '09; Roy Woodhull, '10; Russell Morris, '09; Albert Hardcastle, '09; Marcus Dey, '09; Charles Pryor, '09; Ray Dutcher, '08; John Dutcher, 08; Leslie Leland, '08; David Smalley, '10. William Rafferty, '08, was at the piano. During Percy Mygrant's cornet solos, Mr. Hubbard, of the school faculty, played the accompaniment and Benjamin Sturman, '08, furnished the violin obligato. "Between the acts" there was music by the school orchestra of eight pieces.

The candy tables were "taste"-fully

SUNDAY OBSERVANCE PLEA

Rev. Dr Chambliss Speaks to His Congregation on Meaning of Tomorrow's Election.

SAYS IT IS A MORAL ISSUE.

Baptist Divine Tells His People That Duty to Conscience Is Above Duty to Party.

Before announcing his text which introduced the subject of "The Commonness of Temptation, "Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss at the First Baptist church, yesterday morning, gave a brief prelude on the duty of voters in the approaching election. He said in part:

"A great moral issue confronts us in New Jersey, and the result largely depends on the election next Tuesday. Not so much on the choice that may be made for Governor, for in this State a bill may become a law over the objections of the Governor by a simple majority vote in each house of the Legislature—it does not require a two-thirds vote in joint session to over-ride a veto as in other States.

"But the result as to the moral issue depends above all on the character of the Legislature now to be chosen. The issue is, as you all know, shall the liquor interest dominate this State, or shall its power be curbed and broken, even if it cannot be entirely overthrown?

"You as Christians, you as patriots, you as lovers of your fellowmen, you as haters of all the lawlessness and vice and crime which are nourished by the saloon, you who are friends of a sacred and protected Sabbath, who fear God and desire to see his holy day defended against 'Sunday beer' and all that is implied in that phrase—you, I say, cannot be divided in heart as to this great moral issue. Yet you may be divided in judgment as to the way the good may best be attained which every good citizen longs for. Therefore, only this do I urge upon you today, as your friend and pastor: Do not forget the issue when you come to vote. Remember that loyalty to conscience stands above loyalty to party. Remember that you are followers first, not of any party leader, but of Jesus, your Lord and Saviour, and cast your ballots for those men—however you may have to split or scratch your ticket—whom you believe to be in favor of preserving unrepealed the existing Bishops' law."

WHERE, WHEN AND WHAT TO VOTE ON TOMORROW

The general election will be held tomorrow, when there will be chosen a Governor, three members of the Assembly, one coroner, and in Plainfield a member of the Board of Education, a city judge, city treasurer, three members of the Common Council at large, one ward councilman from each of the four wards, a justice of the peace and a constable.

The polls open at 6 in the morning and clase at 7 at night.

The polling places in Plainfield where voters will cast their ballots are as follows:

Second District—At No. 545 East Third Street.

SECOND WARD.

First District—At No. 327 Watchung Avenue.

Sunday-school Organized.

Under the auspices of the young people of the Jewish Synagogue, a Sunday-school was formed yesterday afternoon and Meyer Moledesky was chosen president and Harry Feinberg superintendent. There was a large gathering of young people and interesting addresses were made by Rev. Dr. I. L. Bril, editor of the Hebrew Standard; William Mitchell, president of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, of New York; Rabbi J. Korn, of New York, and Rabbi Davidson, of the local synagogue; also Samuel Rottberg, of the Young Men's Hebrew Association.

NO PAPER TOMORROW.

Election Day being a legal holiday, there will be no issue of The Daily Press tomorrow.

MAN IS A CHILD OF GOD

"We are Not of the Devil" Says Dr. Slicer Who Touches on Politics.

HE PRAISES NEW YORK CITY.

But Lashes Foley and Other Tammany Candidates in Present Campaign.

Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, of New York city, preached to a large congregation at the Unitarian church last evening, his subject was: "Man, Naturally a Child of God," his text being taken from St. Mark, 10-15, "Verily I say unto you, whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein."

The speaker said that for centuries it has been assumed that man is the child of the devil, and only by some supernatural process could be possibly become the child of God. When, recently, men discovered that the devil was dead, or that there had never been a devil, never any power that could dispute the supremacy of the earth with its Creator, then men became a foundling, in men's thought. But Jesus taught man's natural goodness and his filial relationship to his Father in heaven.

Men's belief has been Pauline, with a dash of Augustine, but their practice has been Christian. And it is this contradiction between their belief and their instinctive, soul impelled practice that has resulted in mental and moral confusion. Jesus always assumed that men mean to do right. To the crowd, on the hill slope, fishermen, men fresh from their seed sowing; Pharisees, closely wrapt in self satisfaction, the Essenes, or early Quakers, drawn to hear him from the simplicity of their lives He said, "What man is there of you, who, if his son ask bread will give him a stone? How much more, then, will the Heavenly Father give the best he can, even his own holy spirit, to them that ask him?"

To that woman of no character, whom you would not employ as a servant in your houses if you knew her record, to that "Samaritan," looking up even then, as they sat one on either side of Jacob's well, at the great Samaritan temple on Mt. Gerezein, "The hour cometh and is even now at hand when not here, nor in Jerusalem, even, shall men worship the Father. The Father seeketh those who worship in spirit and in truth. When St. Paul said, "Now that is not first which is spiritual but that which is natural." He may have meant one thing and the speaker another, but Mr. Slicer understands that by natural should be meant using the earth, as a bulb set in its uses it to flower up out of it toward the heavens. Man comes to "the new birth" so called, but which Jesus really named "the birth from above," as a child who has grown to the years of adolescence leave behind his egotism and becomes altruistic. Growing away from the earth and its selfishness, which he holds to naturally for a time, just as he naturally grows up out of it, he seeks "another," finds it in his affections, and, at the same time in life, seeks that "other" who alone can satisfy his aspiration and reverence. He is "born above." And poor and mean must that life be which lacks this birth, but is as natural an evolution of character as is the tranformation of the Angona desert, which ages long produced only sage-brush cacti and other innutritious things but, visited by the waters brought down from the nearby mountains, now laughs in beauty and rejoices in fruitfulness, having come to its own.

Mr. Slicer gave an admirable likening of man's entrance into the divine kingdom, the realization of his soul, to the small child's awakening in the morning to all the wonders of the new day. It was a fine simile.

Mr. Slicer concluded with a tribute to New York, which he declared to be as a whole sweet and sound, notwithstanding its sore and wicked spots. He said where 95 per cent. of the business is done on credit it cannot be true that every man's hand is in his brother's pocket. Rather is it true that every man's hand is in his brother's hand. Even now, with one man nominated for sheriff in New York, who owns a string of saloons in the Bowery, and another man asking for votes who was counsel for the infamous "cadets" and took for pay the money earned by the sale of young girls for the vilest purposes, many New Yorkers will vote for a man put on the Prohibition ticket, a workman on the Singer building, because they would vote for a clean man. Sicley rights itself because of its divine heaven.

GEORGE VAN VLIET'S FUNERAL.

Many Plainfielders Attend the Service Conducted in New York.

The funeral of George Van Vliet, the well-known former Plainfielder whose death occurred last Friday, was held yesterday in the Ascension Memorial church, West Forty-third street, New York. It was attended by a large gathering that included many relatives and friends from this city.

The Episcopal form of service was used, Rev. John F. Seen officiating and in addition the Masonic ceremony was conducted, Mr. Van Vleit being prominent in the order. A quartette rendeered "Nearer, My God, to Three," a favorite hymn of the deceased, and in addition a solo, "I Know Not What Awaits Me, God Kindly Veils My Sight," was sung by Brother Samuel Stewart, of Astor Lodge, F. and A. M. The Knights Templar service was also conducted by Palestine Commandery and Brother William Sherer delivered a eulogy.

Burial was made in Trinity cemetery, New York, the pall bearers being selected from Palestine Commandery and Astor Lodge. They were Horace H. Brockway, James A. Rich, George H. Rich, Charles H. Fagin, Dr. F. H. Heisse, John C. Lefferts, Russell Johnson and S. D. Affleck.

An Illustration

One of our clients owed $48 between four people. His salary is $14 weekly; rent $12 monthly. To have paid $2 weekly to each creditor, combined with rent, would have left only $3 per week to meet expenses, buy clothing, etc.—an impossibility you will agree. He borrowed $50, paid all his creditors, made his future credit good, if ever needed; pays his rent, the loan payments, and has $9 each week to use as his judgment dictates.

DUNELLEN.

As the day approaches when the "vox populi" shall be heard at the ballot boxes throughout the land, politics has become more and more the subject of talk in the borough, and supporters of Fort and Katzenbach are today figuring up pluralities, each for his own candidate. The interest of the local fight centres around the vote for mayor and supporters of Wynkoop, the Republican candidate, and Swackhamer, the Democrat, are wondering what story the ballots will tell tomorrow. The election in Dunellen promises to be a closely contested one, and the increased registration shows that the biggest vote in the history of the town will be cast if all turn out. The polling places will be open from 6 in the morning until 7 at night, but it is probable that most of the votes will be cast in the early evening.

The Borough Council will hold its regular monthly meeting on Wednesday evening in the borough building. Mayor Wyckoff and Councilman Kuhns are to be chained in opposite corners of the council chamber, so report has it.

Raymond and John Dutcher took part in the minstrel show given by the boys of the Plainfield high school in the school auditorium Saturday night.

Mrs. William Dunham, of Plainfield, has returned after spending the week with Mrs. Robert P. Pierce, of New Market.

The weekly meeting of the teachers of the Presbyterian Sunday-school will be held tonight at the manse.

Mrs. William Ackerman will entertain the members of the G. E. Club at her home in New Market tonight.

Mrs. John M. Drayton has returned home after a week's visit with friends in Newark.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Indications are that Election Day, tomorrow, will pass very quietly here. The campaign having been one of the quietest in years. The Republican ticket should win out by the usual majority of 45 to 60, it being only a question of getting the vote out. Republican candidate for Governor J. Franklin Fort will probably run ahead of his ticket a little on account of his open stand on the liquor question and the Bishops law. The residents here who believe in Sunday being observed strictly as regards the saloons, is in the majority, as they have had all the open Sundays they want, and will no doubt register their approval of the Bishops law at polls tomorrow.

A sure sign of the Sunday before election—several drunks were seen on the street yesterday. This is actually a rare sight since the enforcement of the Bishops law.

Mrs. Charlotte Hurly and son, Cecil, of Madison street, Brooklyn, spent Sunday with Mrs. W. R. Buckley.

The regular monthly communion was held at the close of the morning service at the Baptist church yesterday.

The public school and commuter resident are about the only ones who will observe tomorrow as a holiday.

Edward D. Johnston led the weekly B. Y. R. U. meeting, held in the Baptist church last night.

Miss Helen Southard has accepted a position as stenographer with a New York firm.

James Fitzgerald was the guest over-Sunday of friends in New York.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The Catholic congregation who have been worshiping in Washington hall expects to get into its new church the beginning of the new year.

The election which will take place Tuesday will be watched with great interest. Both parties are sanguine of success.

The automobile will make regular trips for those who wish to participate in the firemen's ball this evening.

Peter Johnson's son, who is ill with pneumonia, is reported as somewhat better.

Mrs. Alexander Gaanigue has gone to Somerville to visit her sister, Mrs. Vantine.

Mr. and Mrs. David M. Kellogg will leave next week for New York city.

Budding Young Artists Contribute These

Fine Oil Paintings

For This Week's Great Sale.

Wait a little while and these paintings may jump in value to double, quadruple, a hundred times their present selling price—and then we may ask you to pay it.

Why? Because the artists producing these paintings are as yet unrecognized and unknown to the public—talented, earnest, ambitious fellows who are working away, doing their best, longingly awaiting the day when their pictures will finally be placed in the Salon. Some day they will score and it may not be a long wait—and then their name on a painting will be worth thousands, perhaps.

Why not secure one or more of these gems while they may be had for so little?
This sale affords splendid choice—the variety of subjects is wide, the framing beautiful.
It costs nothing to look, and the exhibit is really interesting and enjoyable.
Come whether you buy or not.

A Gorgeous Millinery Season.

The millinery display at L. S. Plaut & Co., Newark, eclipses all previous showings in splendor and variety. All shapes are shown, but public favor is between big hats and little, flaring brim and drooping effects, flowers, plumes and ribbons. Fancy feathered novelties are conspicuous, as are bows, rosets, pom pons and plumes, all of which are at the very zenith of popularity. It is evidently part of fashions plan to make the small hat as conspicuous as the large one through trimming effects. Besides the felt shapes, hats of all sorts of materials are shown, possibly velvet leading. This season is noted for superb color effects, though refined beauty prevails throughout. Latest tidings from the Bee Hive European representative says furs are being used; chinchilla, first call, combined with lace, velvets combined with fox, seal combined with velvets. No store in America keeps in closer touch with Paris than L. S. Plaut & Co.

Proclamation

TO ALL VOTERS DESIRING TO VOTE FOR OR AGAINST ADOPTION OF HOSPITAL ACT OF 1904.

After the hospital act of 1904 was adopted, Chapter 215 of the Laws of 1905 was enacted to regulate the use of voting machines, as required by section 14, the county clerk has printed on the cardboard of the voting machines, the same proposition for the adoption of the hospital act which is printed on the ordinary paper ballots, and in addition, the words "yes" and "no." Section 33 points out how to vote on such propositions, and says: "In voting for or against any xxx proposition, the assent or dissent of the voter to any such xxx proposition may be expressed either by the words "for" and "against" or "yes" and "no."

It is true that the hospital act does say that any voter desiring to vote against the adoption of the act shall express his intention by marking off or defacing the proposition, and if be not marked off or defaced, it shall count as a vote in favor of the same; but the voting machine act above referred to is a later act and itself expressly provides how assent or dissent to such a proposition shall be expressed where voting machines are used, and as that is the latest expression of the legislative will on the subject, I hold that no vote by means of a voting machine can be counted in favor of the adoption of the hospital act, unless the voter has voted "for" or "yes," and unless compelled to do so by writ of mandamus, I will not sign any contract or any ordinance under which the proposed hospital tax can be assessed, if in order to carry the election for the act it is necessary to count voting machine votes in any other way. Moreover, if the election should be declared carried for the act by counting voting machine votes contrary to this view, and the election would not otherwise be carried in favor of the act, I will carry the matter to the Supreme Court, for such a result if reached in that way would be unjust, against the vote of the people, and in my opinion contrary to law.

Voting machines are used in the following voting districts: First District—First ward; First District—Second ward; First District—Third ward; First district—Fourth ward.

Voters in the above districts voting on the question "For the adoption of the provisions of an act entitled 'An Act to enable cities which have no hospitals maintained by the city to enter into contracts for the purpose of supporting, maintaining and caring for indigent patients in any regularly incorporated hospital located in such city,'" must vote "yes" or "no" by moving the indicator, which will be found directly under the question, so that it will point to the word "yes" or "no." Only votes indicated in this way on voting machines will be counted.

Voters in other election districts, where the paper ballot is used, wishing to vote for the proposition will vote ballot as printed. Those wishing to vote against must mark off or deface proposition by drawing a line through same with a black pencil.

CHAS. J. FISK, Mayor.

CITY JOTTINGS.

—The November meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders will be held at Elizabeth on Thursday.

—William Burns, formerly with William Randolph, the barber, has opened a tonsorial shop on Watchung avenue, near the trolley stand.

—The syndicate which purchased the property near Tier's pond, known as Concert Park, is well underway with the plans for developing and improving the same. Cellars for four houses have been excavated and the construction work will be pushed along rapidly.

—William J. Buttfield and C. W. McCutchen, owners of considerable property on West End avenue, the borough, continue to improve that thoroughfare in carrying out the plans for a boulevard, and it is expected that building operations will begin there in the spring.

Too Busy to Campaign.

Borough Tax Collector George F. Brown has been so busy receiving the tax bills that he has had no time to talk politics. He is on the Republican ticket for re-election to the office of tax collector, which he has held for nine consecutive years. If his good service is to be recognized by the borough voters, he should have an increased majority at the polls tomorrow.

MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION

If a tax is imposed for this purpose, will not these men consider that they have contributed their share in the payment of the tax and refuse further aid? It will still be necessary to raise about $8,000 each year from contributions, carnivals, etc., and with the enthusiastic support of the charitable men of the city cooled by a forced contribution through taxation, will it not be very much harder to raise this sum than it is now to raise about $14,000 (the city now gives $1,000) when there is no special excuse for not giving?

It will still be necessary for our benevolent and philanthropic mayor to step in and fill the gap with new schemes requiring much greater effort than before. In the past, appeals to our generous spirited citizens, on behalf of the hospital, have not gone unanswered. Let us not do anything which will tend to deprive the hospital of their support, unless that which is done will render such support unnecessary. The proposed plan of a partial support by taxation certainly does not accomplish that purpose, since it still leaves a large deficit to be met in the same old way.

W. L. C. GLENNEY.

Editor, The Daily Press:

The voters of Plainfield will be called upon tomorrow to vote upon the question as to whether the city shall be taxed one-thrid of a mill on all the ratables each year for the support of Muhlenberg Hospital. As a taxpayer I am opposed to the proposition; I feel that the city is doing now all that should be expected of her when she contributes $1,000 a year to the hospital for the treatment of the poor. I would suggest that if the income received does not meet the running expenses, why not raise the price to those patients who can afford to pay. One third of a mill does not sound very big, but we are going a little too fast in these matters. Our taxes are constantly increasing and it won't be long before the cry will go out that Plainfield is a high taxed city and our growth will suffer in consequence. I heartily agree with Messrs. Atterbury, Stillman, Randolph, Dumont and the many others who have written on this matter. These men have given long and valuable service to the city and know what they are talking about. Mr. Voter, if you are a taxpayer or a rent payer, "remember that in voting on this question, if opposed to it, be sure to vote for failure to vote is counted a vote for it.

J. V. E. VANDERHOEF.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Article 1, paragraphs 19 and 20 of Constitution of New Jersey, says: "No county, city, borough, town, township or village shall hereafter give any money or property, or loan its money or credit, to or in aid of any individual association or corporation, or become security for or be directly or indirectly the owner of any stock or bonds of any association or corporation.

"No donation of land or appropriation of money shall be made by the State or any municipal corporation to or for the use of any society, association or corporation whatever."

Now sir, inasmuch as the amount of the tax to be received will greatly exceed the sum which the hospital now gets from the city for the care of the indigent patients, $1,000, how can it be lawful, let alone just?

Suit On Note.

The case of Walter S. Terrell, administrator, against George W. V. Moy, administrator, which was decided by Judge Vail without a jury on Saturday morning decided whether a suit on a promissory note can be sustained where it has run more than six years and the payments of interest have been endorsed by the creditor at the debtor's request within six years before suit is started. Judge Vail decided that the plaintiff was entitled to recover and gave a judgment for the full amount. Codington & Swackhamer represented the plaintiff.

NO PAPER TOMORROW.

Election Day being a legal holiday, there will be no issue of The Daily Press tomorrow.

RUTGERS PROFESSOR TALKS ON CHRISTIAN DUTY

Discussing his subject point by point with arguments pro and con, Rev. E. P. Johnson, D. D., professor of church history at Rutgers Theological Seminary, spoke ably on the theme, "Why Should the Christian Vote?" at the evening service in Trinity Reformed church last night. Taking his text from Romans 13:4, —"For he is the minister of God and the avenger of him that deoth evil," Dr. Johnson said in part:

"This question, 'Why should a Christian vote?' seems to be both timely and important. Many believe that the Christian man should have nothing to do with any sort of government, but the churchman's presence at the polling places is important because there are certain evils that can be crushed and certain good principles that can be maintained only at the ballot box. Wrong-doers fear the aggressiveness of the Christian voter. Again, it is the unalienable right and obligation of the voter. The voter is the American sovereign. When a greedy spoilsman is elected, none but the voter is to blame.

"Again, the Christian should vote because Christian men are the best men in the community. Voting is the freeman's kingliest act and if the Christian voter is to suffer by the decisions at the polls, he should be out and do all in his power to shape them right. I maintain that it is rank treason to the officials not to keep in touch with civil affairs and not to care how things are run. Any administration, good or bad, requires the critigism, commendary or adverse, to have it at its best.

"Why should not a Christian vote? Is he afraid of pollution from politics? His work here should be like the work of Christ while He was on earth, to purify and cleanse the conditions of human life. Can he spare the time from Christian and business duties? I say that to be an allen is to be hostile to the best interests of the community. Will voting injure the Christian man's spirituality? I say that it will rather give him more spiritual force. A Christian must be aggressively active and must keep friendship with all classes alike,—he must be democratic, above all. Every Christian voter has work to do at the polls, and the best interests of the community require his presence at the polling places Tuesday."

MISS INEZ TOLLES' ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

At an informal reception given to a dozen intimate friends at their home on Westervelt avenue Saturday night, Councilman and Mrs. R. I. Tolles announced the engagement of their younger daughters, Miss Inez Tolles to Walter C. McNaughton, son of Mr. and Mrs. John McNaughton, of Westervelt avenue. No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Tolles is a graduate of the city high school and is popular with a large circle of friends. Mr. McNapghton also went to the high school and has for several years been active in the physical department of the Y. M. C. A., where is a record holder and a member of the recent championship basketball five.

P. S. C. Pushing Its Work.

The P. S. C. installed two new sixty-foot rails at Fourth street and Park avenue today and the brick pavement work will now be finished at that point so that the avenue can be opened to traffic. The company expects to install its new switches and tracks at Front and Somerset streets in a day or two so that the brick work can be completed there. It is said that as soon as the company puts its double track system in use on Watchung avenue, the Netherwood and Arlington avenue lines will be operated together, the transfer to other lines being established at Fourth street and Watchung avenue.

Continuing his series of meetings, Evangelist Waugh spoke to a large gathering at the Christian church, last night. His text was "I Am the Life" and it was illustrated with many views. Three solos illustrating points in the address were sung by Miss Lydia Edgar. A novel form of service has been arranged for tonight and tomorrow night.

NATIONAL BOARD SETTLES APPEALS.

Minor Baseball League Arbiters Reinstate Eason, of Newark, and Suspend Official.

Protests and appeals finished the business of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, when the Board of Arbitration rendered decision in several cases that had remained unsettled from the beginning of the week. The case of "Mal" W. Eason, once a Brooklyn pitcher, took up most of the time.

He was purchased by Newark, but was able to pitch only three innings in a game against Buffalo when his arm gave out. He received one more trial, but was a failure, so W. W. Burnham, manager of the Newark club, allowed him to go to the Pennsylvania, Ohio and Maryland League as an umpire. He was suspended by Newark so that no other club could obtain his services, although he was allowed to officiate in some of the Eastern League games.

After a long discussion Eason was reinstated, with permission to work as manager or umpire, with the privilege of securing an unconditional surrender upon payment of $300 to Newark.

The Board declared ineligible A. J. Lewis, formerly president of the Western Pennsylvania League, for his methods of doing business. Quite a number of other cases of minor importance were settled and the baseball horizon cleared until the annual meeting of the major leagues, which will take place the second Tuesday in December.

BOARD OF TRADE AGAINST CANAL BILL.

Declares Present Scheme Providing Expenditure of $1,000,000 by Newark Is Too Vague.

After a long discussion last evening the Newark Board of Trade passed a resolution asking the voters to oppose on Tuesday the plan to spend $1,000,000 to begin the work of reclaiming the meadows between Newark and Elizabeth along the bay front, the construction of a ship canal to deep water and a system of docks.

Under the provisions of the Lane Dock law, passed last winter, this question will be submitted to the people at the coming election. It was the sense of the Board of Trade after hearing extended arguments that the scheme was too vague, that the people did not sufficiently understand the scope of the proposed law and that there was not time enough to inform them.

SHORT STORIES.

Montreal has a colony of about 1,700 Chinese workingmen. Only forty newcomers have joined it since the $500 head tax of 1904 went into effect.

For the first time in the city's history two Chinamen received badges from the New York fire department recently permitting them to enter the fire lines. Both are business men in Mott street.

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

One of the attractive features of the season anent the separate waist will be the velvet or heavy broadcloth skirt topped with a waist of sheer material.

To the many women to whom the are becoming it will be welcome intelligence that ruffs and boas are going to be worn. For the most part they will be very wide and flat rather than fluffy and billowy.

Two distinctive features may be noted about sleeves. They have much more fullness at the top, some of them even being laid in deep plaits, and they are very ornate, even to the point of fussiness.

Two of the leading features of the fall modes are the development of the tailor made and the Japanese effects, each of which draws upon the other to form an entirely new style, which, while it has the characteristics of both, is at once more practical and more artistic than either.—New York Post.

Phonograph Co. Lays Off 500 Men.

An order, which, it is declared, is only temporary and will be recalled on November 11, was issued at the works of the National Phonograph Company at West Orange Friday, laying off 500 men. At the offices of the concern it was said that the lay-off was deemed expedient because of the stringent money market, and not because of any decrease in orders.

WANTS PRIZE FOR TRIPLETS.

Proud Tennessee Mother Requests the Attorney General to Forward the Money.

Officials of the present administration are at times embarrassed as a result of the Roosevelt race suicide views. This was the case with Attorney General Bonaparte, who received Saturday this letter from a mother in Memphis, Tenn.:

"Dear Sir—Can you give me any information in regard to the amount due to the mother of triplets? If you can I will be obliged to you and thank you for your kindness and pay you the amount due you for your trouble."

The Attorney General replied that unfortunately there was no provision by law for compensation to one who had done as well by her country as the writer.

Katzenbach Believes He'll Win.

Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., the Democratic nominee for Governor, while at Passaic Friday, issued a statement concerning the probable outcome of the contest at the polls next Tuesday, saying: "From the interest taken in the meetings I have addressed and the large attendance, I believe the people desire a change of the State administration, and will so express themselves next Tuesday."

Square Pot
Patented
Found only in
Boynton Furnaces

Did you ever operate a furnace made with the old-fashioned round fire pot, with its sloping sides to catch ashes and retard combustion; its grate bars of uneven length constantly requiring raking; its big waste of fuel?

Then you will appreciate the many advantages of the square fire pot used exclusively in Boynton Furnaces. Walls are perpendicular, instead of slanting; a touch of the shaker removes all ashes without clogging or the necessity of raking.

Gives 25 per cent greater heating efficiency than any other pot of equal diameter

This is the only construction in which the grate bars operate with even motion under the whole fire bed, giving quick, perfect combustion and the fullest benefit of every ounce of fuel.

There's but one square pot—found in all Boynton Furnaces. Your plumber, steam-fitter or tinsmith will gladly show you.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for steam or hot water. Also ranges.

Mr. Barnes, American

By Archibald Clavering Gunter

Author of Mr. Barnes of New York, Mr. Potter of Texas, That Frenchman, etc.

A Sequel to Mr. Barnes of New York

COPYRIGHT, 1907, DODD MEAD & CO. N.Y.

-ive, no; this threat—you have had proof enough—is a menace all our lives. I desire to put its author where he can do no harm to you before I wed you."

"Before? After you wed me!" cries his fiancee, in exalted mood. "Let us together face and annihilate this fiend."

"But remember this is an undying feud. Think what my self-reproach would be if I let your love for me bring miserable death to you, my adored," whispers Barnes.

"My death couldn't happen, sweetheart, unless you died also, Burton," she says simply.

"I demand of this gentleman," she continued, "who says he loves me, that he weds me the moment we go on shore at Nice even if it brings me into the unhappy feud proclaimed against him. No, no; don't refuse me, Burton," she whispers, determinedly, "'tis the last chance. You wed me then or never wed me! If you cannot trust me with your woes, I'll not take part of your joys."

More enamored than ever with the charming girl who will risk death to be his bride, Barnes silently extends his arms, and she falling into them, the yacht's deck becomes a heaven to these lovers.

The next day the sun again rises bright over the Mediterranean. The felucca is never sighted. Monsieur Leboeuf serves meals fit for a fairy princess in the salon, and Enid and Barnes have such appetites the cook is delighted.

A few days later the Seagull, under the name of the Wildfowl, drops her anchor in the little bay at Villefranche, coming in, not like a sprightly yacht, but like a slow, lumbering, carelessly sailed and inadequately handled merchant craft.

To avoid the curiosity of passing boats, Edwin has anchored near the Beaulieu side of the bay. Upon this Barnes now directs his glass. Looking it over, the American thinks it will be much more probably the location of Lady Chartris, as it has a number of pretty villas, nestled among olive, almond and orange trees, a good many of them having water frontage and several being possessed of boat landings, as he suggested. But on none of them floats the flag of France, which he had asked Lady Chartris to use as a signal to locate her villa. He is almost putting his glass aside preparatory to a journey on shore to determine the location of Lady Chartris when he suddenly exclaims: "Hang that Maud!"

"Maud!" cries Edwin, who has been busy in making the vessel shipshape. "Is she above the horizon?"

"Very much," laughs Barnes. "Notice that overgrown girl romping with the big dog and waving the French flag at him. That flag, I imagine, was to have been our signal." Then he inspects the villa carefully and is pleased to see that a good solid brick wall of sufficient height to exclude any but very energetic intruders surrounds its pretty garden. Only on the water side are its lawns open to view, and this portion of the quiet bay appears at present devoid of boats.

A light flight of stone steps that enter the water and a tasty little floating wooden landing stage indicate the former owner of the villa had been aquatic.

"That's just the place to put the ladies on shore as soon as it's dark," remarks Edwin, for the two young men had concluded it would be best to make their entry into Villefranche very quietly.

"Very well, order the cutter away," says Barnes, "and I'll get ashore and see that everything's all right."

In a few minutes the American is at the little landing stage. As he runs up the stone steps, Maud's bright eyes light upon him. The girl stops her romping with the big dog, and crying: "Glory, glory, Mr. Barnes of New York. I thought you were in London!" flies down to him with additional exclamations of surprise and delight.

"Where is your mother, Maud?" remarks Burton, pleasantly, as the girl snuggles one of her rather soiled hands into his.

"She's in the house, there. She's so blessed easy, I think I'm going to have a step-papa," answers Miss Chartris, gaily.

"Ah, Von Bulow," remarks Barnes, sententiously.

"Perhaps. But mamma has other admirers now," returns Maud.

This news is not at all satisfactory to Mr. Barnes. The more followers Lady Chartris has lounging about, the less will be the retirement of the villa.

"Very well, run off and play, Maud; I'll see you a little later," he remarks, glumly.

They are entering the ample portico of the house.

Lady Chartris at her door receives generous Mr. Barnes effusively. "The villa is perfectly delightful, thank you, dear Burton," she observes pleasantly. "I selected it as you wished—just near enough to be in touch with the gaiety of Nice and far enough away for the honeymoon retirement of Edwin and his bride."

Leading him into a delightful drawing-room, she adds: "You must see of us. Marina and Enid are on the yacht, I suppose?"

"Yes, the ladies will be here this evening, my dear Lady Chartris," assents Barnes. Then he asks, desirous to know if the privacy of the villa has been preserved: "You have driven into Nice once or twice since you arrived?"

"Yes, I've only been here five days, and have been literally overwhelmed with attentions," Prunella remarks, rather grandly. "My horses"—Barnes had paid for them—"take me into Nice in 25 minutes over that beautiful forest road."

"Ah, and Von Bulow?" he suggests, roguishly.

"Oh, Baron von Bulow was in ecstasy at my presence. Franz gave me a lunch at the Casino."

"Oho, it has got so far as 'Franz,'" laughs Burton. "And your other admirers?" his tone is insinuating. "You cannot persuade me you hadn't more than one, Lady Chartris."

"Oh, several, but I—I don't like to speak about them." The widow's face becomes rosy.

A good deal of this has been said as Prunella has been showing Mr. Barnes about the pretty house, and he has inspected the rooms set apart for Edwin and his bride and Miss Anstruther.

Then, despite his hostess' suggestion, for Lady Chartris has a lovely chamber overlooking the water for him who is really the master of the villa, Burton selects for his own use a much inferior bedroom, but one that gives him a commanding view of all the country lanes that lead to the grounds.

"Seeing that everything is all prepared, I'll bring Marina, Miss Anstruther and Edwin on shore this evening. Please make no preparations for us. Treat us all en famille. I think I'll go down to my boat," says Mr. Barnes.

As he leaves the house he asks: "Are there any lefters for me?"

"Why, yes. A Mr. Emory, who acts as your agent, I presume—he paid your bill at the Grand hotel—came to me as I was leaving Marseilles and asked me to deliver this personally." Lady Chartris runs upstairs, and returning, places an epistle in Burton's hand, adding: "Here is also another addressed in the same hand that arrived three days ago, under enclosure to me." The contents of the first makes him knit his brows.

It reads:

Marseilles, May 27, 1883.

My Dear Mr. Barnes:

I send this by Lady Chartris. Any further communications until I again see you will be mailed under cover to that lady, as I dare not give our adversary any chance of finding your location by the post, for we have to deal with somebody whose devilish ingenuity beats that of Old Nick himself. The way he substituted his own assassins in place of the two Frenchies I had hired to ride behind your carriage and guard you when you left Marseilles, will prove this.

He must have got onto me immediately after you employed me. Someone must have followed you and seen our chat at the Hotel des Deux-Mondes and guessed that you engaged me. All that day I must have been shadowed so slick I never suspected it. By this means they must have guessed that I hired Jamieson's yacht for you and the men to guard you to the embarkation. Any way, the two Frenchmen, who were to see you safe, while waiting for you and party to get into your carriage, left their nags at the door of a wine-shop just around the corner from your hotel, in the Rue du Musee, and stepped in to drink and that is the last either of the bums know about anything until they woke up with a thundering headache and were told they had been asleep in the wine-shop for the last six hours.

When they came out, about midnight, they found their nags waiting for them, but so bunged up they must have carried the two men after you till they jumped me at the Roucas Blanc. I have questioned them and they admit that a by-stander asked them to drink wine with him.

In addition, if it isn't too late, I want to warn you about the cook for the Seagull, whom Graham hurriedly engaged. The devil who's running this vendetta on you may have got to him also in some way, though everybody about the docks says that Leboeuf is square.

I shall be in Nice not later than June 4, as from what you said to me I reckon you won't be back before that time.

Yours anxiously,
ELIJAH REUBEN EMORY.

CHARLES M. WILSON'S FUNERAL.

Six of His Employes Carry Casket to the Grave.

The funeral of Charles M. Wilson, whose death occurred last week after a long illness, was held at his late home on Madison avenue, Saturday afternoon. It was conducted by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss and was attended by a large gathering that included delegations from Franklin Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum and the Master Builders' Association. There were many handsome floral tributes.

Burial was made at Hillside, the pall bearers being six of Mr. Wilson's employes, Philip Butscher, Louis Nelson, Frank Manchester, William Bodine, Levi Kline and Charles Thompson.

Funeral of Mrs. Wheeler.

With a large gathering of relatives and friends in attendance, the funeral of Mrs. Chauncy P. Wheeler was held at her late home on Somerset street, yesterday afternoon. The service was conducted by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, in the course of which he took occasion to speak of the Christian fortitude of Mrs. Wheeler, her kindly disposition and the devotion to her family. During the service, her favorite hymn, "Rock of Ages," was rendered. The commitment service was also given and the body was taken to New Brunswick today for interment.

The following merchants has announced that they will close their places of business tomorrow at 12 o'clock noon: The Woodhull & Martin Company, A. E. Force & Co., Levy Brothers and M. & A. Tepper.

—Tomorrow being a legal holiday, Neuman Brothers' store will be closed. Open until 9:30 this evening.

MACHINE VICTIM'S FUNERAL TONIGHT

The funeral of John Patterson, who was killed beneath a press at the Scott factory Saturday noon, will be held at his late home on Netherwood avenue at 8 o'clock tonight. Rev. J. W. Musson, pastor of Faith chapel, will be in charge. The body will be taken tomorrow to Glen Gardner, his former home, for burial.

A further investigation of the fatality throws no further light on the cause beyond the facts stated Saturday. Patterson was chipping a piece of obstructing metal beneath the machine when the loose pulley over which the power belt was running, caught on the axle in some way and started the mechanism. The victim had absolutely no chance to escape. The accident is greatly deployer by the shop officials and the factory has been draped in mourning in respect to his memory.

Patterson was a brother to David Patterson and William Patterson, of Johnston avenue, both of whom are well known machinists. William Patterson was in Chicago for the Scott company when the accident happened. The victim was a member of Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., and Plainfield Lodge, No. 167, I. A. M., both of which will have delegations at the funeral.

Fell Through Show Case.

With a jingling of glass that startled the whole street, Thomas Lynch, a Mount Horeb farm hand, lost his balance on Park avenue Saturday night and fell through a show case in front of a haberdasher's store. Patrolman Vanderweg was attracted by the noise and when he extricated Lynch from the wreckage he discovered that his fall was due to a cargo of red liquor. The unfortunate was locked up and this morning was arraigned before Judge Runyon. He promised to pay for the damage occasioned and as the haberdasher was satisfied sentence was suspended.

Hunt Club Run.

The weekly chase of the Watchung Hunt Club on Saturday afternoon was one of the best of the season and despite the disagreeable weather was enjoyed by a number of riders. At the outset the going was excellent, but toward the windup it became rather sloppy. The members met in Washington Valley and followed a course toward Pedeflous' Hotel, to Bound Brook and then home, covering in all about twelve miles. Lewis E. Waring, as master of the hounds, was in charge, and "Chris." Cumins acted as whip.

Evangelistic Services at Mission.

Rev. Charles S. Dennis, a Bowery evangelist, gave an evangelistic talk at Rhecue Mission last night, opening the two weeks evangelistic campaign to be conducted in this city. He spoke from the topic: "The Wages of Sin is Death," and gave some strong testimony. Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Baker, singing evangelists of Brooklyn, rendered several selections, and William Guest played the cornet. Mr. Dennis will conduct nightly services at the hall for the next two weeks.

Elders and Deacons Installed.

Rev. Dr. Johnson, acting pastor of Trinity Reformed church, conducted the installation services of two elders and three deacons at the church yesterday morning. The elders installed were F. E. Smith and A. L. Force. The third elder, H. J. Martin, Sr., was not able to be present on account of illness in the family. M. F. Gano, E. F. Sheppard and Charles M. Dolliver were the deacons installed.

Fractured Rib by Fall.

While in the bathroom at her home on Grove street Saturday night, Mrs. Horace J. Martin, Jr., slipped in some way and fell, striking the side of the heavy porcelain bathtub. She was assisted to another room and a physician was summoned. Examination showed that a rib o nher left side had been fractured by striking the tub. She is resting more comfortably today.

Election Returns At Theatre.

At tomorrow night's performance of "Girl of Eagle Ranch" at the New Plainfield theatre, Manager Counihan will have election returns read from the stage between the acts. Special arrangements have been made with the telegraph companies to forward results as quickly as received of city, county and State elections. A special performance of the play will be given tomorrow afternoon.

Court Orders Vail's Discharge.

Two juries having failed to convict Charles T. Vail of complicity in the burning of the postoffice building at West Portal, the Hunterdon county courts have ordered his discharge from custody. It is probable that the indictment against Miss Ellen Gillen, of this city, arrested with Vail, will be quashed.

—Neuman Brothers' store will be closed all day tomorrow. Open later this evening for the benefit of customers.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis K. Anderson, who were married last week, are at Atlantic City.

Frank Webster, son of Conductor F. O. Webster, of Duer street, has taken a position on the clerical force of the First National Bank.

UNION REPUBLICAN, 708 MAJORITY

Union county lined up in the Republican ranks by electing every candidate on the ticket. Justice Fort received a majority of 708 although until a late hour this morning the Democrats were claiming victory. He lost Elizabeth, Rahway, Clark township and Springfield township but won in every other district. In Elizabeth the total vote for Fort was 4,350 and for Katzenbach 5,805. Rahway gave Katzenbach a majority of ninety-six. Last year the county was carried by Martine as Democratic candidate for congress.

The Republican candidates for assembly, Moxon, Pierce and Kirstein went through by small majorities while Tuttle, the Democratic candidate for Assembly from Westfield ran well ahead of his ticket. The total vote for him was 10,048.

Surrogate Parrot was re-elected over Gibby by a majority of 316, the totals being 10,932 and 9,616. A hard fight was made for Gibby in various parts of the county. The largest vote of any of the candidates was polled for the Republican candidate for coroner, Donaldson, who received 11,015 against his opponents' 9,643.

BOROUGH IS REPUBLICAN

Townsend Gets Handsome Vote as Unopposed Candidate for Mayor.

"My election, coming without a contest, through the nomination of both parties, is a compliment I greatly prize. While I cannot but feel that it shows a confidence in my desire to act fairly and for the best interest of the borough, it is still more significent as indicating a change from conditions that have sometimes prevailed in past years when factional feeling has often interfered with a calm discussion of public questions. Important matters are to be settled by the borough in the near future and much is gained if they are taken up and decided strictly on their merits."

SAMUEL TOWNSEND.

North Plainfield.

With the mayoralty conceded to Samuel Townsend by both parties, the interest in the election lagged in North Plainfield and a light vote was polled. The voters were quiet and there was no disorder or accident during the entire day. Fort had a majority of 214 and the Republican ticket was as usual victorious, though by a smaller majority than last year. Katzenbach ran ahead of his party. Of the 1,200 voters registered, only 943 voted and there was no special contest on either the county or the local ticket.

FORT ELECTED GOVERNOR BY 6,696

PLAINFIELD'S REPUBLICAN

Fort Gets 1,300 Majority—Runyon Runs Far Behind His Ticket.

J. Franklin Fort received 1,311 majority in Plainfield, a decrease from the normal Republican majority in previous years. The whole Republican ticket went through here by about the same figure, excepting on the local ticket.

Runyon, for city judge, was badly cut, received only 950 majority. His opponent, Hetfield, Sr., won in the second district of the First ward and the second district of the Fourth ward. Montgomery for councilman-at-large, was cut in the Second ward.

The tabulated result will be found in other columns.

In the Second district of the Third ward Robert L. Lee received 154 votes for constable and James Forristel for the same office received 153 votes. The men were nominated more in a spirit of fun. In this same district there were 43 Republican and 18 Democratic tickets scratched.

For Justice of the Peace, Dr. George R. Boston, Republican, received 210 votes in the First district of the Fourth ward, 305 in the Second district and 280 in the Third district. Alexander Gordon, Republican, candidate for the same office, received 211 votes in the First district of this ward, 305 in the Second district and 281 in the Third district.

J. Franklin Fort was elected Governor of New Jersey yesterday by a majority of 6,696. Hudson's terrible slump did the trick and defeated Frank Snowden Katzenbach, the Democratic nominee.

Until noon today the Democrats* claimed a decisive victory, their figures being based on the returns from Hudson giving them 1,800 majority.

Later and more accurate returns from the Democratic stronghold showed that Katzenbach received but 6,000 majority there. Trading for votes for Mark Fagan, the Republican candidate for Mayor, sacrificing Katzenbach.

All morning long it was reported that Katzenbach had won by at least 4,000 and these figures appeared to be accepted by the Newark Evening News, which later furnished The Daily Press with the accurate and complete returns.

State Senator E. R. Ackerman, when he learned the correct returns, was jubiliant over the victory. He said that it showed that full trust could be put in the people and that the result was a vindication for the Republican administration in which the people had the utmost confidence.

J. A. Smith & Bros.' Denial.

The undersigned are informed that a report has been circulated to the effect that the Ackor, Merrall & Condit Company had bought out the business of J. A. Smith & Bro., grocers, of 151 West Front street, Plainfield, N. J. Such a report does a grave injustice to J. A. Smith & Bro., and we desire to deny that there has ever been the slightest foundation for such a statement.

YOUNG MAN HAS NEW THEORY

Human Life Seems Centered In Stomach. All Else Is Secondary.

The immense success which has followed L. T. Cooper during the past year with his new preparation has exceeded anything of the kind ever before witnessed in most of the leading cities where the young man has introduced the medicine. Cooper has a novel theory. He believes that the human stomach is directly responsible for most disease. To quote his own words from an interview upon his arrival in an eastern city: "The average man or woman cannot be sick if the stomach is working properly. To be sure, there are diseases of a virulent nature, such as cancer, tuberculosis, diabetes, etc., which are organic, and are not traceable to the stomach, but even fevers can, in nine cases out of ten, be traced to something taken into the stomach. All of this half-sick, nervous exhaustion that is now so common, is caused by the stomachic conditions, and it is because my remedy will and does regulate the stomach that I am meeting with such success.

"To sum the matter up—a sound digestive apparatus that is doing its full duty, getting every particle of vitality out of all food by transferring it to the bowels in a perfectly digested state—this above all else brings health."

Mr. A. C. Brock, chef of the Brock Restaurant, Market District, Boston, Mass., who is a staunch believer in Mr. Cooper's theory and medicine, has this to say: "I had chronic indigestion for over three years. I suffered terribly, and lost about thirty pounds. I was a physical wreck when I started this Cooper medicine, a month or so ago. Today I am as well as I ever was in my life. I am no longer nervous, my food does not distress me in the least, and I have a splendid appetite. I am gaining flesh very rapidly—in fact, at the rate of a pound a day. I would not believe any medicine on earth could have done for me what this has done. It is a remarkable preparation and Mr. Cooper deserves all his success."

We recommend the Cooper preparations as being remarkable medicines.

One of our clients owed $48 between four people. His salary is $14 weekly; rent $12 monthly. To have paid $2 weekly to each creditor, combined with rent, would have left only $3 per week to meet expenses, buy clothing, etc.—an impossibility you will agree. He borrowed $50, paid all his creditors, made his future credit good, if ever needed; pays his rent, the loan payments, and has $9 each week to use as his judgment dictates.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

There was a large and appreciative audience at the entertainment given Monday night at Friendship Hall for the benefit of the piano fund of the New Market school. The program consisted of vocal and instrumental selections by local talent and the principal feature was the entertainment by J. Wotley Gangloff, of West Dunellen, who made a great hit as humorist and story teller. The proceeds of the affair make the new piano a certainty. A committee consisting of the teachers and pupils was in charge.

The forty hours of devotional service which began Sunday morning came to a conclusion yesterday at St. John's church. It was a celebration of All Saints' Day and there were a series of special masses for the departed.

Funeral service, which will be private, will be held from the house Friday afternoon at two o'clock.

The voters seemed to take but little interest in the election held yesterday. The hardest work of the party workers being to get the stay at homes out. The registry list was the largest the township has ever had, the total number enrolled being 342. Out of this only 271 votes were polled.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

Upward of one hundred entries have been received for the annual fall open golf tournament of the Country Club of Atlantic City, to be held tomorrow, Friday and Saturday. As this will be the last save one of the Northern tournaments this season the amateurs are especially anxious to pay another visit to the course by the sea.

It was back in 1899 that the first golf tournament was held there. Since then, besides being the scene of many stirring matches, the course has also been the battle ground for several championships. In 1901 the amateurs gathered for the national tournament, which was the first important competition where the new golf ball proved a factor. Walter J. Travis went to Atlantic City fully intending to use a solid ball, but in practice the day before the start of the tournament he played with a lively ball, and was so impressed with its advantages that he then and there renounced the gutty and used the rubber core the next day and throughout the whole tournament. How he defeated his old rival, Findlay S. Douglas, in a match that went thirty-eight holes and later beat Walter Egan in the final round is a matter of history.

The intercollegiate Golf Association also held one of its championships there, and J. G. Lindsley, of Harvard, won the individual title. Harvard also won the team competition. Another contest out of the ordinary was the exhibition match, in which Harry Vardon beat the best ball of Douglas and Herbert M. Harriman. The match was a thirty-six-hole affair, and the four times open champion of Great Britain won by 9 up and 8 to play. At the time the course was pronounced by Vardon to be more like a British seaside links than any other he had seen during his travels in this country.

Only last spring the Women's Eastern Golf Association held its second annual championship tournament in conjunction with the tri-city matches for the Clement A. Griscom trophy. Miss Mary B. Adams won the title, after a sensational play-off of a tie with Miss Fanny C. Osgood. The Boston women also won the team match.

Conditions for this week's tournament call for an eighteen-hole medal play qualifying round, contestants to qualify in six sixteens. Those who make up the first sixteen will continue on at match play for the governors' cup, second sixteen for the president's cup, third sixteen for the Atlantic City cup and fourth sixteen for the Northfield cup. Special cups will be offered for the fifth and sixth sixteens. All matches will consist of eighteen holes, and on Saturday there will be an eighteen-hole medal play handicap.

It is expected that Jerome D. Travers, of Montclair, the national champsion, will compete. Travers played at Atlantic City in the spring tournament, winning the low score prize in the qualifying round, but losing at match play. This was one of the few occasions in which he met defeat during the last season. Fred Herreshoff won the chief cup, defeating Dr. Simon Carr, of Philadelphia, in the final round.

A card to show in a dazzling way the exceptional shots a player may accomplish in a sequence of rounds has won for John T. Duff the cup given by the green committee of the Dunwoodie Country Club for the lowest score of selected holes made during the season at competitive medal play. The card represents the best holes made in playing fully 1,800 holes, for Duff has been on the course for at least 100 eighteen hole rounds. His selected score for the 5,748 yard course was 29, 32—61, while the strict Metropolitan Golf Association par is 32½, 38—70½. Going out the especially heartbreaking holes to the others in the races were Duff's 3 on the third and his 2s on the fourth and seventh. On the in holes he had the par figures beaten on every green but the fifteenth, getting the half stroke advantage on the fourteenth, sixteenth and eighteenth and a full stroke on the other greens. The length and strokes are compared in this summary.

Secretary Calkins of the Metropolitan Golf Association has sanctioned the dates of November 28, 29 and 30 for the open tournament of the Country Club of Lakewood.

According to the last of decisions by the St. Andrews rules committee, if there is no local rule a ball played onto a putting green other than the one that is intended must be played from where it is. It is customary in this country to place the ball off the wrong green, but not nearer the hole, without asking what the local rule is. In answering a question as to what should be done when in playing from soft ground the clay or mud and the ball adhered to the face of the club, the committee stated there was no rule to govern the case. The members were of the opinion that the player should have shaken the ball off the club, without penalty, at the spot where the incident occurred.

Many changes are to be made on the course of the Arsdale Golf Club, East Orange, including new holes in place of the eighth and ninth, as the present seventh green is to be extended to take in both holes. A clubhouse is to be built of the most modern style, as the present building is inadequate for the large membership. The club is to issue stock to raise the cost of the improvement. A large proportion has been subscribed for, and President Angus Sinclair has appointed as a financial committee E. S. Miller, W. E. Kastendide, D. C. Nale, A. H. Gussman, D. G. Mason and S. C. Downs.

FOOTBALL.

A cold analysis of the Princeton-Carlisle game easily might show that there was not the strength in the Princeton team that the sixteen points points would indicate. The effective work done in advancing the ball was done in streaks, and it could be argued that there was not the reliability in advancing the ball that may be needed to win from Yale. Suppose the Indians had not foozled the onside kick of the Tigers in the first half that put the latter within scoring distance. Again, the second touchdown was the result of a sudden, unexpected play that for the moment caught the Indians unawares and was not due to steady, irresistible progress, such as is one gauge of a team's strength. Still again, Harlan kicked a difficult goal from the field, which is a matter of individual skill and which no team can very well prevent.

All that is one way of looking at it. But it is not necessarily the right way. It contains "ifs" and it takes away credit from Princeton where she is deserving of much credit. The fact remains that the Nassau men were equal to their scoring opportunities when the arose, and of still more importance is the fact that they created opportunities. The way the Tigers played football last Saturday recalled a pronounced characteristic of DeWitt's successful eleven of 1903. It was cool, patient and watchful in looking for the moments which invited an action that made for victory, was drilled and proficient in being ready when the right moment arrived. The offence was streaky and uneven just as it was in the Cornell game, but there were clearer heads than there were in the Cornell game. While the more speed than power criticism still holds good, the power was there for that first touchdown.

Nearly every Saturday produces something different in the way of encouragement for the various big elevens, and last Saturday it was Princeton who derived the most encouragement from the results. Pennsylvania defeated Lafayette comfortably and is bracing up some, but there was not much of a cheering nature in the games played by Harvard and Yale. Granted that the Indians were cracked up beyond their real strength, they nevertheless are a strong team, strong enough to make the strongest extend itself. Furthermore, even though they did not play their best game on the wet field and did not do or show the form they did against Pennsylvania, it takes good football to beat them by 16 points. Princeton's good football may have been in streaks, but there were enough of the streaks to count heavily in the final returns.

The football team of the Holy Cross Club won from the Westfield A. C. in a game played at Westfield Saturday afternoon. The score was 10-0.

HOSPITAL TAX DEFEATED

Citizens Support Position Taken by the Daily Press Giving 376 Majority.

BIG VOTE POLLED YESTERDAY.

1,092 Ballots Cast for Proposition and 1,472 Against It—Fourth Ward One-Sided.

Decisive defeat met the scheme to "saddle" a part of the support of Muhlenberg Hospital on the city, the result of the special election showing a majority of 376 against the scheme to levy a tax of one-third of a mill on every $100 of taxable property. The stand taken by The Daily Press which was admirably supported by representative citizens, who generously contributed their views to the people through the columns of this paper, was largely responsible for the defeat of the proposition. The Daily Press was the only paper to take a decided stand in the matter and the vote shows that the people agreed with its argument. It was considerably manifestly unjust and illegal to appropriate the people's funds towards the support of a private institution over which the local government has no control.

Taxation with representation, in just proportion, would no doubt have met with the approval of the public but the proposition in the form presented to the people yesterday could never have received general support.

The vote on the scheme follows:

MARTINE AFTER OTHERS FORGOT BROTHER "DAN"

Going to the polls in the First district of the Second ward yesterday to cast his ballot for Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., for Governor, James E. Martine, who was defeated for the Gubernatorial nomination by Katzenbach, was surrounded by a crowd of admirers, many of whom were Republicans. When the "Farmer Orator" had cast his ballot he declared that he had performed a sacred duty.

"I have done what I have been asking thousands of others to do during the last four weeks. I have voted for the next Governor and my brother will do likewise."

"No he won't," shouted a Republican, "he's not registered."

"The dickens he isn't," said Mr. Martine, getting much excited. "Well, he will vote if he has to go before the county judge to get permission. It's a good joke on me, though. I've been drumming up other votes and forgot all about 'Dan's' ballot."

Colonel Dietrich, who was a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln and General Grant, refused to cast his ballot by the new-fangled voting machine.

"Do you think I am such an imbecile," he said to a Daily Press reporter, "that I can't cast my ballot without that infernal machine. I wanted to vote the Republican ticket to get at that James Smith, Jr., of Newark. I'm a friend of Martine, but I won't be insulted by being made to use that machine. To the dickens with it. I won't vote."

Colonel Dietrich, who is a staunch Democrat, then aimed his oratory at "That man Dickinson, who enslaved us with that dickens of an infernal machine. I would get up in the night to vote against him."

AFTER THE P. S. C. AGAIN

Mr. Depew Informs Common Council that it is Not Living Up to Agreement.

TO HAVE NO GROVE RAILS.

Establish New Side Linings—Ordinance Restricting Frame Buildings' Additions Introduced.

Ordinances to establish side lines on Watchung avenue, between the railroad and Crescent avenue and on Madison avenue, between West Fourth and West Seventh streets, and one to lay out and open Evergreen avenue, between Park and Hillside avenues, were adopted at the November meeting of the Common Council, Monday night, after the usual public hearing was granted. No one was present to speak for or against the adoption of the ordinances.

Residents of West Sixth street, between Monroe and Clinton avenues, petitioned for six lights, and Henry H. Apgar and others asked for the extension of a light on West Eighth street. Both were referred and later the petition of Mr. Apgar was granted.

In a communication R. Henry Depew took exception to apparanet failure of the Public Service Corporation to replace the old trolley tracks on West Front street with the modern grove rail, as it promised to do in return for the privilege of double tracking its line. He recalled the statements of Councilmen Ginna and Mellick made at the meeting when the P. S. C. petition was granted, to the effect that the company should abide strictly by the terms of the contract and that the city should give the company a square deal. He believed that the company was getting considerable for practically nothing aside from the share of the expense of brick paving and urged that steps be taken to see that grove rails were laid on West Front street between Park and Madison avenues. The matter was referred.

The offer of Mrs. Frances M. Gross, of West Seventh street and Darrow avenue, to settle a sewer assessment for $44.07 was accepted, an error having been made in the original assessment. The P. S. C. informed the Common Council that several electric lights, as ordered, have been erected and are now in use. Warren B. Travell, who has the contract for erecting the pumping station machinery in connection with the southside sanitary sewer was given an extension of time to December 31, 1907, to complete the work.

Building Inspector Doane reported the granting of twenty-four building permits. Clerk Horace G. Adams, of the district court, reported for the past month receipts of $112.52, expenditures of $34.29, with a balance of $78.23.

President Daniel stated in reference to the work of securing a new contract with the P. S. C., that conferences have been held with the company, and progress is being made. On motion of Mr. Mellick the committee was instructed to report on or before the December meeting.

On motion of Mr. Tooles the request of Watson Whittelsey for the correction of a sewer assessment was denied, it not being within the power of the Common Council to grant the petition. Mr. Ginna reported back the petition of Miss Anna E. Lincoln, adding that her complaint had been attended to by the street committee. On motion of Mr. Montgomery the petition of J. M. Owens and others for a light on Lee place was granted. Two resolutions offered by Mr. Tolles provided for the borrowing of $10,000 on two seperate notes of $5,000 each for sewer improvement work. Another resolution by the same member providing for the borrowing of $10,000 for brick pavement work, was also adopted.

At the suggestion of Mr. Mellick the New Jersey Central will be requested to see that the stone steps leading from Watchung avenue to the railroad station on the northside of the tracks are lighted at night, and at Mr. Tyler's suggestion the company will be asked to have a light placed near the Watchung avenue bridge to light passengers getting off the last car on the long commuter trains arriving in the evening.

An ordinance introduced by Mr. Hibbard, chairman of the fire and building committee, sought to prevent the building of additions and extensions to frame structures in the thickly settled portions of the city within three feet of any other building. The exact application of the ordinance was not clear to Mr. Tyler and other members and it was referred back to the committee for further consideration. It was the opinion of Mr. Tyler that the purpose desired might be defeated under the wording of the ordinance, although Mr. Hibbard explained that Corporation Council had given great care and thought in the preparation of it. On the motion to refer the ordinance back Councilmen Buxton, Hibbard and Daniel voted in the negative and Councilmen Ginna, Gloak, Mellick, Montgomery, C. C. Randolph, Tolles and Tyler in the affirmative.

When the Common Council adjourned it did so to meet on Monday night, November 18.

BOARD OF EDUCATION HEARS MR. LOVELL'S REPORT.

At the regular meeting of the city Board of Education held at the high school Monday night, routine business, including action on the usual big budget of bills, occupied the time of the session. Mr. Abbott was the only member absent. The custodian's report for the past month was read, showing $5,700.20 received from the tax collector and a balance of $10,033.84 on hand. The amount from taxes is much less than last year.

Leander N. Lovell presented the fiancial report, which will be made public within a few days. It is the first report under the new system of keeping the school accounts, adopted last year. The medical report from Doctors Tomlinson and VanHorn showed that during the past month 331 pupils have been examined and stated that examinations would be continued. Superintendent Maxson secured the ratification of his appointment of Miss Adelaide G. Ball as city truant officer and announced that the annual report of the city schools was practically ready and would be issued about January 1. He announced the division of the current school term and the vacations, which have already been made public.

VACATION FRIENDS MEET.

Ram's Horn Camp Guests Reunite at Reception and Dance.

One hundred and fifty young people from this city, Newark, Elizabeth, New York, Brooklyn and Easton, who were guests of Ram's Horn Camp, Lake Hopatcong, last summer, enjoyed a reception and dance at the Casino Monday night. The affair was arranged and conducted by "Jack" Hall, who was the managing head of the summer resting place, and was a success in every particular. Suhr's Imperial orchestra furnished music for the dancing and rendered an informal program during an intermission.

The dance was the first of a series of similar affairs that will be conducted during the winter with the idea of continuing the pleasant relations began in vacation time.

THE UNDERGRADE WON

Alumni Team Defeated by City High School Football Team.

NEW STYLE FOOTBALL PLAYED.

Double Forward Pass, Basketball Passing and Quarter-Back Run Makes Lighter Team Victorious.

Though outweighed many pounds to the man, the city high school football team clearly demonstrated the advantages of the open style of play on Hope Common yesterday morning, scoring three touchdowns against a team made up of the younger alumni of the school by a combination of trick plays and forward passes. The score was 22 to 6. The opposing team played straight, linebucking football and were repeatedly held for downs by the good defensive work of the undergraduate team, on which Loizeaux and Lyness broke up play after play.

The game was witnessed by a crowd of nearly 500 pupils of the school and enthusiasts of the game. The undergraduates played fast football from the whistle. They received the kickoff and the fourth time they lined up over the ball, Doane got the ball on a long forward pass and ran 25 yards for a touchdown. Phillips kicked the goal and when the alumni got together again the score was 6-0 against them and but three minutes of the time was gone.

Receiving the ball on the next kick-off, the alumni eleven rushed it to the undergraduates' 2-yard line, where they were held for downs. They soon recovered it, for the school boys were forced to punt, and Jack Douglass went over the line after a series of smashing plays through the left wing. Flanders kicked the goal and the half ended soon afterwards with the score a tie.

But it was in the second half that the mystifying, basketball tactics of the undergraduates won the game. Time after time the forward pass was used, the ball hurled through the air eighteen or twenty yards at a time, was caught in each instance without a fumble, and the alumni team, and with them the old style of scholastic football, went down and out before the accuracy rather than the power of the opposing team. The alumni kicked off, and on the very first lineup, Doane got the ball by the air line and ran forty yards without interference for the schoolboys' second touchdown. The pass had been clear over the scrimmage line and he had a clear field ahead. But still the undergraduates weren't satisfied. With the score 11-6 in their favor, Loizeaux passed the ball to Murphey, and he threw it nearly twenty yards to Snyder, who ran the intervening thirty yards for the touchdown. The play, a double forward pass, was accurately executed, and caused a big uproar among the rooters; even the alumni could not help commending the play. Phillips missed the goal, and the alumni braced up and had the ball see-sawing up and down the field for many minutes. There was lots of punting, and finally Loizeaux, took the ball at quarter-back, and ran sixty yards for still another touchdown. Phillips kicked the goal.

After this, the high school put in several substitutes and the teams had a punting contest until time was called. The line-up and summaries:

P. H. S.—Doane, Snyder, le; Fountain, Lyness, lt; Morris, Sewell, lg; Titsworth, c; Fleming, rg; Hammond, rt; Phillips, re; Loizeaux (captain), Riffert, quarter-back; Bingaman, Caldwell, Smalley, rhb; Murphey, lhb; Lyness, Bingaman, fb.

TOWNSHIP CANDIDATE SPOKE.

Despite the heavy downpour of rain Saturday night the Township Improvement Society meeting held at Berkeley Heights was well attended. Frank C. Shaffer, the president of the society, in opening up the meeting said that the society is not a political organization, but was composed of a majority of the voters of the township Republicans and Democrats, the object of the special meeting was to discuss thoroughly the matter of electric lights, reducing the number of the board of education from nine to three, and the readjustment of the assessments of the township.

William Jeffery explained the vital points of these matters very carefully in a 45-minute speech, and was stopped several times by long and united applause. Of the two candidates for membership of the Township Committee, Henry S. Fullerton, Republican, was the only one to show up. He had to drive over two miles in the heavy rain, arriving a little after nine o'clock. Mr. Fullerton, in an address to the society, stated that it has always been his policy to keep the tax rate as low as possible, but that if the voters want electric lights, they felt the same way as he, for he wants them and will do everything he can to facilitate the early installation of the same in the township, after the people had voted for an appropriation.

Resolutions were passed unanimously thanking Mr. Fullerton for declaring himself on up-to-date matters, and promising him the support of the society. Two other resolutions were passed, one that the number of the board of education be reduced from nine to three, the other resolution was that the assessments of the township for the purposes of taxation be readjusted, and that William Jeffrey was appointed a committee to see the assessor and the county board and report the proper and direct way to accomplish the same.

Among the throng who attended the reception of the New York Water Color Club given Friday evening in the Fine Arts building was George Wharton Edwards, of Franklin place.

Resolutions were passed unanimously thanking Mr. Fullerton for declaring himself on up-to-date matters, and promising him the support of the society. Two other resolutions were passed, one that the number of the board of education be reduced from nine to three, the other resolution was that the assessments of the township for the purposes of taxation be readjusted, and that William Jeffrey was appointed a committee to see the assessor and the county board and report the proper and direct way to accomplish the same.

Boynton Square Pot Furnaces

The latest and most important improvement in furnace construction is the patent Square Pot used exclusively in Boynton Furnaces and making them the most easily operated, the most economical, the most efficient heaters in the world.

The Square Pot, unlike the old-fashioned round pot, has a grate area equal to that of the ashes, cleaning as well at the sides as in the middle.

The walls are perpendicular, hence no clogging, resulting in quicker and more sensitive combustion, less waste of fuel, and a constantly active radiation.

Grate bars of equal length and motion; the ash pit is square and deep—everything is designed to reduce your work to a minimum.

Settle the heating question at once by letting your plumber, steam-fitter or tinsmith show what the square pot means to you. Found only in Boyntons.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for steam or hot water. Also ranges.

Mr. Barnes, American

By Archibald Clavering Gunter

Author of Mr. Barnes of New York, Mr. Potter of Texas, That Frenchman, etc.

A Sequel to Mr. Barnes of New York

COPYRIGHT, 1907, DODD MEAD & CO. N.Y.

Then he opens the second letter from the American detective, dated June 2d. It contains a receipted bill from the Grand, that he had paid for Mr. Barnes, and also a statement that young Bernardo Salicetl had arrived from Ajaccio on the Wednesday boat, but so far as Emory could discover, had met no one in Marseilles, though he had received some telegrams.

"Lady Chartris Runs Up Stairs, and Returning, Places an Epistle in Burton's Hand."

"I am onto this young Corsican cock-a-doodle," wrote the detective, "and as I find he is leaving for a trip along the coast toward Nice I shall follow him to see if he will lead me to the head villain.

"I've also written to Perrier, whom you can trust, to look out for you. His address in Nice is 239 Rue Palermo. You mention to him 'Vendetta,' and he'll know you and reply, 'Marseilles.'"

It ended with a curious postscript. "I have just discovered that young Salicetl's first stop is St. Tropez."

Mr. Barnes has very little time to turn these communications over in his mind, for he is interrupted by a sudden swish of short skirts and Maud, standing beside his, demands: "How much for mamma's other suitor?"

"I don't believe I want him. Miss Bribery and Corruption," mutters Burton, being anxious to reflect upon Emory's letters.

"Not curious to know of the man who brought mamma home yesterday?" she asks eagerly, "the chappie who kissed her sure; but whether her hand or her lips, I couldn't see," grins the girl.

"Indeed, who is the ardent gallant?" sneers Barnes, indifferently.

The answer that comes strikes the American's nerve centers.

"Count Corregio Cipriano Danella," remarks Miss Chartris, affably. "You know his poor brother, Musso, is dead."

"What, the fellow who gave Marina the letter in the Marseilles depot that made her faint?" The light of battle springs into Barnes' face. "You put me within ten paces of that gentleman with the scar over his eye, Maudie," he remarks slowly, "and you shall die of bonbons."

Here Miss Chartris shocks his nerve centers again.

"Oh, he's not scarry at all!" cries Maud, indignantly. "That dissipated looking creature is not Corregio Cipriano Danella. Corsican hat and plumes—so romantic—in deep black—so sad—manners like a dancing master—quite actor-like, too. He buttered me all over with compliments till my pigtails stood on end with joy. While ma was primping after her drive, we played rolly pooly on the green and I told him how a chap who had a kind of family likeness to him had mashed Marina and passed her a billet doux that knocked her silly in the Marseilles railroad station.

"Then somehow he jollied me along till I got gay and told him how anxious you were to buy the letter from me, and I—I only had sold you the three-quarters of it that I had picked up on the floor of the depot—the part that didn't give anything away."

"Then you have the other part?"

Burton's tone is so searching, his manner so severe that Maud dare not tell him, and falters out a lie: "Of course, I haven't. Didn't I tell you I only picked up what I gave you?"

Barnes has risen and is striding determinedly back to the house, a definite resolution upon his set face.

BOOK TWO.

CHAPTER VII.

Maud's Confidences.

Miss Chartris pursues him along the walk between the citron and the orange trees, asking affrightedly: "Why do you look so terrible?"

For Barnes is meditating sardonically: "If it were only the scar-faced devil, I'd kill him on sight as I would a rattlesnake. But this one who has turned up here, the real Corregio Cipriano Danella, what has he done to me that I can at present justly destroy him? Neither Emory nor myself, from the signature on his check, could say dastard threat against my coming bride would make me send Cip to the devil in very short order. But I must have proof."

A moment later her mother sweeps affably down to him. During Barnes' perusal of Emory's letters and enjoyment of Maud's confidences, Prunella has made a toilette that seems more elaborate than would be called forth by the arrival of relatives.

"What, back again so soon?" says the widow, pleasantly, leading Barnes to her parlor.

"Yes," observes that gentleman, "I forgot to mention that the reason you could treat us en famille is that tomorrow I am about to wed—"

"Enid!" screams the lady. "Oh, you darling boy!" and gives him a sudden, whole-souled kiss. After a moment she says deprecatingly: "This sudden mating will not permit of a grand wedding." Then, her eyes growing excited at the thought of social success, she exclaims: "Of course, the town is growing deserted, but Adelaide Carrington at the De la Mediterranee, Milly Portman of the De Rome and Lilly Vivian at the Hotel des Anglais, are three charming English girls who will be delightful bridesmaids for Enid. Besides, Edwin could invite the officers of her majesty's Opal, which is lying off Monte Carlo. Oh, it shall be the most important wedding this season in the Riviera."

"It is the most important wedding to me," remarks Barnes, solemnly, "but it will be the most private one. Enid and I are only anxious to be wed. I must beg you to say nothing about this to anyone." The gentleman's tone is deferential but imperative. "To-night I shall drive into Nice and see the pastor of the English church. Here in this parlor, to-morrow evening, he shall say, by the blessing of God, the words that will make my darling mine."

"Oh, of course, if you so desire it, Burton," answers Prunella, affably. "I suppose Enid thinks she can manage some kind of a wedding gown by to-morrow evening."

"Anyway, that's the time," observes Barnes, quietly. All the while he is studying Lady Chartris, wondering if her appearance has attracted Corregio Cipriano Danella, or whether the Corsican has in some subtle way learned this is the retreat of the pursued, and is here on account of family vengeance.

"There is slight possibility that a man of 35 can be attracted by cosmetics," muses the American. Then he suddenly asks: "Has anyone called here for me?"

"Nobody, I believe. The only person I observed in Nice who knew you was la Belle—" Lady Chartris' cheeks glow with modest blushes of an English widow as she checks herself in the mentioning the awful Blackwood.

Barnes blushes also. When a man of the world is about to wed youth and purity, the follies of his wilder youth seem shomeful things. So he cuts off this mention of the great American adventuress by saying shortly: "Mr. Emory, my agent, has not been for me yet?"

"Why, no, I haven't heard of Emory since we left Marseilles," remarks his hostess.

"Ask your servants, please. This matter is important."

Lady Chartris goes out and after a few minutes returns and says that she has questioned everyone in the house and they all assert that nobody since their arrival at the villa had called and asked for Mr. Barnes. "But if you don't bring your party on shore," prattles Prunella, "they'll be late for dinner, and—my goodness! I had forgotten—I have an engagement in Nice this evening, so I'll have to be leaving immediately after."

The additional tint upon the lady's cheeks shows that it is a love tryst.

"All right, I've got to see that minister," replies Barnes, easily, "so, if you'll be so good, you can drive me in to Nice. Now I'll get our party on shore." He lights a cigar and strolls rapidly down to the little landing place between ilex trees and oleanders, the thoughts of his coming nuptials raising his spirits.

"Since the new Danella is here, I'm glad to know it," he thinks. "A discovered danger is better than a hidden one. Who the deuce is that scar-faced scoundrel?"

Emory was to be here by the 4th—this very day. It's nearly expired and no signs of the detective, a man that Barnes knows is prompt in his appointments. "What can this mean?"

This is his reflection as he is in the boat being rowed alongside of the Wildfowl, for Edwin has had the yacht warped tolerably close to the landing stage, and the little pleasure vessel, looking like a slovenly merchant schooner, is now lying not over a hundred yards away from where the soft waters flap lazily upon the grounds of Lady Chartris' villa.

Barnes climbs hastily on board, takes the lieutenant to the retirement of the stern and rapidly tells him of the appearance of the true Corregio Cipriano Danella. "This complicates matters," he whispers. "The scar-faced scoundrel we could have put out of the way without compunction, but till this new arrival does some overt act I hesitate at sending him to Kingdom Come!"

"So we have been blaming these letters on the real Count Danella, when some other land pirate has been doing the dirty business," mutters Edwin, disgustedly.

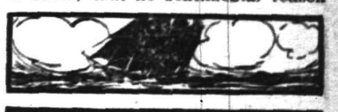
"Of that I am not absolutely sure," answers Burton; then he asks: "Has Marina yet told you what her note contained?"

"Why, I was questioning her on that only a little while ago and she simply begged me to trust her. You see, I'm getting more and more anxious about her. As the time for landing gets nearer my bride grows more pale, more nervous, more despairing," sighs the young Englishman.

"And my sweetheart becomes more resolute, more determined. Bless her pluck, she is singing in the cabin now!" whispers Mr. Barnes.

"And yet," remarks her brother, gloomily, "my bride was as brave as Enid is, before her wedding. Can Marina know of some hidden danger of which my sister doesn't dream?"

"Then you're not the man I think you," answers Barnes, almost savagely, "if you, her husband, don't get it out of her. Don't you see, you've got to know; that no sentimental reason



"Are We Never Going on Shore to Dinner?"

should stand between you and everything that is in your wife's mind, Edwin?"

"All right, Marina shall tell me to-night," answers the young sailor, determinedly. "But there's one thing we've got to do first, that's to see our girls are mighty safe for the present. I've fixed it, I think, pretty well with Graham. We leave the cook and one man aboard as anchor watch, and the mate takes his Scotch tars ashore and keeps careful lookout all night about the grounds."

"You've told them I'll reward them liberally?" remarks Barnes.

Y. M. C. A. WINS FROM BUSINESS MEN, 57 TO 11.

In a practise basketball game between the business men's five and the regular team of the Y. M. C. A., the association five rolled up a score of 56 points against their opponents, winning the game, 56-11. The business men were outclassed from the very first. For the association five, Rumsey and Collier did the best work, the former caging the ball eight times from the floor and the latter seven. J. H. Doane made all the baskets for the business men's team, passing the ball through the iron ring four times. The work of Jarvis at right guard was a feature and he held John Loizeaux to two baskets, guarding closely. The summaries:

Y. M. C. A.—John Loizeaux, lf; Rumsely, rf; Collier, c; Gavett, lg; Hoagland, Miner, rg. Business Men—Spicer, lf; Doane, rf; Dunning, Browning, c; Jarvis, rg; Browning, Stevens, lg.

Goals from the floor: Rumsey, 8; Collier, 7; Miner, 4; Hoagland, 2; Gavett, 2; Loizeaux, 2; Doane, 4. Goals from fouls: Collier, 3; Browning, 3; Rumsey, Gavett, Miner. Referee, Charles B. Morse. 15 and 20 minutes halves.

DUNELLEN, 35; VELOX A. C., 0.

Dunellen had an easy time with the Velox A. C., from Irvington, outweighing them and out-playing them, so that the final score was 35-0. The game was played on the local field yesterday morning. Touchdowns were made by Tyler 2, Smith 2, Manning 2, Maltby. The local team got three touchdowns in the first half. The teams lined up as follows:

Dunellen—Pierce, l.e.; Dinneen, l.t.; Dantz, l.g.; Meyer, c.; Logan, r.g.; Tyler, r.t.; Rutledge, r.e.; Manning, q.b.; Smith, l.h.b.; Maltby, f.b.; Lake (captain), r.h.b.

Socces Football.

At a meeting held last week, the Plainfield Association Football Club decided to form another team, and name it "Class B Team." This cation is taken because there are so many players available and with a little practice the second team will give the first eleven the needed training. M. J. Connors has been elected captain, S. M. McNiece, vice-captain, and W. H. Whittsbone secretary.

WHAT IT WILL BE we hardly dare predict, with contracts out for even more extensive improvements and twelve more handsome residences.

Experience on a Torpedo Boat.

Dr. Richard Moldenke has returned from Norfolk, Va., where he was conducting coal tests for "Uncle Sam" on the torpedo boat "Biddle." Dr. Moldenke reports a speed of thirty miles an hour in a hard storm with coal briquettes, manufactured by a Virginia coal company. He says thirty miles an hour on top of a torpedo boat at sea, with the waves washing over the boat while you are clinging to the railing is considerably more thrilling than fifty miles an hour in an automobile on a smooth road!

REPUBLICANS CARRIED THE STATE BY OVER 7,000

Democrats Blame "Boss" Davis for Defeat, Charging Treason in Hudson County.

ESSEX COUNTY IS FOR FORT.

James Smith, Jr., Talks Plainly—Votes Were Swapped In Democratic Stronghold.

After the smoke of battle has rolled away, it has been found that the results announced by this paper immediately after the big political conflict were the most complete and accurate of any published in Union county. The Daily Press announced that Mr. Fort had carried the State by 6,696 and the only change to be made shows a slight difference in the vote in Essex county. Fort has carried Essex county by about 450, the returns yesterday giving it to Katzenbach by about 250.

Hudson Treachery.

Through the State yesterday there was some comment on the slump in Hudson, where the apparent Democratic pluralities dwindled by leaps. There were many hints that Katzenbach had been traded for a Democratic mayor for Jersey City. In that city Wittpenn's plurality for mayor is about 9,324, while Katzenbach's in the city was but 3,178. Some yesterday intimated that a State had been traded for a city, and they pointed to the Jersey City ripper bill, signed only a few days ago, as confirmatory evidence. That bill will give Robert Davis control of all Jersey City, for all of Fagan's appointees go out when he does, under the ripper act.

Hudspath Accuses Davis.

"It was Hudson county that defeated Katzenbach," said ex-Senator Hudspeth, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, late yesterday afternoon, when the last ray of hope had vanished and the election of Fort was conceded. "We expected Hudson would give 12,000 or more," he said, "and the early returns last night from Jersey City and other sections of the county indicated that it would be 16,000, and that we safely had the State. But it fell to less than 7,000 and we were beaten."

The vote in Hudson county was: Katzenbach, 40,881; Fort, 34,207; Katzenbach's plurality, 6,674. Last November Wittpenn, who was the Democratic nominee for supervisor, carried the county by 22,000, but he had the support of the Faganites, as he was opposed by a Dickinson Republican, Clarence Walker.

Fagan Thrashed.

Mayor Fagan, the heretofore invincible candidate, who had thrice been chosen as the chief executive officer of the city, received the worst thrashing that ever was administered to a candidate for the office he has filled with so much distinction. He failed to carry any of the twelve wards and led in only seven of the 109 election districts. He was beaten by Republican votes. He fell far behind Fort, who was beaten by 3,178 in the city.

Fagan was openly opposed by the Dickinsonites, who contended that he had cut away from the party organization. Mayor Fagan made his fight mainly on the anti-boss issue. It was the third time he used it, and it was ineffective. He insisted in retaining as his chief adviser George L. Record, who was bitterly attacked. The saloonkeepers as a rule opposed him for increasing the license from $250 to $500, and many of the clergy antagonized him because they claimed the Sunday law was not properly enforced. One of the minor causes was the enmity of the disappointed officeseekers, an accumulation of the six years he had held the office. He fought the favored railway corporations and forced the Legislature to make radical changes in the law, and the railroad companies are now paying a larger share of the taxes than they did. His fight was for equal taxation. He was opposed by a young man who had made an enviable reputation as county supervisor, H. Otto Wittpenn. With Fagan went down his candidates.

Jersey City.

The vote in Jersey City for Governor was: Katzenbach, 23,017; Fort, 19,839; Katzenbach's plurality, 3,178. The vote for State Senator was: Fielder (Dem.), 24,028; Seitz (Rep.) 18,894; Fielder's plurality, 5,134.

The defeat of Mayor Fagan means the retirement on January 1 of a large number of competent officials, for under the new law all of his appointees will go out except those holding fiduciary offices—the City Treasurer, the City Controller and two of the five members of the Board of Finance. Kinkead, by virtue of his office as President of the Board of Aldermen, becomes also a member of the Finance Board, and as Mayor-elect Wittpenn will appoint two he will have control of the department which makes the appropriations.

Jim Smith Says:

"I am loath to believe it, in spite of the evidence," said ex-Senator Smith, whose words carry great weight in the Democratic councils of New Jersey, last evening at his home in Newark. "It was said early in the campaign that Dickinson, Davis & Co. would do this thing, but I did not believe it, and Mr. Katzenbach, in his speech that opened the campaign in Jersey City, expressed his disbelief in its possibility.

"I am astounded at the result. The State, outside of Hudson, did splendidly, and I am at a loss to account for the discrepancy there, for I cannot bring myself to believe that it was the result of treachery. If it was we shall learn it."

No campaign in recent decades of New Jersey political history has been so marked by surprises and doubts. Early yesterday morning State reports, unusually belated, began to arrive in such form that the election of Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., was looked upon as a certainty. A few Democratic wards of Newark remained to be heard from, while the exact Democratic plurality in Hudson county was also unannounced. The trend of the State returns elsewhere showed Democratic gains, some hitherto Republican strongholds appearing under the banner of the opposite party.

Newark's missing wards supplied the first surprise. At 3 o'clock yesterday morning it was found that the Democratic pluralities were cut down, and following the announcement that the entire Essex Republican Assembly ticket had been elected came the statement that Essex had given its vote to Fort. When it developed later yesterday that the county had given Katzenbach a few hundred plurality, it was too late to make any difference in the situation, for the Hudson county disaster had been brought to light.

Legislature Republican.

The Republican party will again be in complete control of the State. The Assembly, which this year had a Democratic majority, will be overwhelmingly Republican through the defeat of the Democratic nominees in Essex and the election of the Republican county ticket by pluralities ranging from 2,000 to 3,000. The Democrats made a gain of but one in the Senate. Ocean county repudiated Senator George L. Shinn and elected William J. Harrison, Democrat, by an almost unprecedented plurality of 1,350. The rebuke to the Ocean Senator was doubly forceful when it is considered that the county was carried by Fort by 500.

The next House of Assembly will stand: Republicans, 40; Democrats, 20. This year it stood 31 Democrats to 29 Republicans, the gain of eleven being due to the local turnover. The Senate will stand 14 to 7 Republican instead of 15 to 6.

Mercer's Tribute.

Mercer county paid its native son, Katzenbach, a high tribute. Three years ago Governor E. C. Stokes carried Mercer for the G. O. P. by almost 3,000, while it gave Katzenbach a plurality of 757 on Tuesday, according to the latest returns, while the Republican county ticket won out by a big margin. Mr. Katzenbach failed to carry his home district and ward, while Mr. Fort won out in his neighborhood by a big vote.

Counties Lined Up.

Fort carried Essex, Atlantic, Bergen, Burlington, Camden, Cape May, Cumberland, Gloucester, Morris, Ocean, Passaic, Salem, Somerset and Union counties, a total of 14, while Hudson, Hunterdon, Mercer, Middlesex, Monmouth, Sussex and Warren, 7, were carried by Katzenbach.

Charles C. Black, of Hudson county, Democratic Gubernatorial nominee in 1904, carried only four counties, and received a smaller plurality in his home county of Hudson than was given to Katzenbach. That fact is offered in refutiation of the charge of a deal sacrificing the Democratic standard-bearer for Wittpenn.

Monmouth county, with its big Democratic plurality for the entire ticket, was one of the surprises of the year. County Clerk "Joe" McDermott had promised a big vote for Fort, and the leaders generally looked for the county to stay in the Republican column. The official count there will place Katzenbach close to 1,500 in the lead.

Morris' Big Majority.

Morris county was in line with more than the Republican State Committee had dared to hope for, while Camden county turned ouet a winning majority that was the largest for Fort in all the State. Atlantic county exceeded expectations with its Fort plurality of 1,464, while Cumberland, Bergen and Burlington "delivered the goods" to the gratification

CONGRATULATE MR. FORT

Katzenbach's Telegram Followed by those of Ackerman, Frelinghuysen and Fisk.

SEND THEIR BEST WISHES.

Governor-elect Also Receives Messages From Vice President Fairbanks, Fagan, Voorhees and Wood.

"John Franklin Fort,
"East Orange, N. J.
"I send heartiest congratulations and best wishes for a successful administration.
"FRANK S. KATZENBACH, JR."

"We have met the enemy and they are ours. The people can confidently expect an able, independent and honest administration. Good wishes and congratulations."—Ernest R. Ackerman.

"You fought a good fight and won. Accept hearty congratuations."—Joseph S. Frelinghuysen.

"Accept best congratulations on your election for Governor."—Chas. J. Fisk.

"Accept my hearty congratulations and best wishes on the result of yesterday."—John Kean.

Governor-elect John Franklin Fort had little time yesterday to do anything but receive and answer the telegrams of congratulation that poured in upon him from all over the State and from other States, and an attempt made by a reporter to obtain a statement as to what policies he would pursue as Governor, as well as his opinion on the issues of the day, was fruitless.

"I have not yet had time to get things straightened," the successful candidate declared, "and am not ready to make any such statement."

Mr. Fort repudiated the interview published in a New York evening paper.

Governor Stokes' message to Mr. Fort was as follows:

"You have won a great personal victory and have my hearty congratulations. I am happy and content.
"E. C. STOKES."

Another from Vice President Fairbanks ran:

"I most heartily congratulate you upon the splendid victory you have won and wish you a great administration.
"CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS."

Former Governor Voorhees sent the following:

"None happier than I. This crowns the quartet of '95. Sincerest good wishes.
"FOSTER M. VOORHEES."

From Congressman Richard Wayne Parker:

"Accept my warmest congratulations on your magnificent victory."

From Dr. Willis Fletcher Johnson:

"Heartiest congratulations on your splendid victory—a triumph of manliness."

One from Congressman Henry C. Loudenslager read:

"I congratulate the people and the Republican party of the State of New Jersey on your election. You made a gallant fight, overcoming many obstacles. May the end of your term find a united party and a prosperous and approving people."

Bloomfield H. Minch, president of the Senate, telegraphed:

"My sincerest congratulations and best wishes."

Mark M. Fagan, defeated for Mayor in Jersey City, wired:

"Accept my heartiest congratulations upon your victory."

This from Senator Samuel K. Robbins, of Burlington:

"Accept heartiest congratulations on your election."

From Congressman Ira C. Wood:

"Congratulations on your splendid plurality."

From General Bird W. Spencer:

"I am one of those who never doubted, and do not doubt now; so send hearty congratulations."

From William M. Johnson, of Hackensack:

"Accept warmest congratulations and best wishes."

From some admirer in West Orange:

"Hearty congratulations. Sorry we did not do better in West Orange, but result owing to forty-nine saloons and one traitor."

Governor-elect Fort wired his message in reply to Mr. Katzenbach early in the day.

In reply to Mayor Faga's telegram Governor-elect Fort sent the following:

"In your defeat the whole State recognizes the loss of an honest, courageous, public-spirited official. I greatly regret it."

VIEWS ON THE RETURNS

State Senator E. R. Ackerman Says People Have Rewarded Honesty.

MR. FISK'S OPINION ON SAME.

County Chairman F. H. Smith, Senator J. S. Frelinghuysen and Others Give Their Ideas.

"Individual success should be measured by the obstacles overcome. This also applies to a political party. The victory of the Republican party must therefore be considered very great, if not remarkable, when the nature, extent and force of the opposition has been fully considered. The Republican party had to face and contend with unusual conditions in the campaign which has ended so successfully.

"The people of the State by their verdict at the polls have justly rewarded candor and honesty in the handling of public questions.

"The courageous declaration by the Republican party and its candidates on the excise question have an energy and enthusiasm to the Republican cause which largely assisted in the final result without which the outcome would probably have been much different. The square, direct and public announcement by Judge Fort on the questions of the day interested and challenged the respect of the voters.

"The returns unquetionably indicate that the voters of New Jersey stand as firm as a rock for the time-honored institutions and customs of the State; that they are ready and willing to reward those who are right, who have the courage of their convictions and who have the boldness to express them."—E. R. Ackerman.

"I am immensely pleased. It was pitch dark when Katzenbach's election was reported, but with the light of day came the tidings of a Republican victory. Could anything have been more appropriate."—Charles J. Fisk.

"The result shows clearly that the people in general have confidence in the Republican party. Never in its history has New Jersey enjoyed such good government and general prosperity as during the twelve years of Republican administration. Mr. Fort's fight was won because he stood for honest and unequivocal principles. He will make a splendid Governor."—Frank H. Smith.

"How could it have been otherwise?"—Joseph S. Frelinghuysen.

"It was only what I expected. Honesty and good faith always win."—Andrew McCardell.

"The people simply placed on record the fact that they have the best government."—Herbert Buxton.

"You can trust the people all the time."—Walter L. Hetfield, Jr.

"We owe the victory largely to the better class of Democrats who came to the front when the so-called Anti-Roosevelt Republicans deserted their party."—Charles Arthur Reed.

"Sincerely believing that Mr. Fort will stand for the best traditions and the New Ideas in government, I am glad that Republicanism triumphed."—William N. Runyon.

DRINK RECORD BROKEN

Prisoner in City Court Admits Taking Six.

For the first time in the history of the city court, a prisoner was arraigned this morning who admitted taking more than three drinks. He gave his name as Charles Marks and in pleading guilty to a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct at his boarding house on Orange place said it was due to the fact that he had imbibed three lagers, two whiskies and a glass of ale. He was so perfectly frank about the whole acair and so extremely penitent that Judge Runyon didn't have the heart to punish him, and suspended sentence.

Marks was arrested by Roundsman Higgins at 12 o'clock last night on complaint of Mrs. Britton, of Orange place, who said he had picked a quarrel with another boarder and in attempting to hit him had struck her. The prisoner's penitence also won her forgiveness, but he received instructions to take his trunk elsewhere.

Empires Enter the Field.

CONSECRATE ALL SAINTS

Rt. Rev. Dr. Scarborough and Many of His Clergy Takes Part in Ceremony.

BISHOP MADE AN ADDRESS.

Rev. Dean Rodman Preaches and Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson Also Takes a Prominent Part in Service.

Despite the downpour of rain yesterday morning, All Souls' church, Scotch Plains, was filled to its capacity on the occasion of the consecration of the structure by Bishop John Scarborough. Scores of clergymen from nearby cities and towns attended and took part in the impressive service of consecration, carried on by the Bishop and clergy according to the Episcopal prayer book form. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, read the consecration service and Rev. Fred B. Carter, of St. Luke's church, Montclair, read the lessons; Rev. Charles L. Cooder, of St. Paul's church, Rahway, read the epistle, and Rev. William H. Nellson, of East Ninth street, read the gospel. During the service there was special music by the vested choir under the direction of James H. Buckley, the church organist.

The sermon was preached by Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, rector-emeritus of Grace church. He took his text from verses 4 and 5 of the 132nd Psalm, "I will not give sleep to mine eyes or slumber to mine eyelids until I find a place for the Lord, a habitation for the mighty God of Jacob." Dr. Rodman's remarks were largely of a historical and congratulatory nature and he summarized at length the growth of the parish and its sturggle to become free from debt. One of the prime movers for an Episcopal church in Fanwood borough was the late Charles Kyte, to whom the speaker alluded in words of tribute. The desire of Mr. Kyte's life was to have an Episcopal church in the borough, and it was to this end that he worked.

The cornerstone was laid by Bishop Scarborough in October, 1882, almost exactly twenty-five years ago, and the building was carried on by a small group of the parishioners, some of whom were present at yesterday's consecration service. The building was mortgaged for about $5,000 and through the efforts of the women of the parish, $3,000 of this had been paid off. Recently the sum necessary to completely cancel the mortgage was raised, but when a committee from the committee went to pay off the mortgage, the woman who held it refused to accept the money and cancelled the balance, turning over the amount of this last payment to the parish. Dr. Rodman spoke especially of the good work of the late Rev. Charles L. Sykes, the first rector of the parish, and an earnest worker during the many years he was in charge.

At the conclusion of the sermon, the Bishop made a few congratulatory remarks to the parishioners, alluding with commendation to their untiring efforts to cancel the church debt and congratulating the present rector, Rev. W. R. Mulford upon parish growth. At the conclusion of the service, Rev. Arthur S. Phelps, of St. Paul's church, Bound Brook, administered the Holy Communion to a large number of the congregation.

After this service, the clergy and congregation adjourned to the Fanwood fire house, where a luncheon was served by the women of the parish. The committee in charge of the affair assisted Mrs. H. P. Robinson and Mrs. Christianson. At the luncheon these were informal remarks by the Bishop, Dr. Rodman, Rev. T. Moore-Smith, of the Scotch Plains Baptist church and W. R. Mulford, present rector of All Souls. Among the clergy at the luncheon were Rev. Arthur Searing Peck, of St. Stephen's; Rev. H. H. Sleeper, of Grace church, Elizabeth; Rev. Mr. Kerwin, his curate; Rev. Mr. Sweezey, of Christ church, Shrewsbury; Rev. Frederick K. Carter, of Montclair, and Rev. Harris Rush, formerly rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, at Clinton avenue.

They will be gone about two weeks.

HELD UP AND ROBBED ON LEHIGH FREIGHT TRAIN

Thomas Johnson, a coal miner beating his way from New York to his home at Packerton, Pa., reported to the station master of the Lehigh Valley depot at South Plainfield last night that he had been held up and robbed on board a freight train.

Three men entered the car in which he was riding and while pretending to be friendly, suddenly instructed him to throw up his hands. they immediately rifled his pockets, taking out $2 and a few small articles of value, after which they made him take off his overcoat. One of the fellows donned it and all three jumped off the train.

The station master reported the matter to local police headquarters but nothing could be done from this end. Johnson was given assistance in continuing his journey home.

CO. K MARKSMEN WIN IN COUNTY SEAT CONTEST

Company K's rifle team went to Elizabeth last night and defeated the team from the Elizabeth Town and Country Club on their range. EJECTMENT SUIT DECIDED.

Judge Vail Gives Schorb Heirs Possession of East Front Street Premises.

In the Circuit Court at Elizabeth, yesterday, Judge B. A. Vail rendered a decision in favor of the Schorb heirs in their ejectment suit against Henry Haurand. The matter has been in litigation for nearly a year and the plaintiffs will take immediate steps to secure possession of the premises.

The place in dispute is the building at 115 East Front street, Haurand conducting a cafe on the ground floor. The Schorb heirs claimed that he had no lease and called upon to vacate. He maintained that he could not be compelled to move under his original agreement and the ejectment suit followed. Since the matter has been in the court, Haurand has purchased the building on East Front street now occupied as police headquarters and will move his business there when the city's lease expires.

Surprise Party.

In honor of his twenty-first birthday, Samuel Rothberg, of West Third street, was tendered a very pleasant surprise Monday night. The affair was gotten up by Mr. Rothberg's brother, Harry Rothberg. Mr. Rothberg was the recipient of many handsome and useful gifts, among which was a gold watch, a gift from Mr. Rothberg's employer, Harry Werner, the West Front street clothier. The evening was passed in music and dancing, and at a late hour refreshments were served. Guests were present from New York, Brooklyn and this city.

In the City Court.

In the city court yesterday, Adele Doe, a domestic in a Rahway road home, was arraigned on a charge of disorderly conduct preferred by her employer. She promised to behave herself and the case was held in abeyance. Sentence was suspended on Ellen McDonough, arrested on Park avenues Tuesday night for drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

Carl Kiersting, of Morristown, who has been visiting relatives here, returned today.

SLACK TIME IN SHOPS

Pond's to Work on Reduced Schedule and "Klondyke" Closes Down.

DAY-OFFS IN OTHER PLACES.

Business Depression Existing in Other Parts of the Country Assigned as the Probable Cause.

Notices given the employes of local manufacturing plants yesterday, indicate that the present slack period that is apparent in other parts of the country has extended to this city. The machine shops feel the depression most and a large number of mechanics are affected but other trades will be included.

All departments of the Pond Tool Works, the largest shop in the city, were notified last night that a short-time schedule would go into effect next Monday. The men will work only five days of eight hours a week or forty hours in all. They will begin at 8 in the morning and quit at 5 in the afternoon, a full hour being given for dinner. The shop will be closed all day Saturday. This makes a difference of fourteen hours from the present running time.

The Aluminum Press plant at West Dunellen, familiarly known as the "Klondyke," shut down entirely last night, leaving about 150 men without employment. No explanation was given or no prospect of resumption within the near future was held out. The shop had been running with a full force and the employes had no intimation of the slackness.

The Crescent Embossing Company laid off some of its employes yesterday and a number of other concerns made reductions in various departments. In none of the casese were the officials able to state how long the period of depression would last.

GEORGE MORRIS WEDS MISS HELEN BOICE

A remarkably pretty home wedding took place in New Market yesterday afternoon when Miss Helen Louise Boice, daughter of Mrs. Calvin Boice, was married to George Russell Morris, of the Morris Brothers' Auto Garage. The ceremony took place at 5 o'clock, Rev. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiating. The couple were married in the parlor of the bride's home, artistically embowered with autumn leaves. The house decorations were chrysanthemums and autumn leaves. Mr. Swackhamer, of Cranford, played the Lohengrin wedding march as the bridal party entered the room.

The bride wore a princess gown of white crepe de chine, trimmed with duchesse lace, and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. She was attended by Miss Laura Sapher, of Cranford. Miss Sapher was gowned in pink silk and carried a bouquet of pink roses and mignonette. The best man was Parker Morris, a brother of the groom.

On account of recent deaths in Mr. Morris' family, invitations were limited to the nearest relatives of the bride and groom. There were many wedding gifts of silver, cut glass, china and embroideries. It was the plan of the newly married couple to start at once for Colorado, where they expect to spend the winter, but the illness of Luther D. Morris, a brother of the groom, with whom he is associated in business, has necessitated the postponement of the trip for the present.

FAGAN DISUCSSES HIS DEFEAT.

Says He Set a Pace that Democrats Will Have to Follow in Jersey City.

Mayor Fagan of Jersey City gave out this statement last night concerning his defeat:

"We set a pace that the Democrats must follow for the city's development. My greatest regret is not my defeat, but that the fine crowd of men fighting with me will have to suffer. Our stand makes it incumbent upon the leaders of the opposition to put their best foot forward."

Announcement of Wedding.

Invitations have been issued by Mr. and Mrs. Daniel DeWitt Brokaw, of Sycamore avenue, the borough, for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Elsie Isabel Brokaw, and Arthur Dunham Stout, formerly of New Brunswick, but now of North Plainfield. The wedding will take place on Tuesday night, November 26, at 7:30 o'clock, at the First Baptist church. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, the pastor, will perform the ceremony. A reception will follow at the home of the bride's parents.

One of our clients owed $48 between four people. His salary is $14 weekly; rent $12 monthly. To have paid $2 weekly to each creditor, combined with rent, would have left only $3 per week to meet expenses, buy clothing, etc.—an impossibility you will agree. He borrowed $50, paid all his creditors, made his future credit good, if ever needed; pays his rent, the loan payments, and has $9 each week to use as his judgment dictates.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

FOOTBALL.

The new rules taken altogether have proved to be a big success, the ten yard measure and the neutral zone being the two main factors in making them so. The former forced more open play, while the latter kept the lines apart, and in connection with the restrictions placed on the grouping of men gave the spectator a better view of what was going on. A great fault with the old rules was that there was too much plug, plug at the line. The rushing game was too good a feature of football to be done away with, but there was not sufficient variety to it. The ten yard rule is conducive to that variety, but it is contended its possibilities, both spectacularly and as a ground gainer, have suffered somewhat because more or less neglected for the forward pass. So there is a sentiment in favor either of cutting out the forward pass or going back to the original conditions that regulated it. Under the original conditions the Harvard-Yale and Annapolis games last year were won directly by the forward pass. In any event, its disuse or more conservatism in its use will, it is believed, enlarge a very entertaining feature, the same being diversity in a speedy running game. The beauties of the latter have not been realized as much as they would have been had there been more requirement for them.

The outside kick has been tried out as much as the forward pass. It is one of the new regulations that made possible Princeton's score last Saturday, and as a play it rose in popular estimation by the Tigers' manipulation of it. Harlan's trick, of taking a little run before he booted the ball was a neat manoeuvre. The same plan has been tried on Yale Field this fall.

Every varsity team of importance in the East has been scored on in at least two games except Yale, West Point, Tufts and Dartmouth, and of these two Yale and West Point have not been scored on at all. Dartmouth and Tufts have been scored on in one game. In the West Yost's Michiganders have kept their goal line clear of assaults of all kinds, and their total points for five games has crossed the century mark. This is one reason why the Wolverines are looking forward to November 16 as a day on which they will take revenge for their humiliation on Franklin Field last fall. Princeton continues to show up strongly as a scoring team and got a fair proportion of her big total at the expense of a strong team, the Indians. The Tigers also kept that same team, which is something of a scoring machine itself, from increasing its point total, yet, as she is fully aware, will have to play better football to win from Yale than she played last Saturday.

Yale is having her share of accidents this fall. Paige has been out of commission twice with an injured knee; Wheaton, the drop kicker, is just recovering from a leg injury that put him on the shelf and made him lose valuable time; a sprained ankle put Burch on the retired list just when he was being tried out as a back, and the latest is that Philibin of the backfield is out of it for several days from an odd sort of a mishap. While fooling in the classroom with some companions, he managed to get a lead pencil stuck in his leg. This was last Saturday morning. He played through the game that afternoon, but had to go to a physician in the evening. The physician removed an inch of lead from his leg.

GOLF.

Tournaments at the Atlantic City Country Club and the Country Club of Lakewood are the happy stamping grounds of the migratory golfers. In the fall the players who are to pass the winter in the Southern resorts or at Florida or southern California usually take in the two tournaments as the first stages of their trips and in the spring they reverse the itinerary to make the tournaments their first stops coming north. Besides these transients both Atlantic City and Lakewood have a quota of resident golfers who always give a good account of themselves and the third element from which the tournaments attract entries are the "rippers" from nearby cities and towns. The Atlantic City tournament will be on today, tomorrow and Saturday and that at Lakewood during Thanksgiving week.

Walter E. Edge, the Atlantic City secretary, writes that there will be over 100 starters in the eighteen hole qualifying round today and the entire day will be devoted to it. Jerome D. Travers is to start and other noted players, but while the race for low score will be between this coterie no less than six sets of sixteen will qualify for cups and runnerup prizes. There will be a special contest on Friday for all the beaten eights and the usual handicap at eighteen holes will be on Saturday, besides the cup semi-final and final rounds. The program is arranged to keep all who attend golfing for the entire three days.

Except the low score prize in the qualifying round no player can win two prizes under the rules, which are framed to give the greatest fun to the greatest number. All the cups are to be won outright, but when the tournament began in 1899 the first and second sixteen trophies—the Atlantic City and president's cups—had to be taken three times to be won out. Travis won out the Atlantic City cup in 1903 and W. E. Shackelford the president's trophy in the fall of 1904. There was no open tournament from the fall of 1900 until the fall of 1902, but in the interval the Atlantic City Country Club was the host for the national amateur championship and the intercollegiate championship.

Secretary Phillips announces that the exchange of playing privileges between the Marine and Field Club and Dyker Meadow has been suspended. The officers at the Brooklyn navy yard, in appreciation of the courtesies extended to them by the Dyker Meadow Golf Club, have presented a cup for competition to be known as the Navy cup. It will be played for on Saturday in place of the scheduled monthly handicap.

Magnificent Furniture Display

This store never contained such an exposition of furniture as it does today. A showing that matches the best Metropolitan stores and surpasses the vast majority of them. It is, in fact, one of the greatest furniture shows in the United States—one that excites amazement and admiration, and one that the people of New Jersey should be proud of.

With such an unequaled variety embracing everything that is good, from the modestly priced sorts to the most expensive, no one need look beyond us for furniture—only the hypercritical Jerseyman could have any apology for going to New York for furniture.

Period Furniture is represented in our stocks most generously, a large division of the store being devoted to it. Here are period styles from the Elizabethan and Charles to the modern Mission.

Colonial Furniture which is now so rapidly coming into favor is extensively represented and the reproductions are faithful types of the furniture of colonial days.

Our collection of Gold Furniture is greatly admired and includes a splendid collection of the Louis styles, many of them imported French product.

In Mahogany there is a wonderful array of beautiful pieces, and mahogany will not be found to be more expensive than the popular oak. You'll be surprised at the variety of mahogany pieces that we show.

In Circassian Walnut, a rare and beautiful wood, we have now a generous assortment of pieces.

Library Furniture upholstered in leather and other fabrics, is made a great feature of the stock and we pride ourselves on being able to satisfy all who come.

In every way the stock is superb and merits the patronage of all New Jersey. We are doing, and expect to do, a greater business month by month, and now that we have knocked the one prop from under our competitors by the introduction of the club plan of selling furniture, by which we are able to extend all the advantages of easy payments at the same low prices that always prevailed with us without charging exorbitant profits that have previously gone hand in hand with such a system, we expect to make wonderful gains and to attract the patronage of thousands who heretofore felt they could not trade with us.

Unprecedented Sale of Black Taffeta

1.00 Grade 30 Inches Wide at 59c yd.

6,000 yards of these splendid Black Taffetas, 30 inches wide, comes to us thru a single purchase from one of the largest manufacturers in the world, in a way that makes it possible for us to sell every yard of it at actually less than the cost of manufacture.

59c—1.00 Silks—59c.

If you have any doubt about this statement we urge you to secure a sample of the silk, then make comparisons with the $1 grades sold in other stores, and make sure that you see 30-inch wide goods, and thus convince yourself that this is the most remarkable offering of Black Taffetas that Newark has ever known.

The silks are strictly perfect, are a beautiful black and positively worth $1 a yard, and we will make the price, on Friday only, 59c.

We will gladly supply dressmakers with the silks even though they desire to buy by the piece, but we do not care to sell to the smaller dealers, desiring rather to spread the good thing among as many of our patrons as possible.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Last season's big musical comedy success, "My Wife's Family," will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tonight.

Carlotta Nilson, the new effulgent star whom Walter N. Lawrence will present at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night, exhibits in her every characterization the charm of her own freshness, buoyishness and sincerity. Her art history conveys the illusion of simplicity and perfect naturalness; she is always unaffected; her gaiety rings genuine; her sentiment is true and of the heart. She shows a young girl's joy of life play upon occasion, and she grows into womanly feeling without strain of affectation. She has the actress temperament and the resources to meet all the requirements of her every impersonation.

"T WAS A FAMOUS VICTORY."

The election of John Franklin Fort to succeed to the Gubernatorial chair is a triumph for honesty, integrity and good government.

John Franklin Fort fought his battle on fixed and unequivocal principles, proclaiming that he would rather be right than be Governor.

The voice of the people as recorded in the ballot boxes, shows that they wanted a candidate who would be both.

It was a great victory; none the less for the people than for the standard bearer. New Jersey expected every man to do his duty, and the confidence in the ultimate verdict was not misplaced.

The trust reposed in the electrate resulted in faithful performance.

All hail John Franklin Fort, the righteous triumphant! All hail the men of New Jersey!

of the Republican leaders. The Gubernatorial aspirant ran well ahead of Senator Edmund W. Wakelee, in Bergen, and Senator Thomas J. Hillery, in Morris. Both were re-elected, however.

AUTO HITS BUTCHER WAGON.

Crossing West Sixth street on Lee place, yesterday afternoon, a horse and wagon owned by Charles Arnold, the Liberty street butcher, and in charge of his son, Edmund Arnold, and Howard Sweeney, was struck by an automobile driven by Dr. Ellis W. Hedges. The latter was riding on Sixth street, going toward Lee place and struck the butcher wagon squarely, smashing it to pieces, injuring the boys and the horse.

Dr. Hedges expected that the wagon would clear the street before he reached that point and when it did not he was too close to prevent a collision. The auto was not damaged to any extent.

Young Sweeney suffered greater injury than his companion and although able to be out is under the care of a physician. Arnold suffered more from shock. He was in the rear of the wagon and did not get the full force of the collision. The injuries to the horse are not serious.

MISS JEAN DOUGLASS BRIDE OF LEWIS SQUIRES

Miss Jean Douglass, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Douglass, of West Eighth street, and Lewis Squires, son of Mrs. Henry C. Squires, of Watchung avenue, were married last night. The ceremony took place at the bride's home and was performed by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, minister of the Crescent Avenue church.

Miss Douglass was attended by two bridesmaids, Miss Helen Stevens, of this city, and Miss Jean Griscom, of the borough. Her gown was of white peau de soie trimmed with Duchess lace and she carried bride roses. Miss Edith Davis, a niece of the bride, acted as flower girl.

Mr. Squires was attended by his brother, Dr. Charles A. Squires, of Binghamton, N. Y., as best man, and the ushers were John Douglass and Frederick Squires. The bride was given away by her father. Following the ceremony a reception was held and later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Squires took their departure for a brief wedding trip. On returning they will make their home in this city.

The groom is a graduate of Williams College, and is engaged in the practice of law in New York.

MISS SHERWOOD NOW MRS. GEO. F. BARNES

Miss Lucetta A. Sherwood and George Francis Barnes, both of New York, were married at 6 o'clock last night at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Frederick M. Ward, 94 Fairview avenue, in the presence of the relatives and intimate friends. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, performed the ceremony.

The bride was kowned in white crepe de chine, trimmed with lace, and she carried a bouquet of white carnations and lilies of the valley. She was attended by Miss Julia Lund, of Jacksonville, Fla., who was bridesmaid. The best man was Dr. Sears, of Boston.

After the ceremony and congratulations supper was served and the couple left on an extended bridal tour. Upon their return they will reside in New York, where the groom is engaged in the jewelry trade. The bride received a large collection of gifts of value and use from relatives and friends.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN.

The Democracy carried the day at the polls here in the borough and gave Katzenbach a majority of 16 to help out his big Hudson county slump. The Democratic candidates for surrogate, assembly and freeholders also returned safe majorities over the G. O. P. opponents.

The main interest, however, centured in the local ticket. Harry J. Swackhamer, the Democratic candidate for mayor, was elected by a majority of 64 votes over Frank R. Wynkoop, the Republican. Swackhamer's supporters gave him 214 votes. Two councilmen were to be elected and in the balloting, Lewis T. Churchill, R., got 193 votes; J. H. Van Middlesworth, D., and Henry C. Bambach, D., each got 179 votes, and George Cameron had 173 supporters. This tie between Van Middlesworth and Bambach on the same ticket will take time to decide.

The official canvas by the county board of election, which meets next Monday, may solve the difficulty, but if not, either candidate may apply for a re-count. Should such a recount still show a tie, there will have to be another election to decide which of the two men is to be a member of the council. The question of the tie was the general topic of discussion in the borough all day yesterday, but it will be necessary to wait the action of the county board of election at least before the election can be decided.

C. Wesley Blaine, R., was elected constable; there was no opposing candidate. Appropriations of $3,500 for borough purposes, and $100 for the support of the poor were passed, and it was voted that the tax rate for 1908 should not exceed $2 per $100 valuation.

The election of officers for the coming year will be the principal business at the meeting of the Christian Endeavorers of the Presbyterian church tomorrow evening at the home of the Misses Dunham. A nominating committee has prepared a list of candidates for the various offices to be filled.

Mrs. E. C. Dutcher, who was delegate to the W. C. T. U. convention held last week at Jersey City, will give a report at the meeting of the Union this afternoon. The L. T. L. will hold a short meeting at the Union rooms immediately after this meeting, and Mrs. Dutcher will preside.

The November meeting of the borough Board of Education will be held Tuesday, November 12. The meeting was postponed Election Day because of the holiday.

Local Christian Endeavorers from the Presbyterian church will attend the mass meeting of the organization to be held tonight at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, Plainfield.

The store in the Goth building is undergoing extensive repairs and will be occupied by Isaac Kuppenberg, of New York, as a baker shop about December 1.

The condition of Mrs. J. Newton Apgar, who was operated on at Muhlenberg Hospital last week, is much improved.

Charles S. Adams, who has been in the Christobal Canal zone for some time past is the guest of George T. Schenck.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The defeat of the $800 police appropriation Tuesday shows that the majority of the voters are satisfied that the town does not need a patrolman at night. It is reported that the lower end of the township voted solidly against it, on the other hand it is safe to say that the taxpayers in the heart of the town who see the need nearly every night of an officer on the street, voted for the appropriation. It is only a few years hence when the village proper and the lower end of the township will become separated as their are already many in town who believe the town would be better under a borough government. It was just these things which separated the township and Fanwood. Improvements were demanded by the residents of Fanwood, but they could not get them at the polls, so they became divorced from the township and became a borough. No one can but what the place has thrived under the change and today is the equal of any borough its size in the State.

Petty thievery is still going on in town. Monday, Overseer of the Poor William Hull cut his winter cabbage and placed them in a barrel for future use. Monday night some one came around and relieved him of further responsibility in the matter by taking the entire barrel full. Township Clerk Edward L. Hand, who had a fine lot still standing in the ground nearby was more fortunate, not a single cabbage being taken, the thieves evidently wanting theirs trimmed and ready for use.

The destruction of the old Retchie house near Graceland early yesterday morning by fire, removed one of the old land marks in that end of the township. The fire was undoubtedly of incendiary origin as the place has been unoccupied for several months.

The boys in town, bound to celebrate election no matter who won out, set fire to a corn stack in F. K. Clark's cornfield. Mr. Clark knows who the boys are and may decide to make them settle for the loss sustained.

The long drawn faces and worried brows of the local Republicans were changed to smiles last night, when it was conceded that Fort had carried the State by a small majority.

Mr. and Mrs. George Harper have been entertaining Mr. Harper's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Harper, Sr., of Southhold, L. I., over Election Day.

THE FORUM.

Editor, The Daily Press:

At the various polling places in this city and throughout the State many voters came to the polls to exercise their franchise, but to their angered dismay found that their names were not on the registry list. Now this is entirely up to the voter, he has no one to blame but himself, the Election Board, in almost every instance having done its duty to the letter of the law.

The voter has three opportunities to register himself, namely, on Primary Day, on Registration Day and before County Board of Elections, while the local election board has but one inadequate opportunity, that is, when the canvas is made, during the month of August, two months before election day. Every voter should see that he is registered himself, thereby protecting his sacred right and avoiding all possible mistake.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 10, 1907.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—The greed for gold.—Prov. xxiii, 4, 5; Luke xii, 13-21.

The emphasis in this topic must be placed upon the word greed. Gold is right enough in itself and is a wonderful blessing to mankind, but that which needs to be condemned is the insatiate greed for gold that leads men to sacrifice their honor, their friends, their reputations and their very hope for heaven. It is to be denounced and preached against. For gold Benedict Arnold sold his country, Lord Bacon his judicial honor and Judas Iscariot his Lord. Men high in financial institutions have become defaulters, and widows and orphans have suffered, and men who have had their all intrusted to their care have lost it and have often been driven to despondency and despair.

The astounding and revolting revelations in recent years of the financial frauds in our political and business life have appalled the people. But, after all, there is more honesty in the world than the average man imagines. We only hear the stories of the comparatively few rascals who defraud the public, ruin banks and deceive the people in various ways to satisfy their greed for gold. Of the vast thousands who honestly fulfill their trusts, who honestly acquire a fortune, not a word is said, and therefore we think often that there is no honesty in the world; that every rich man is a scoundrel. Moreover, it is a serious question if we have not taken a wrong attitude in dealing with man's desire for gold. It is practically a universal desire. Few men would refuse a fortune. Gold has its value, and to despise it is to show a spirit of hypocrisy or of foolishness. It can be used as powerfully for good as for evil.

Gold plays a prominent part in every phase of life—the individual, home, church and state. It erects our hospitals, asylums, philanthropic homes, and makes possible the necessities and comforts of life; hence it does seem that the keynote in relation to money should be its proper accumulation and its proper use. Tirades and denunciations should have little place in dealing with such tremendous problems. Men need instruction in finding the proper solution of their attitude toward the natural craving for wealth. Honesty in acquirement should be emphasized, and the dangerous results of dishonesty should be made prominent. Furthermore, men should be taught that the greatest joy in gold is not simply the use of it for self, but for the good and happiness of others.

But, after all is said, gold has its dangers. The desire for it is great and often turns to a sinful greed, whether a man has much or little. It is the love of money, a false, insatiate love of it, that is a root of evil. The poorest may sinfully love it as well as the richest of men.

There are several serious facts that should warn us against a sinful greed for gold: (1) It's uncertainty. "Labor not to be rich, * * * for riches certainly make themselves wings." Nothing of great importance in life is so uncertain as riches. In a moment, in a day, our money may take wings. Should we set our hearts wholly and absolutely upon such an uncertain factor in our lives? (2) The sinful greed for gold may lead us to take a false attitude toward Christ. It did so with the man who came to Christ to ask Him to divide the inheritance. He saw in Christ a petty judge instead of a mighty Saviour. The rich young man who came to Christ could give up all for Him but his money, and instead of following Him he went away from Him. How many are kept from Christ because of their evil love for money and their evil use of it! (3) The sinful greed for gold leads us to overrate its value. Gold will do much, but it won't save the soul or feed it. This was the mistake of the rich fool in Christ's parable. He thought he could feed his soul on material things. He said, "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years—eat, drink and be merry," as if the soul could be fed on his much goods. Only Christ, the bread of life, can satisfy our souls. All the gold and all earth's other treasures cannot save or support the soul. Make no mistake in thinking that it can do so in your case.

BIBLE READINGS.

Deut. viii, 11-17; Job xxviii, 12-18; xxxi, 24-28; Ps. xix, 7-10; Prov. iii, 1-10; xxviii, 20; I Tim. vi, 9-12; Jas. v, 1-8; Rev. iii, 14-22.

Trainer of Church of Tomorrow.

The young people of today are to be the support of the church of tomorrow. On them will rest the responsibility of carrying on God's work here after their fathers and mothers have finished their work. To meet this responsibility they need special training in Christian work. The Christian Endeavor society offers this training. There they may learn to work for Christ, to speak for Him and to bring others to Him. Their interest in the church is quickened by their having some definite work of their own to do, and they are strengthened for a larger sphere of usefulness in the future. No other organization sets the young people at work along so many lines, giving them the training necessary for future usefulness in the church as well as developing the spiritual life. The Christian Endeavor society is an invaluable aid to the pastor by its members carrying out his plans and through the committees assisting him in a variety of ways. It seeks to help not only those connected with the church, but the indifferent, endeavoring to bring them within its influence and win them to Christ.—Irish Endeavorer.

Nov. 10: "The conversion of the gentiles." (Missions.) "They glorified God, saying, Then to the gentiles also hath God granted repentance with life."—Acts xi, 18.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

Passages for reference—Gen. xxii, 18; Mal. i, 11; Col. iii, 11; Rev. xxi, 24-26.

There are some strange things connected with the mission work of the Christian church for the conversion of the gentile world.

First, it is a very strange thing that men are so divided in opinions and interests and are so antagonistic to each other. Race prejudice is very strong. Peace, harmony and mutual helpfulness seem entirely reasonable, yet the most advanced nations are the most heavily armed and prepared for war. Brotherhood is much talked of, but does not exist to any great extent as yet among the nations.

Reason does not yet hold control in human affairs, nor does righteousness.

It is hard to see how the welfare of men can be secured unless both righteousness and reason shall rule.

Men have been and are as much at variance and strife in religious matters as on any other subject. Perhaps no subject has caused more enmity than this.

There has been a multitude of different religions first and last, each with some truth in it, yet most of them far from teaching the essential truth which should unite men in a brotherhood of peace.

One religion has such a brotherhood as the clearly defined goal toward which it is working. It is the aim of God to bring together in one all things through Christ. This is the belief of Christians. This is the meaning of that ancient promise to Abraham. It was the belief of the greatest of the Hebrew prophets. The universal kingdom of God among men, established on righteousness, justice and mercy, was the vision of Isaiah, whose trumpet voice rings loud across the ages with the proclamation of the Messiah's kingdom calling in the gentiles as well as Israel.

It was difficult for an Israelite after the times of Ezra and Nehemiah to have much toleration for the gentiles. It was so hard for the Jewish Christians who had been with Jesus all His life to understand how a gentile could be saved that a vision had to come to Peter and miraculous descent of the Holy Ghost before they could tolerate the thought.

The church has been long awaking to the fact of God's intention to save the gentiles and still slower in arousing herself to fulfill her mission in carrying the gospel to all mankind.

There are signs of brightness now which give promise that before long the church will awake to a fuller conception of God's will and her privilege toward the gentile world.

We as Leaguers need to keep constantly before our minds our responsibility in this regard and pray with firmer faith and fuller comprehension our daily petition, "Thy kingdom come."

We must work to bring in this kingdom in business, social life, religion and government and in every sphere of human effort. This is our task. Let us realize it and accomplish it.

The Inner Life.

It is the inner life that makes our world. If our hearts are sweet, patient, gentle, loving, we find sweetness, patience, gentleness and lovingness wherever we go. But if our hearts are bitter, jealous, suspicious, we find bitterness, jealousy and suspicion on every path. If we go out among people in a combative spirit, we find combativeness in those we meet, but if we go forth in a charitable frame of mind, with good will in our hearts toward all, we find brotherliness and cordiality in every man we come up to in our walks and associations.

In ourselves the sunshine dwells;
In ourselves the music swells;
Everywhere the heart awake
Finds what pleasure it can make;
Everywhere the light and shade
By the Gazer's eye is made.

This is the secret of that fine art some people possess of always finding good and beauty in others. They have goodness and beauty in themselves. There are such people, and there is no reason why we should not set this ideal for our lives.—F. R. Miller.

A Sad Day.

A prayerless day never can be anything but a day of loss and failure. It may not seem so. Business may be prosperous as ever. The table may be bountifully spread. God "maketh His sun to rise on the evil and the good and sendeth rain on the just and unjust." But, however bright and happy a day may seem to be, if it lacks Heaven's benediction it is a sad day.—Forward.

A Valuable Grace.

It is a Christian grace to have pleasant and affectionate thoughts about men, to rejoice in their excellencies and charitably to forget, as far as may be, their shortcomings.—R. W. Dale.

First Morning Duty.

Make it the first morning business of your life to understand some portion of the Bible clearly and your daily business to obey it in all you do understand.—Ruskin.

Suit For a Lifetime.

If honor be your clothing the suit will last a lifetime, but if clothing be your honor it will soon be worn threadbare.—William Arnot.

A Christian's Calling.

The true calling of a Christian is not to do extraordinary things, but to do ordinary things in an extraordinary way.—Dean Stanley.

Mr. Barnes, of New York

By Archibald Clavering Gunter

Author of Mr. Barnes of New York, Mr. Potter of Texas, That Frenchman, etc.

A Sequel to Mr. Barnes of New York

COPYRIGHT, 1907, DODD MEAD & CO. N.Y.

"Oh, it didn't require money. Graham and the rest of the crew have kind of got it into their heads that we are being pursued by some murdering foreign gang and the honest fellows from the land o' cakes are mighty eager to meet the Corsican thugs."

Here Enid stops the interview. "Are we never going on shore to dinner?" asks that young lady, hungrily, deck. "I heard your boat, Burton," she adds. "Please help me down the side ladder. Marina has Edwin's sailor skill to prevent her tumbling into the water. My, isn't he tender to her!" This last is whispered as Mrs. Anstruther, having come on deck, is half carried by her husband down the yacht's side to the cutter.

"Guess I can do the ladder act as well as he," and Burton's clutch upon his coming bride as he places her in the stern sheets of the boat is as fervid as that of the English bridegroom.

As the boat draws up to the landing stage Maud comes rushing down to the landing and cries eagerly: "Bully! Everybody on shore quick! Ma's got to drive into Nice after dinner to meet her new beau."

"Her new beau! How about Von Bulow?" laughs Edwin, as he assists the ladies to the landing stage.

"Oh, Von's on the back shelf!" cries Maud, letting her tongue run away with her. "Count Corregio Cipriano Danella is now first favorite."

At the name, Marina quivers as if under a blow. Then suddenly the nervous dread seems to leave her dark eyes and the courage of devoted love flies into them. She starts from her husband's arm, to which she has been clinging.

"By heaven, Marina knows this Cipriano Danella is the real king-pin of this death feud," is Barnes' astute reflection. He notes that the bride's head is held on high; that this delicate creature steps lightly but resolutely in front of her stalwart sailor husband as if to meet and shield him from coming danger. Her impassioned eyes affright the American. "My Lord," he shudders, "this devoted girl means to sacrifice herself in some way for this husband she adores. How? Eternal powers, I must find what that letter said!"

But Enid and Maud, as they step up the path, are now joking and laughing; the latter is saying she's such a good little girl she's to come in to dessert. "Keep your nuts and raisins for me, every one of you," she entreats.

At this, Marina smiles so blithely that Edwin whispers to Barnes: "Getting ashore makes her normal again."

Then after a few words of caution to Graham and his tars, who tie up the cutter and step ashore to patrol the outside of the grounds till morning, Anstruther follows the rest of the party to the house.

A few minutes after, the ladies already dressed for evening on the yacht, have thrown off their wraps and are seated at the dinner table of Lady Chartris which, influenced by Mr. Barnes' liberal purse, has become a luxurious one.

The attempt at youth in their hostess' appearance seems to strike the party simultaneously. Enid gazes at the marvelous effects of Madame Duval's art upon her ancient subject's face and can scarce restrain a merry snicker.

Marina, despite the conflicting emotions in her heart, smiles almost sadly, and proceeds during the progress of the meal to draw from Lady Chartris information of her new cavalier and how Cipriano Danella came to visit her. "Did his brother's recent death affect him greatly?" asks the young bride, eagerly.

"Oh," remarks Prunella, "when he begged to be presented to me in Marseilles, the count was very sad, but—"

"Cipriano met you in Marseilles," ejaculates Barnes, his fork stayed in air over his salad.

"Yes, the day after you left, the poor fellow called to ask if I knew the particulars of his dear brother's death. You, having lately come from Corsica, he thought, might tell him. Under the melancholy circumstances, I deemed it advisable to say to him that you would be at my villa in Villefranche soon and would, of course, give him the facts you might know in regard to poor Musso! He was killed by some bandit or other in Corsica, I understand. But after the gallant Cipriano met me here on the des Anglais three days ago, he—he didn't seem able to talk about anyone else but me." The widow blushes slightly, looks eagerly at the clock and flutters: "The only other subject Count Cipriano mentioned was—was weddings."

Barnes plunges his fork disgustedly into his salad and curses his half confidences to Lady Chartris. The retreat he had so carefully arranged for Enid and Marina while he and Edwin should hunt down the demons who threatened their young lives, was now by his hostess' babbling tongue become known to their pursuers.

He glances moodily at his sweetheart. Miss Anstruther's eyes and her cheeks are both aflame. As if to defy the dangers that are gathering about her wedding day, she says in Chartris, I marry Mr. Barnes to-morrow," and turns the conversation on her coming nuptials, discussing with her hostess the necessary preparations for the ceremony the next evening.

With the dessert, Miss Maud enters to give life and vivacity to the feast. She has been put by her governess in evening infant dress, prattles merrily of the approaching nuptials, suggests that her youthful ears have heard some of the dinner table conversation through the curtains that separate the dining-room from the parlor. Once or twice, when her mother's head is turned, obeying a nod surreptitiously given her by Mr. Barnes, she bolts a glass of champagne, that is generally forbidden her.

Inspired by the stimulating beverage, Miss Maud suddenly ejaculates: "Isn't it a pity you're going to be married on the sneak, Barnes? When I get spliced, as you say, Cousin Edwin, I'm going to church with six bridesmaids and a train ten feet long."

Soon after the party rises, and Enid, drawing her betrothed into the privacy of the parlor, whispers: "My own, remember one of the Danellas is here. Be careful for my sake." She puts her fair arms entreatingly about his neck.

"I have my pistols," answers Burton, sententiously, and administers a soothing kiss.

Stepping to Edwin, he whispers: "Keep a sharper lookout than ever."

"Yes, it's yardarm to yardarm now," answers the sailor.

Lady Chartris' carriage is announced.

"Help me with my wraps, Cousin Burton," cries the widow, eagerly, and seems anxious to be gone.

As Barnes is cloaking Prunella, Enid entreats, nervously: "You will come back soon?"

"Oh yes, by to-morrow morning," laughs Anstruther, trying to make light of her fears. "Jack's last cruise ashore, you know."

"No ward-room jokes about my coming husband!" commands his sister, indignantly.

"Yes, but I—I can't bring Burton home very early," says Lady Chartris, in embarrassed tone. "You see I—I promised to go to the Casino with—with Count Cipriano Danella," adding eagerly: "Couldn't I invite him to the wedding?"

"Yes, bring him, please—I want to see the gentleman," returns Barnes, quietly, his eyes growing steely.

Anstruther looks astounded and Enid seems amazed, but the most startling effect is produced upon Marina. Her delicate face grows of a deathly pallor, her slight fingers work nervously, but her dark eyes begin to flame.

"Gee," remarks Maud, the champagne making her reckless, "you needn't look as if you were going to execution, Marina. Cip isn't your beau."

"Maud, don't talk that way and go to bed!" commands her mother, severely. Though the widow as she steps into her victoria reflects with delighted horror: "These foreign brides are awful. Here's a two weeks' one jealous of that fascinating Count Danella, who's now devoted to me."

Barnes immediately follows his hostess and the carriage drives away rapidly, Lady Chartris calling to the driver to hurry.

Miss Anstruther gazes after it till it disappears in the shrubbery leading to the entrance of the grounds. Then with a sigh she languidly remarks that she is tired and will go to bed. Leaving Edwin and Marina in some honeymoon conference in the parlor she steps up to her chamber and gives her maid a few directions about her coming wedding, when there comes a sharp, sudden rapping on the door.

"What is it?" cries Miss Anstruther, and grasps a pistol Barnes has given her, as they sailed into the Villefranche harbor, with the suggestion: "It may be useful some day."

In answer, Maud's excited voice through the panel makes Miss Anstruther laugh. "Enid, I can't go to sleep till you let me be your maid of honor at the wedding."

"If it will please you, dear," remarks Enid affably.

"That's bully," cries Maud; "they give bridesmaids presents, don't they?" This last very eagerly.

Then she suddenly breaks out: "Didn't Marina get on a high horse when ma said she was going in to meet Cip Danella? She's jealous of him, I reckon."

"Hush!" commands Enid. "You have the most extraordinary ideas for a child."

"Child? I'm 16!" cries Maud, defiantly. Then repressed in one direction, the champagne that is coursing through Miss Chartris' brain breaks out in another. "Anyway," she hints roguishly, "Barnes might find an old sweetheart this evening if he stepped into the Hotel St. Petersburg."

"Who?" The coming bride's voice is excited.

"Oh, a little girl isn't permitted to speak the name of such a lady," replies Maud, innocently, "but it commences with a 'Belle' and it ends with a 'Blackwood.'"

"My heavens, is she here?"

"Gee, and Blackie's in great shape, too. I was on the Promenade des Anglais with Marston yesterday. Not a woman to touch her for beauty. Diamonds to beat Starr & Mortimer's, and that Mr. Ruggles running after her with an open checkbook in his hand, everybody said."

"Then we'll leave her to Mr. Ruggles," says Enid, coldly, though her heart is beating wildly.

"Oh, but she won't stick to Mr. Ruggles. So I thought I'd just give you a hint, so that if she cuts in after you're married you'll know how to fix her. Of course, this evening you are blocked."

"Blocked, this evening?"

"I want to tell you something that happened!"

"Don't dare to."

"But I will, for your sake. A note came to Barnsey from her."

"A note from that infamous creature? Impossible!"

"Impossible? I slipped it into Burton's hand just before he went in to dinner, and he slipped it into his pocket. I saw the address; it was in her handwriting."

"Liar, how do you know La Blackwood's handwriting," cries the tortured one.

"Blackie's autograph facsimile was published in an advertisement of Lily's Soap, in the London Gossip last month. 'I recommend your soap for its unblemished purity,' she wrote. How I laughed at that ad. But you want to take this seriously, you do, Enid, and not giggle hysterically, as you are now."

"Very well, I will," says the young lady, whose face has become that of a marble statue, lighted by two burning, tortured eyes. "Now to bed, you meddler, and not a word of this to anyone on earth, or you know what I know and will tell your mother."

And Maud retires subdued, but she leaves convulsed features, clenched hands and a dizzy brain behind her. Miss Anstruther sighs: "Oh, if he dares to see her!" then murmurs, "No, no, impossible! He's gone to get the minister for to-morrow—to wed me."

Yet several burning tears run down the fair cheeks of the coming bride as she tosses herself into bed and cannot go to sleep.

BOWLING WORK.

Park Club Getting Into Shape for Tourney.

In preparation for the approaching tournament of the Central Journal Bowling League which begins the last week in November, the first team of the Park Club rolled three games with the second team, last night, and won them all by good margins.

The first team took the initial game by a score of 953 to 712, the second by a score of 906 to 843 and the third by the large score of 1,028 to 812. In the last game the first team did some remarkable bowling, showing that it will be a factor in the coming tournament.

Those comprising the first team were Captain F. O. Ball, William Barlow, Edward Daniel, Ray Lyman and Monroe H. Long, while those on the opposing team were Harold Hegeman, Arthur Reed, Charles Lyman, Herbert Rogers and A. B. Laing. Another series will probably be arranged between these teams before the league season opens.

CAMPAIGN OF PUBLICITY

Board of Trade Negotiating for Systematic Advertising for City.

MR. CATTELLE MAKES OFFER.

Committee Appointed to Investigate the Desirability of His Proposition.

Wallis Arthur Cattelle, of this city, appeared before the Board of Trade last night with a proposition to advertise Plainfield through illustrated articles in the New York Herald Sunday edition. He asked the board to sanction his proposition and to give him a letter authorizing him to collect funds among the residents and merchants, which are to be deposited in a local bank.

It is to be a systematic campaign of advertising, according to Mr. Cattelle, and aside from the half page or page articles to appear in the Sunday edition of the New York Herold, there are to be published books containing the same matter and illustrations and these are to be sold. The space is to be purchased in the Herald at card rates and Mr. Cattelle is to receive his compensation in the commission for selling the space. He is also to receive twenty-five per cent. for editing the book to be published.

The work is to be done at no expense to the Board of Trade, Mr. Cattelle proposing to raise the necessary fund from owners of fine residences here who desire to have pictures of their homes in the article.

It was finally decided by the board to appoint a committee comprising J. V. E. Vanderhoef, A. E. Force and E. M. Laing. Mr. Cattelle is to furnish satisfactory references, after which the committee will inform E. F. Feickert, the secretary, who will give Mr. Cattelle authority to collect funds if the references are approved.

This proposition brought out the fact that although $500 had been subscribed toward the board's scheme to advertise Plainfield, less than half had been collected. Herman Schwed said that he was sure those who had subscribed would pay if someone would do the collecting, and it was decided that the committee on subscriptions should attend to the matter.

Another plan to advertise Plainfield was presented by the American Suburbs' Company, which offered to give the board a thousand copies of a sixteen page magazine, containing a write-up of Plainfield with thirty illustrations for $100 and an additional thousand for $80. This scheme did not appeal to the members and the communication was tabled.

Secretary E. F. Feickert brought up the question of having the name of the board painted on the waste-paper cans distributed about the city. He was instructed to ascertain the cost and report at the next meeting.

DR. HERRING TALKS ON MEXICO AT TRINITY CHURCH.

Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, gave an informal talk on Mexico at Trinity Reformed church last night under the auspices of the boys' mission band of that church. The lecture was illustrated by about eighty lantern slides. Dr. Herring, who several years ago made an extended trip through Mexico spoke in an informal way about the country and views of the principal cities and the open country were shown.

Views of Mount Oriziba, Popocatapeti volcano, Mexico City and Vera Cruz were shown together with slides reproduced from photographs showing the native people and their homes, their methods of living and their dress. The speaker said that contrary to the general belief, Mexico was cold in the early morning and the evening, especially, and he showed a Mexican blanket and a straw "rain coat" worn by the natives. He spoke of the industries of the people, and views of the markets, the coffee plantations and the silver mines were shown on the screen. With the views of the most important buildings in the principal cities, Dr. Herring spoke of the architecture and religious tradition of the Mexicans and gave many interesting details of their habits of living.

He was introduced as the speaker of the evening by Harold Schenck, treasurer of the boys' mission band of the church, and at the conclusion of the lecture there was a piano solo by Harold Storr. There are about a dozen members of the band, and Arthur Gaskell is its president. A neat sum was realized by the lecture, which will be devoted to foreign mission work, being carried on by the boys.

Freeholders Had Picture Taken.

Prior to the regular meeting yesterday afternoon, the members of the Board of Freeholders had a group picture taken in front of the Court House in Elizabeth.

MAGANESE CASE IS AIRED IN COURT

The Chancery case of Samuel and Martha R. Rodman, of Washington, D. C., against the Manganese Steel Safe Company, of this city, on a rule to show cause why the defendants should not be enjoined from proceeding further in a re-classification of capital stock from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000, was argued before Vice Chancellor Howell at Newark yesterday. The lawyers for the safe company were Howard E. White, of New York, and John R. Hardin, of Pitney, Hardin and Skinner, of Newark, while George Ball and Winfield S. Angleman, of this city, appeared for the petitioners.

The argument was at great length and consumed the greater of the day's session. In the answer by the defendants, Mr. Rodman was scored heavily, it being alleged that his action was induced by the Victor Safe and Lock Company, which was really conducting the suit for advertising purposes. This the plaintiffs' counsel promptly denied.

After hearing the argument the Vice Chancellor ordered the counsel on both sides to submit briefs and reserved his decision.

MARTINE CONDOLES WITH KATZENBACH

James E. Martine, who made fifty-four speeches for Frank S. Katzenbach during the campaign, today sent this letter to the defeated Gubernatorial nominee:

"Words fail to express my disappointment and sincere sorrow at the result of the election. We deserved a better fate. A cause more just was never pressed before the people of New Jersey. You were ideal as a candidate, but oh, what a sad disappointment after the counting of the votes.

"But again, as often before, I say, defeat never yet crushed out a truth or annihiliated a principle. I could not believe that the people were not with us. Everything seemed to indicate victory.

"My contact with you has evoked admiration almost to love. I felt intensely earnest in this campaign, and I could not have been more honest in my pleadings for the cause of the people and of you as our exponent. I do not want to find fault, for I believe in the ballot. Time may explain some things which seem now hard to reconcile. It seems all wrong. You have made thousands of friends throughout the State, and all will remember you to love and admire your manly and honorable fight for clean and honest government."

MAYOR-ELECT TALKS ON BOROUGH MATTERS

Mayor-elect Samuel Townsend, of North Plainfield, the unanimous choice of all parties in the borough, is devoting much of his time studying up subjects of current importance in municipal matters. He believes that the question of annexation and consolidation, and sanitary sewage disposal are of paramount interest and intends to do his utmost to assist in their solution.

"Of course, everyone knows," said Mr. Townsend today, "that I have always favored both annexation and consolidation. I have always believed that it would be better were our borough a part of a greater city and have therefore advocated fusion with Plainfield. The Bi-municipal Consolidation Commission's report appears to be an excellent document and I intend to study it carefully before making any statement. I might also say that I have always favored a sanitary sewage system. In this matter also, I would like to go over the work of the Borough Sewage Commission before committing myself on the most feasible scheme."

Percy S. Dayton to Wed.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Percy S. Dayton, of this city, and Miss Ida Mills, of Elizabeth. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride on Thursday night, November 14. Mr. Dayton is well-known here, being engaged in the flour and feed business. Miss Mills also has many friends here, where she visits frequently.

Miss Utley to Speak.

SHORT TIME ORDERED AT POTTER PRESS WORKS

Following the shut-down of the Klondyke shop and the shortening of time at the Pond Tool Works, the employes of the Potter Press Company received notice yesterday that the factory would run only four days a week commencing next Monday. The number of hours will also be decreased as instead of ten each day they will work only eight. The shop ordinarily runs five days a week with a total of fifty-five hours.

It was stated today that the depression of trade was primarily due to the "tight" money market which makes it impossible for manufacturers and big firms to get ready cash. As a result, orders for machinery have been curtailed or held up and shops are the first to feel the effects. With the incoming consignments of gold, financiers are positive that the trouble will be overcome in a few days.

CLERGYMAN JOINS THE BOARD OF TRADE

Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, was elected a member of the Board of Trade, last night. When his name was proposed for membership someone asked if he was the rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, and Mr. Marshall in replying in the affirmative, added: "We may need him to hold us down?"

Mr. Warner was one of the speakers at the annual banquet of the Board of Trade last year, when he introduced the subject of a trade school for Plainfield. He impressed all with his earnestness and display of civic pride. The Board was glad to elect him to membership, believing that he will be of valuable assistance.

BOROUGH'S MAYOR MOVES OUT OF NORTH PLAINFIELD

North Plainfield is now governed by a mayor who is not a resident of the borough, but who lives in North Plainfield township. Mayor Newton B. Smalley moved yesterday from his home at 20 Willow avenue to "Inter Haven," the house formerly occupied by Mrs. J. M. Emerson. The mayor has bought this house, which is situated on Prospect avenue at the end of Grove street. The borough line extends down the middle of Prospect avenue, and the chief executive of the borough now occupies a house on the north side of the line, in North Plainfield township.

Last winter, Mayor Smalley planned to purchase a home on this side of the brook, but could not get the site he wanted. He has since been looking about for a house, and has finally secured "Inter Haven." The house is beautifully situated and has large grounds adjoining. It is reported that the mayor will make extensive improvements to the place, but nothing is to be done at present.

Reception for Borough School Eleven

In accordance with an annual custom, the girls of the senior class of the North Plainfield High School will give a reception and dance to the members of the borough high school football eleven this evening. The team will be entertained in the drawing room at the Somerset street school and the girls will serve a luncheon, prepared in the cooking class room adjoining. At the conclusion of the "feed," the floor will be cleared for dancing. A delegation of the school faculty will assist the student committee to receive the boys. The senior committee in charge of the affair consists of the Misses Edna Swain, Louise Andrews, Agnes Cooley, Ethel Webster, Helen Parsons, Leonora Miller and Ida Englehart.

Will Continue Special Services.

The evangelistic services which have been in progress at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church during the past two weeks have been so successful that the pastor, Rev. E. E. Roberson and his people have decided to continue them on Sunday nights, indefinitely. On Sunday morning the service will be given up to communion and reception of new members. Revival services will be held in the evening, the topic being "The Credentials of Love." At the morning services, beginning November 17, the pastor will preach a series of sermons on "The Soul." First, "The Soul—What Is It?" Second, "The Immortality of the Soul," and third, "The Soul of Man and the Soul in Animals; the Difference."

THOSE TORN UP STREETS

Board of Trade Has Long Discussion About Condition of Business Centre Roadway.

COMPLAINTS ARE GENERAL.

Board Plans For Banquet and Will Have Refreshments at Future Meetings.

Suggestions and plans to increase the attendance and general interest at the meetings of the Board of Trade offered at a meeting of that body last night by A. E. Force and Charles H. Frost met the approval of the members. It is proposed to provide refreshments at future meetings, together with cigars; also a list of prominent speakers on popular topics. It was at the suggestion of Mr. Frost that good speakers are to be secured, and a committee comprising A. E. Force, Charles H. Frost and F. A. Duttenhofer was appointed to provide the entertainment.

There was considerable discussion relative to the torn-up condition of the business streets caused by trolley improvements and brick pavement, and President Marshall took occasion to say that he thought R. Henry Depew a good type of citizen in insisting that the trolley company live up to its contract in all work. Mr. Marshall censored those who are to blame for the impassable condition of East Front street, adding that it is up to the street committee to assist City Engineer Gavett. He said that it was not until he called Mr. Gavett's attention to the matter yesterday that he work of removing dirt from East Front street was started.

"Somebody's to blame for the apparent delay," said Mr. Marshall, "and it should be remedied. If it is up to Contractor Meeker he should be made to change his methods and if it is the fault of the P. S. C., the company should be made to do the right thing."

Mr. Vanderhoef suggested that the attention of Mayor Fisk be called to the disgraceful condition of affairs. He believed that the merchants as well as every resident to be entitled to fair treatment.

Speaking on the subject, Mr. Marshall said that he did not think City Engineer Gavett had an efficient corps of assistants under him. ("or over him," injected E. M. Laing). "I am told," said Mr. Marshall, "that David Bowden laid brick pavement in Scotland, but if it was done like the pavement he supervised on Park avenue, between the railroad and Fourth street, which had to be taken up and relaid, I am not surprised that he left Scotland."

E. C. Deal, who is to be a local representative of the P. S. C. electric light department, Central Division, was introduced and made a few remarks. He said that it would be his aim to do all in his power to give the people of Plainfield what they want in electric lighting and at the same time to carry out the company's policy. Being practically a stranger here he said that he was not yet prepared to talk intelligently of local conditions. He felt sure that the company stands ready to do the right thing. He has supervision of Elizabeth, Westfield, Plainfield, Bound Brook, Somerville, Metuchen and New Brunswick. He will make his home in Plainfield.

In the interest of Carl Silbert, who owns property on Somerset street, back of Christian Gloeckler's place of business, A. E. Force asked what could be done toward laying a Hassam pavement in the alley-way at that point. It was decided that it was a matter for the property-owners to consider and not the board.

Before the meeting closed Mr. Marshall introduced the subject of the annual dinner, which will probably be held the latter part of January. He then announced this committee to look after the details of securing speakers, etc.: Alexander Gilbert, William L. Saunders, A. E. Force, E. M. Laing and Mayor-elect Samuel Townsend, of the borough.

Father's Complaint Against Son.

Sentence was suspended by Borough Recorder Dolliver at the session of court last night in the case of Charles Miner, of Harmony street. The young man was arrested on complaint of his father, William Miner, who appeared against him in court last night, preferring charges of drunkenness and disorderly conduct at the home on Harmony street. The son was penitent and the case was dismissed with a warning by the Recorder.

W. D. Murray to Speak.

On account of a business trip which will prevent John F. Parker from being the speaker at the men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon, W. D. Murray will address the meeting instead. There will be special music by the association orchestra.

SICK WIFE MAKES CHARGES OF CRUELTY AND DESERTION

Arrested on complaint of his wife, who charged him with cruelty and non-support, Dick Higgins was brought before Justice of the Peace Clark Mundy last night. His wife, who is ill, was unable to appear in the court, but has brought charges of desertion against Higgins.

The couple were married about three months ago and since their wedding have been living at 13 Harmony street. Higgins, it is alleged, has been drinking a good deal lately and his wife has not had proper care during her illness. Higgins was very penitent at the hearing last night and promised better treatment of his wife, who was Miss Mary Long. His mother and brother appeared to intercede for him and the judge dismissed the case with a warning as to what may happen if Mrs. Higgins prefers charges again.

MUHLENBERG RECEIVES $5,250 FROM COUNTY

Appropriations for the various hospitals in Union county were made and announced at the November meeting of the Board of Freeholders, yesterday. According to the schedule Muhlenberg Hospital will receive an additional $450 next year, an increase being made from $4,800 to $5,250.

The Elizabeth General Hospital will receive $8,000, an increase of $500; Alexis Brothers' Hospital, Elizabeth, $3,000, an increase of $300, and St. Francis' Hospital, a new institution at Elizabeth, will receive $3,750, making a total of $20,000.

Other business considered at the meeting was chiefly routine, reports being received concerning the county bridge work which is now nearing completion.

ELLA DEMANDED RUM IN BOROUGH'S POLICE STATION

While Borough Recorder Dolliver was holding court in the borough police headquarters last night, Ella Mack, a character whose name appears on police court blotters on both sides of the brook with great frequency, sauntered into the place and demanded a quart of whiskey. Chief Marshal Weiss tried to quiet her and make her go away, but she refused to leave headquarters and was finally locked up. She was given a hearing later and sentenced to sixty days in the county jail. Chief Marshal Weiss took her to Somerville this afternoon.

Ella is a noted tippler. But recently she was "sent down the road" for twenty days, after her arrest in the borough, and her Election Day jag caused her to get locked up in cell in the city police court. She was released from there yesterday morning and developed a good "edge" in time to interrupt the court proceedings in the borough last night with her demand for rum. The last time she was arrested "across the brook," she had about a quart of whiskey with her, and it was taken from her before she was put in the cell. Having spent all her money for booze last night, she thought of the bottle at police headquarters and put in a persistent application for it which resulted in her arrest and sentence.

E. H. Holmes Retires.

Edward H. Holmes, who has been engaged in the coal business on Madison avenue for many years, has disposed of the same to A. C. Wadley, of New Rochelle, N. Y., and will take possession at once. Mr. Wadley is a son of Arthur Wadley, who formerly resided on Somerset street, the borough, and he has had considerable experience in the coal trade. It is the intention of Mr. Holmes to retire from business activities.

Men's Club to Banquet.

Under the auspices of the Men's Club of the First Presbyterian church the first banquet of the season will be held in the chapel tonight. Rev. Dr. Whitaker, of Elizabeth; Rev. Perry Bascom and Rev. Mr. Culp, of Bound Brook, will be the speakers.

Plainfield Boys for Orchestra.

L. A. Soule, boys' secretary of the Y. M. C. A., has issued a call for members of the State Y. M. C. A. orchestra, and those interested in competing for a place on this musical organization will meet at the association Thursday evening, November 14, with their instrumnets.

BUNDLE OF PAPERS BREAKS A MAN'S LEG

Michael Griffin, a telegraph operator stationed in the New Jersey Central's switch tower at Berckman street, received a broken leg in a peculiar accident this morning.

He had completed his "trick" and was waiting at the Netherwood station to catch the paper train at is slowed up to switch over. As the first car passed him, a heavy bundle of papers was suddenly hurled out of the side door and it struck him in the left leg just below the knee. Griffin was thrown down and when he attempted to rise he found it was impossible. Witnesses of the accident summoned Patrolmon Meyers and the injured man was conveyed to the home of his brother-in-law, Patrolman William Messler, of Spooner avenue.

Dr. T. S. Davis responded to a call and discovered that the force of the blow from the papers hade made a clean break of the leg bones. Griffin will be confined to the house for at least a month.

MILKMAN'S RIG, IN TWO COLLISIONS, DISABLED

Jack McDonough, a local milkman, got in all kinds of trouble with his milk wagon last night, when there was a collision between the rig he was driving and one of the Dunham Grocery Company's wagons on Grove street. Again this morning early, his milk wagon figured in a collision on Somerset street, and this time was put out of business by one of the Standard Oil Company's wagons, driven by Charles Purdy.

The accident last night happened at about 6 o'clock. D. H. Randolph was driving one of the Dunham Grocery Company's wagons along Grove street, when McDonough turned into the street from Craig place. The milk wagon was moving right along, and though Randolph turned his rig close to the curb, the vehicles locked wheels and McDonough's horse broke away. The animal was easily captured again and the rigs disentangled. It was found that but little damage was done to either wagon and both drivers were able to proceed.

Early this morning, as McDonough's wagon was standing near Thorn's alley on Somerset street, a Standard Oil Company wagon, driven by Purdy, came out of the alley and locked wheels with the milk wagon. The rear axle of McDonough's rig was badly bent, but the two drivers came to an amiable settlement and Purdy supplied another rig for the milkman's use in finishing his route. The milk wagon is being repaired in a local carriage shop.

THIS MAN'S IMPRUDENCE LANDED HIM IN CELL

Mr. and Mrs. John Barnwell, who are employed in a local hotel, dropped in police headquarters this morning. Both had a grievance and in addition John brought along a beautiful package that he had picked up in some saloon.

He informed Judge Runyon in sentences interrupted by hiccoughs that one of the colored help at the hotel had thrown a dish at Mrs. Barnwell and they wanted to make a complaint. The magistrate noted at first glance that the indignant husband was intoxicated and informed him it would be better to wait awhile before preferring any charges.

"I want to make a complaint right now," shouted Barnwell as he banged his fist on the desk." I ain't comin' around here some other time and anyway, why can't you hear me now."

"That's none of your business," His Honor replied.

"Oh, is that so?" came the sneering reply and just about that time something happened.

Chief Kiely had been listening to the colloquy and becoming exasperated at Barnwell's insulting manner suddenly reached up and grabbed him. He was sheered off toward the rear parlor and never stopped going until he landed on the soft side of the iron bed in cell No. 6. He yelled a few epithets from within and vowed that somebody would "get broke," but ten minutes later he was sleeping off the jag.

Mrs. Barnwell begged for her husband's release but she was advised to go home without him and also when she had complaints to make to either do it herself or keep her better half away from the saloons on the way to headquarters. A charge of drunkenness was preferred against Barnwell and he will be arraigned tomorrow.

GET-TOGETHER CLUB HONORS ITS SACHEM

The Republican Organization Workers Pay Tribute to Their Leader, Andrew McCardell.

HOLD AN ENJOYABLE BANQUET.

Several Handsome Gifts for Absent Guest of Honor—Mayor Presides—At Hotel Waldorf—Forty Present.

In honor of its "sachem," the Get-Together Club, composed of the Republican organization leaders, held a banquet at its headquarters at the Hotel Waldorf, East Front street, last night. The affair was really a complimentary affair tendered by the proprietor, Henry Windham, an honorary member of the club, but it was given in the name of the Get-Togethers.

Everybody, big and little, among the "Regulars" was on hand, but the guest of honor, Factory Inspector Andrew McCardell, was unable to show up. A few hours before the time appointed for the festivities, Mr. McCardell was taken ill with stomach trouble and the doctor forbade him leaving his bed. At his request, however, County Chairman Frank H. Smith, one of the veteran members, acted as his representative.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, one of the guests, acted as toastmaster. On his right, at the head of the long table where forty Republican workers were seated, was the county chairman, while on his left was former Mayor James F. Buckle, the club's "machine man." Others at the head of the board included Assemblyman John R. Moxon, Assistant Prosecutor John English and a coterie of Plainfield councilmen.

After the "spread" had been enjoyed, speeches were made by some of the members as well as the guests. During the course of the talkfest, several gifts for Mr. McCardell were presented in the name of the club. Mr. Windham also came in for a remembrance.

Mayor Fisk started the ball rolling by delivering a witty speech on the character of the club itself. He introduced Mr. Smith as Mr. McCardell, and the county chairman made a few remarks laudatory of the "sachem" as a man and as political leader. At the conclusion of his speech, he brought forth a pair of diamond cuff buttons, the gift of the Get-Togethers to the guest of honor. When former Mayor James F. Buckle was introduced, he dwelt on the manly char-

DUNELLEN.

The small boy element had lots of fun with a stranger in town yesterday afternoon. The man, whose name could not be learned, had taken a lot of booze somewhere and sailed up and down North avenue, three sheets in the wind and loaded to the gunwale with intoxicants. He was followed by a crowd of boys, who made him the butt of their jokes until the tanglefoot finally got the better of him and he fell down helpless. Marshal Owen Mohan, who was working on the railroad near the station, came over and arrested the man, who put up no struggle when he was led to a cell, helplessly drunk. When he sobers up sufficiently to give his name, he will be brought before Judge Von Minden for a hearing.

Communion service will be conducted at Holy Innocent's church Sunday morning at the close of the regular service.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

A rehearsal of the play "Our Jim," was held last evening. Each member of the cast showed familiarity with the part alloted. The play will take place Thanksgiving Eve. The proceeds are to be used toward the debt of the Baptist church.

Some of the farmers along Plainfield avenue have not yet cut their corn. The recent heavy gale left the fields in a flattened condition making cutting almost impossible.

John Wilson will soon return with his family to Richmond, where they came from, but have resided here for the past ten years.

Mrs. Thomas is still critically ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Van Pelt, of Grant avenue.

Mrs. Manson is confined to the house with a severe attack of bronchitis.

Mr. Goff has about finished harvesting the apple crop at Brookside farm.

SAME KIND OF FAITH.

A Bostonian was praising the late Archbishop John Joseph Williams.

"And Archbishop Williams," he said, "had a cutting wit. I'll never forget one day when I lunched with him how he sniffed and said:

"'What is that strange smell? It rather takes away my appetite.'

"I felt warm and uncomfortable, and touching my bald head—I have not had a hair there for twenty-two years—I murmured:

"'It is an ointment, sir, an ointment made of tea leaves, petroleum and onion juice, that has been recommended to me as an infallible hair restorer. I am giving it a trial.'

"The archbishop laughed.

"'Don't you think you are doing a foolish thing?' he asked.

"'No,' said I. 'I put considerable faith in this ointment. The testimonials—

"'Faith!' said the archbishop. 'Well, that sort of faith is rather silly. It reminds me of two little Back Bay children.

"The father of these children came upon them suddenly one afternoon in his dressing room.

"'Here,' he shouted, angrily, 'what are you doing with my large new bottle of hair restorer?'

"The older child pointed to a set of furs.

"'Oh, papa,' he said, 'we are going to make mamma's moth-eated sable muff as good as new again.'"

The Comparison.

Lesec and Lemaigre, who were both as thin as laths, were discussing a mutual friend.

Lesec—I met our friend Durand this morning. He has grown so thin.

Lemaigre—Really! And he was so stout.

Lesec—Yes, it is dreadful. He is thinner than both of us put together now.—Pele Mele.

Mental Medicine.

A somewhat eccentric physician who renectly died would order patients to take walks, say daily, on the left side of the street, returning by the other side; another he would order to arise each morning at a certain hour and eat cheese with ginger beer; another to take supper precisely at midnight and eat only apples, or he would instruct the patient to put just so many grains of salt on the egg he was to eat and part his hair in a different way each day. His object was to get the mind of the patient on something else than symptoms, and this scheme worked well in many cases, especially when the patient was suffering from melancholia.—New York Times.

Too Ill to Be Nursed.

"The late Bishop FitzGerald," said a St. Louis man, "once presided at this season of the year at the graduation exercises of a class of nurses. He told the young women a story that pleased them mightily.

"He said that during our war with Spain a certain hospital had a corps of nurses of exceptional beauty—just such a corpse, in fact, as the young ladies ranged before him would have made.

"But it was whispered that these fair nurses were inclined a little to frivolity, inclined a little to flirt with the ailing young soldiers in their charge.

"Now when a soldier felt that he was on the mend, a flirtation with a pretty nurse was delightful, but when his wounds were troublesome, then gallantry was a thing that he was hardly up to.

"And indeed it was said that sometimes a pretty nurse in this hospital would come to a favorite soldier, and find him lying with closed eyes, as if asleep on his cot, and this note pinned on the counterpane:

"'Too ill to be nursed today.—John Smith.'"—Indianapolis Star.

Already Dated.

In certain London railway stations the proprietors of the lunch counters have a custom of dating eggs. That is they mark on the shell of a boiled egg the date on which it was laid. The evident purpose is to reassure doubting customers; the possible result is less comforting. A party arrived at the station shortly before midnight, and following the habit of most travelers made at once for the lunch counter. They demanded eggs, and asked that they might have some of that very days' laying.

"Sorry, sir," said the Clerk, "Today's eggs is all gone, but," glancing at the clock, which pointed to a quarter before 12, "if you'd not mind the date, HI could give you some of tomorrow's."—Reynold's Weekly.

Little Acts of Kindness.

Walter's mother had made a point of teaching him to be very kind to animals. One day he came running into his mother, exclaiming eagerly, "Oh, mother, I'm sure you will like the little girl who's moved in next door. She's such a nice little girl, mother, and so kind to animals!"

"She looks like a nice little girl," said Walter's mother, "and I think I shall like her. But how is she kind to animals?"

"Well," explained Walter, "we had some chestnuts just now, and she found a worm in one, and she—didn't—eat—it!"—Lippincott's.

Muskrat Skin Cure.

"The skin of a muskrat taken and worn next to the chest will cure any case of asthma in the world," said a Louisville man. "I had an uncle who suffered a thousand deaths with asthma and tried everything that could be bought in the way of medicine. Finally one day an old time friend told him of the muskrat skin, and he tried it. In two months he was as well as he had ever been. Just how the skin works about a cure is a mystery, but it will do it."—Nashville Tennessean.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

It is not unlikely that the conditions governing the tri-city matches for the Lesley cup will be changed ere the Boston, Philadelphia and Metropolitan teams meet in 1908. There seems to be no doubt that a majority of the golfers who competed at the Country Club of Brookline recently are dissatisfied with the two-ball foursome, which was substituted for the four-ball competition.

Walter J. Travis, who led the Metropolitan team to victory in the decisive match against Philadelphia, said on his return that his opinion was the same as it had always been—most decidedly in favor of the four-ball. The latter, according to Travis, is a better competition in every way. He contends that golf consists of playing one's own ball from tee to hole, only possible in the four-ball style. As a parting shot, Travis referred to the two-ball foursome as a hybrid.

To the average American golfer, who wants plenty of action, there is doubtful fun in a form of contest that makes a person walk eighteen holes to play nine. So far as can be learned, the only members of the local team in favor of the two-ball affair are Findlay S. Douglas and John M. Ward. Over Philadelphia way the sentiment among the players is decidedly in favor of the four-ball and rumor has it that even the Bostonians are by no means unanimous for the old-fashioned foursome. It will be remembered that the change this year was brought about at the request of the Massachusetts Golf Association, headed by G. Herbert Windeler, its president.

Leighton Calkins, secretary of the Metropolitan Golf Association, who saw both matches at Brookline, was not impressed with the two-ball foursome. While admitting that the change seemed to have little to recommend it, Mr. Calkins stated that he preferred to wait before placing himself on record with a decided opinion. Later on he intends to communicate with those who played on the Metropolitan team with a view to ascertaining how they stand on the matter now that the two-ball affair has been given an actual test.

In the "News of the World" tournament at Sunnyside the old guard of British professionals secured the major part of the $1,200 prize money. James Braid won first prize, $500, and a gold medal. This makes the third win for Braid, the other winners being J. H. Taylor, in 1904, and Alec Herd, in 1906. In the final round of the recent competition Braid beat Taylor by 4 up and 2 to play, the latter receiving $150. In the previous round Taylor beat Harry Vardon 1 up, while Braid defeated E. Ray, 4 up and 3 to play. Both of the defeated semi-finalists received $75.

FOOTBALL.

The football season of two leading members of the gridiron community will reach its climax next Saturday, when Exeter and Andover meet in their annual game. This time these tributaries to the big colleges will play at Exeter and "form" points strongly to a victory for Exeter. Last year and the year before Exeter was the favorite, just as she is this year, but Andover won each time, 28 to 0 in 1905 and 6 to 0 in 1906. Exeter has far and away the better record this fall, but the Andover lads never are beaten beforehand or by dope. Only one touchdown has been scored against Exeter, that by the Yale freshmen, and only on one other occasion was she scored on, that being a field goal by the Princeton freshmen. Time was when the big prep school elevens knocked the spots out of the freshmen teams with regularity, but since freshmen are not allowed to play on the varsity they have been drubbing the schoolboys. However, Exeter's only defeats this season have been by the Eli and Tiger youngsters.

So far as the Yale line is concerned, there is, as pointed out by "Old Grad" in the Boston Herald, some cause for uneasiness among Yale adherents in the fact that it is taking longer than usual to decide on its final make up. The late day changes indicate that the coaches are not satisfied.

And still the Western teams—inferior though they are to the East in general football ability—go on doing things in the field goal line that their Eastern brethren do not equal. Graham of Michigan kicked two placement goals against Vanderbilt, and, judging from the description of the game, they were place kicks from scrimmage, too, the hardest kind of field goals. Both were from the 25 yard line. Capron of Minnesota made all Minnesota's points against Chicago by drop kicks. We went into rapture here when three drop kicks were made in the Pennsylvania-Swarthmore game, two on one side and one on the other, but here is one man who dropkicks three goals. Neil Snow of Michigan was umpire of the Michigan-Vanderbilt game—a sporty arrangement that. Snow has the reputation of being competent and impartial, and that being the case Vanderbilt did not care where he came from. The East has yet to parallel this case in its big games. Yet Edwards of Princeton or Sharpe of Yale would doubtless be thoroughly impartial officials for a Yale-Princeton game. As umpires they are in a class with Thompson as a referee.

Captain Price of the Washington and Jefferson team descanted as follows on Yale and Princeton: "The two teams, as they appeared to me in the games I played against them, are in an almost balance of strength and ability, with the scale tipped, if at all, slightly toward Yale. Princeton beat us 40 to 0 and Yale beat us 11 to 0, but no comparison can be made from that fact. An off day at Princeton made us easy for the Tigers, who would not have won by any such score if we had played against them as we did against Yale. I think the slippery field at New Haven helped keep Yale's score down, and I think there is superiority in the Yale line that will be an important factor in the Princeton game. From tackle to tackle Yale's line is strong enough to go through Princeton, and the Yale defence is the stiffest I have met this year. James, our left guard, who outplayed McFadyen at Princeton, thinks Gotbel the strongest man he has played against. Yale will find it very difficult to gain by end runs, while the fast and tricky Princeton backs and their perfect interference will present a problem that the Yale ends will find hard to solve."

Breaded Liver.

"No liver for me," said the fastidious member of the family. "I draw the line at that." The rest of us wanted a meal of liver, so the cook cut thin slices of it, and fried them brown in salt pork fat. Then dipping the slices first in beaten egg, and then in cracker crumbs, she browned them again. The result looked so tempting that the fastidious one tried it, and now breaded liver is one of her favorite dishes.—Mattie W. Baker, in Table Talk.

PRESIDENT LIKENS ELECTION OF FORT TO CLOSE SQUEEZE OF VOORHEES IN '98.

"The President regards the results of the election as extremely gratifying. He has sent a letter of hearty congratulations to Mr. Heney on the result in San Francisco.

"The victory in New Jersey was precisely what happened nine years ago in the middle of President McKinley's administration. He had carried New Jersey by 88,000, and two years afterward the Republican candidate for Governor had 5,500, the vote being cut down just as happened in the case of Judge Fort.

"As compared with the elections next preceding the last Presidential election we have done decidedly better than we did in 1903. Then, as Tuesday, Rhode Island and Maryland went against us; but this year we have won a sweeping victory in Kentucky for the first time since McKinley's first election; and the victory in Massachusetts was also remarkable. The showing in Pennsylvania and Nebraska is equally good.

"The showing in New York State, as a whole, was excellent—far better than was the case prior to the last Presidential election. That the result in Manhattan was due to purely local causes is shown by comparing it with the decisive triumphs in Brooklyn, Buffalo, Albany, and in the State generally. The President's own home, county of Nassau, made a better showing than it ever has in an off year.

"As a whole, the showing has been an improvement over what it was four years ago and eight years ago."—Statement by President Roosevelt.

HONOR SACHEM M'CARDELL

acter of McCardell. He declared that some who did not know the man had abused him unjustly and that his friends had found in him an unselfish and loyal leader. Mr. Buckle caused much laughter when he presented another gift to Mr. McCardell in the name of the club. It was a jewel case but when opened by Mr. Smith exploded. Inside was a fake infernal machine. A handsome silver handle umbrella was presented by George F. Tobin. On it was a plate incribed "To Our Leader; a token of esteem from the Get-Togethers."

District Court Judge William Newcorn spoke in praise of Mr. Windham and for the club presented the Waldorf's proprietor with a beautiful scarf pin in which was a large lucky stone for November. Mr. Windham made a brief response.

During the fun, one of the Get-Togethers presented to Mr. Smith for Mr. McCardell a cashier's check on the City National Bank for six cents in lawful American money.

Assistant Prosecutor English and Assemblyman Moxon both made finely received speeches. Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur and Amos Andrews were among the other speakers.

The Get-Togethers present were: Councilmen Francis L. Montgomery, William L. Gloak, Herbert Buxton, Ralph I. Tolles, Charles Randolph and Frank Randolph, Health Board Member Charles Dunham, former Mayor James F. Buckle, Postmaster Elias H. Bird, former Police Commissioner Amos Andrews, County Election Officer Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., District Court Judge William Newcorn, County Chairman Frank H. Smith, Overseer of the Poor Alexander Ayres, former Sheriff B. Frank Coriell, Charles Foster, A. D. Edgar, Thomas Hanna, William Clifton, Sanford Robison, Joseph Noonan, James Stewart, George F. Tobin, John Trainer, John Mortimer, Alexander MacDuff, Robert Craig, William Craig, Edward Van Winkle, Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur, E. C. Westcott and William R. Townsend.

The guests were: Mayor Charles Joel Fisk, Factory Inspector Neil McCarthy, Assemblyman John R. Moxon, County Clerk James C. Clavert, Assistant Prosecutor John English, Jr., Dr. A. K. Brennan, J. L. Steele, Ralph L. Morrow, William Smith and Francis J. Blatz.

The banquetting room was gorgeously decorated with the American colors and chrysanthemums in profusion. Cut glass and silver adorned the long table, where the councils of the club are generally held. The menu prepared under the direction of Mrs. Windham was one of the best ever served at a public gathering here. It follows:

THE FORUM.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Among the various comments on the outcome of the recent election treat the following in last night's Daily Press:

"The result shows clearly that the people in general have confidence in the Republican party. Never in its history has New Jersey enjoyed such good government and general prosperity as during the twelve years of Republican administration. Mr. Fort's fight was won because he stood for honest and unequivocal principles. He will make a splendid Governor."—Frank H. Smith.

NEW YORK CITY.

It requires 3,200 conductors to keep New York street car passengers stepping lively.

Eight hundred and fifty thousand dollars is drawn from the New York savings banks each day.

Plans of the New York city managers of theatres indicate that their patrons will see 120 new plays during the next eight months.

Battery park in New York city is a school of languages. A French visitor in the city who can speak in nine tongues heard every one of them there one day last week.

There is no bridge on Bridge street to give its name, but there was a hundred years ago, when what is Broad street was an inlet from the bay and was crossed by a rough wooden structure where the former street is.—New York Herald.

The seed sowing at grange picnics and field yas now past should bring forth abundant harvests the coming winter.

Germantown (N. Y.) grange has recently purchased a $4,000 hall property. There's a live grange for you.

Sixty subordinate granges are said to have been represented at a field day at Brattleboro, Vt., in August.

August 10 was a great day for Wayne county, N. Y., patrons. About 1,500 assembled at the farm of S. E. Budd near Newark village for their annual picnic. The speakers were Charles Wilson of the State Agricultural college, Cornell university, and J. H. J. Watkins of Herkimer.

More people have heard grange doctrine preached and there have been more preachers thereof the past summer than ever before. Grange field days and grange picnics seem to have been more numerous than ever—a good sign, by the way.

Practising by Ear.

When Grover Cleveland was practising law in Buffalo one of his friends was a lazy young lawyer who was forever pestering him with questions about legal points that he could just as well have looked up for himself. Even Cleveland's patience had an end. One day as his friend entered he remarked.

"There are my books. Help yourself to them. You can look up your own case."

The lazy lawyer stared at him in amazement.

"See here, Grover Cleveland," he said indignantly, "I want you to understand that you and your old books can go to thunder. You know very well that I don't read law. I practise entirely by ear."—Everybody's Magazine.

About Authors.

Miss Marie van Vorst and her sister-in-law, Mrs. John van Vorst, who live in Paris most of the year, are now making their annual visit to the United States. Miss van Vorst brought two new novels with her, the result of her past year's work. One of these will appear in the Saturday Evening Post, the other in Lippincott's. In the latter two of the leading characters are Bulstrode and Mrs. Falconer, who have already figured in stories by this author, published in Harper's and Scribner's. Those who have been privileged to read these new novels praise them highly.

Manager—We must put a good deal of realism in this wood scene. Can you get someone to growl so as to resemble a bear?

ENDEAVOR UNION RALLY

Meeting at Seventh Day Baptist Church Attended by Delegations from Societies.

REV. DR. GREENWAY SPEAKS.

As Member of State C. E. Union Board He Gives Suggestions for Work—Congregationalists Win Attendance Banner.

Christian Endeavorers from all the local churches and from churches in the nearby towns gathered in the Seventh-Day Baptist church last night, where there was a rally service, a review of the work of each society and a general roll call of the local Endeavorers from the various societies. The society of the Congregational church had the largest number of members present at the rally, and will be awarded the banner for a big roll. This banner is to be formally presented to the society at their meeting in the Congregational church Sunday night.

The meeting was opened with a song service led by a good sized voluntary choir. E. C. Martin led the singing. Rev. G. B. Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, conducted a simple devotional service. Echoes of the recent State convention of the Christian Endeavor societies, in the nature of summarization of the proceedings and of the various meetings were given by Charles Windham, of the Warren Chapel society; Fred C. Lounsbury, of the First Presbyterian church society, and Clarence B. La Rue, of the Congregational church society, president of the local Christian Endeavor Union. Their reports gave many practical suggestions for carrying on the work of the Endeavorers in this city, as summarized by the speakers at the convention.

Rev. Walter Greenway, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian church of Jersey City, was the speaker of the evening. At the outset of his remarks, he congratulated the local societies on the enthusiasm shown by the large representations present at the rally. He is a member of the advisory board of the State Christian Endeavor Union and gave valuable suggestions for arousing interest in the work of the local societies, outlining at some length several practical suggestions for carrying on the work according to conditions in the various societies.

DEAN OF WILLIAMS COLLEGE SPEAKS AT HIGH SCHOOL

Professor Frederick C. Ferry, dean of Williams College, made an address at the morning exercises at the city high school today. Dean Ferry is brother of Miss Mary E. Ferry, of the school German department. He spoke in commendation of the school building and efficiency of the various departments in preparing pupils for college. In comparison to the schools abroad, the speaker said that public schools in this country are far superior, especially to those in France and Germany.

In speaking of college life, Dean Ferry spoke in support of the small college for a boy. He talked in an informal way of the life of Williams, and said that from conversation with men in other colleges, he had been informed that, next to their own alma mater in each case, Williams was considered the best college among the smaller institutions.

Dean Ferry visited at the various classes of the school during the morning and will be the guest of his sister until his return to Williamstown.

DR. GROSZMANN TALKS ON LANGUAGE TEACHING

The study of grammar and some hints on language teaching formed the topic of Dr. M. P. E. Groszmann in his lecture to local school teachers in the city high school auditorium yesterday afternoon. The lecture, which formed the second of a course to be continued through the winter, was postponed from Wednesday afternoon on account of the storm and was well attended, despite the blustery weather.

Grammar, the speaker said, is the most elementary form of logic and the inflected forms of grammar of foreign languages make them simpler for the young mind to comprehend than the uninflected forms of English grammar. Definitions are an obstacle to the childish mind, undeveloped in logic.

A young child does not possess the power of logical reasoning, the speaker maintained, for his conception of causality refers to organic, rather than to logical causes. Dr. Groszmann spoke at length of the periods of developments of the child's mind, stating that the dawn of true reasoning came at the tenth year, but there was no real reasoning power before an age of puberty.

For this reason, Dr. Groszmann claims that the study of grammar is unsuited to lower and intermediate grades, and all the points on grammar which come to the young child come by unconscious absorption from the reading he does or hears and in a large measure from the teacher's example in classroom conversation. The study is carried on by analogy largely and the study of foreign languages is helpful. In every child the language making instinct is innate, as shown by the eagerness to make secret languages and codes. Puzzles have a great educational value in mind training for a logical end, but in the early study of language the child merely gains general notions of the various parts of speech, without any attempt at definition.

In speaking of the grammatical work in the upper grades, Dr. Groszmann claimed that the treatment should be general, and the sentence should be the starting point. In speaking of the sentence, the lecturer spoke of its evolution and the elementary analysis by diagram. Thought and style should be aimed at rather than dissection and there should be plenty of composition work, with concrete exercises. There are different types of mind and grammar is clearly not suited to all, any more than all minds are mathematical minds.

The burden of grammatical instruction, the speaker said, should be thrown in the work in foreign languages, where inflection is used. Grammar should be taught in all grades and Latin should be begun at the age of twelve years. There is an inadequacy in the definitions of current text-books and valuable revision is possible in this field. No definition of a subject can be assimilated before the nominative case is understood and the training in definitions should be left for secondary education. The children should be taught the correlation of the work in English with that of the foreign languages as they learn them.

Dr. Groszmann concluded his remarks by the outline of a course in language instruction which was quite the reversal of the traditional course now in use.

NOVEMBER'S MAGAZINES

A Northern magazine is sympathy with Southern ideals and struggles is exemplified in the Atlantic Monthly, which celebrates its semi-centennial with the November issue. During the sternest stress of the Reconstruction period, in fact, ever since the war, thoughtful and able articles on the South have appeared in the columns of that periodical. The brilliant series of essays on the Reconstruction, printed in the Atlantic in 1901, will be immediately recalled. Soldiers and scholars such as Nathaniel Southgate Shaler, writes like Thomas Nelson Page, historians like Woodrow Wilson, have all contributed their work to this cause.

John Sharpe Williams.

Many Washington friends of John Sharpe Williams have been grttified at his election from the State of Mississippi. It was a hard fight, but Mr. Williams has been accustomed to that in his political career. Certain fit is that none can gainsay the splendid qualities of the erstwhile Congressman of Mississippi. The general plan of promotihg Congressmen to the Senate has been observed North, South, East and West, and few Senators from the South begin their work with better qualifications than John Sharpe Williams. I was much interested in the many letters received from subscribers in Mississippi desiring that mention be made of their new Senator, in whom they evidently feel an enthusiastic pride. —Joe Mitchell Chapple in "Affairs at Washington," in National Magazine for October.

Eating on the Train in Spain.

As even express trains seldom attain a higher rate of speed than twenty-five miles per hour, travel is slow and tedious though fairly comfortable, and to enjoy Spain one must assume the leisurely indifference of the Spaniard to whom Manana is always the chosen time. He is wise who carries his own luncheons and never are dainty tea baskets more indispensable than on these long journeys. Spanish etiquette demands that the traveler before partaking of his food must politely offer it to those who share the compartment with him. It may either be graciously accepted or declined. In no country is it so difficult to travel and to secure information, as but little English is spoken even by important officials.—The Travel Magazine.

At the Ford.

When the rose means nothing but a rose;
When storms are storms—not clouds on blue,
And rain means naught but cold and chill,
Not tears of angels drifting through;
When grief means grief and nothing more,
When sorrow's kiss is like a blow,
And when there is no hope of Spring
Beneath the earth's baptism of snow—
It will be age—not faithlessness,
That stills the music in my throat.
Forget not how, when I was young,
I knew my song and trilled each note.

—November Smart Set.

Carmen.

In the estimate of one of New York's leading critics, "the most notable achievements of Oscar Hammerstein's season of opera was the performance of Bizet's 'Carmen;' and of this the disinguishing feature was the impersonation of the heroine by Mme. Chlotilde Bressler-Gianoli." Mr. Sigismond de Ivanowski has chosen Mme. Bressler-Gianoli's "Carmen" for the first of his series of portraits of noted opera singers, which, reproduced in color, are to be one of The Century's are features during the coming year. This will be the frontispiece of the November Century; and Richard Aldrich has written to accompany it a critique of Mme. Bressler-Gianoli's impersonation of the character.

John Quixote.

George Allan England contributes a most amusing French-Canadian story to The Red Book Magazine for November. The title "John Quixote" gives no clew to the broad humor of the story which is concerned with the unavertable heroism of a "jumping Frenchman." A story of considerable power and singular literary felicity is "The Painted Wilderness" by Will Levington Comfort, a name rapidly becoming familiar to magazine-readers, and another narrative of delicate charm is "Monsieur Parapluie" by Kate Arms.

Know Your Grocer.

"Do you know your grocer?" asks the editor of Woman's Home Companion in the November number.. "It is right to trade with the grocer who will give you the best returns for the money your husband works so hard to earn. It is only womanly and neighborly to trade with the husband of your best friend, whose interests you thereby forward. It is only business like to trade with the man who is honest and square in his accounts and who makes good every item on your bills.

Pictorial Reproductions.

The current number of the Burr McIntosh Monthly, now on all newsstands, is one that will attract the attention of lovers of the beautiful in pictorial reproductions of an unusual nature. The engravings are of such superb character that they appear very much like photo-gravures. This issue contains reproductions from photographs of many celebrated people, with its usual fine selection of lanscape views and an especially interesting article on Saskatchekan, the wonderful country to the north of us. In this issue also is shown the winning photographs in the recent contest for the most beautiful photograph of a child under six years of age.

Going to Be Fined.

When George Ade was a newspaper reporter he was sent to "write up" an Irish laborer who had fallen from a building. When Mr. Ade arrived on the scene, several officers and others were helping the injured man into the ambulance. Mr. Ade pulled out his pad and pencil. "What's his name?" he asked one of the policemen.

The injured man, who had heard Ade and who mistook him for the timekeeper employed by the contractor, rolled his eyes in a disgusted way.

"What d'ye think o' that?" he muttered. "I'm goin' to be docked for the few minutes I lose goin' to the hospital!"—From Success Magazine.

The Spanish Main Is Land.

Few are sure of their knowledge of the Spanish Main and the Great South Sea and where those regions were. Longfellow's curious mistake as to the Main in "The Wreck of the Hesperus" is an evidence of the general misconception: the old sailor "who had sailed the Spanish Main" possessed a qualification that would hardly commend him to a navigator, for the Main, being land and not water, can no me be sailed tthan the State of Colorado. The interchangeable sea terms "on" and "off" may plead an excuse for our jumbled notions, but the workings of imagination, evident in most tales of the treasure ships, are unreasonable when the bald truth is so amply exciting and blood-stirring. — From "The Spanish Gallean and Pieces-of-Eight," by John C. Fitzpatrick, in the November Scribner.

Editor Fitch on Speaker Cannon.

George Fitch, the young Illinois editor who wrote such a remarkable description of the Missouri river last spring, has written a character sketch of another great natural wonder. The subject is Speaker Cannon, and the article will be in the December American Magazine. The cartoons will be by McCutcheon, of Chicago.

A Conscientious Workman.

Strong-Arm Tim is employed in carrying bricks on to a barge. His strength is so great that his boss keeps increasing his loads until finally the gang-plank breaks and lands Tim and his bricks in the water. Tim rapidly sinks, but present comes to the surface and shouts out, "Throw me a rope there, you spalpeens, youse!"

While his companions are searching frantically for a rope Tim comes to the surface a second time and bellows out, "Here, there, youse loafers, if ye don't throw me a rope I'll be after droppin' some of these here bricks!"—The Circle.

A Voice from the Bastile.

Peter Allaire, a New York merchant, was arrested and thrown into the French Bastile charged with conspiring as an English spy to poison Dr. Benjamin Franklin. While in prison Peter Allaire kept a diary of each day's incidents. This diary has recently been found by some of his descendants, and it is published in the November number of The Metropolitan Magazine together with facsimile reproductions of the documents in the case. It takes us into that old prison around which such a mantle of horror has been thrown, and which was destroyed by the Revolutionists in 1789. It is highly fascinating reading.

A Great Game of Chance.

"Give me the Broadway franchise and the coal-oil trade of Philadelphit, and I will retire." This was the modest request of William Elkins, the grocer-boy who became a prince of finance.

In the November McClure's Burton J. Hendrick, who is so well and favorably known for his insurance articles, tells the story of America's greatest fortunes and the men who made them. These articles will attract the attention of the political economist and the social reformer, but for the average man they will have the fascination of romance. These fortune-makers were adventurous spirits playing great games of chance, at times amounting almost to war, in which all things were considered fair. One of the stakes was the monopoly of a street-railway system which now transports 500,000,000 passengers annually and collects $21,000,000 a year in fares. These articles tell of the results of their ownership.

GERMAN GLEANINGS.

The first use of a menu at a banquet in Germany dates back to 1489.

Cocoa is drunk more largely in Germany than in any other country.

House numbers in Berlin are in luminous paint and are plainly visible at night.

A dumb tramp has just been arrested in Berlin for begging. He used a phonograph to pour out his tale of woe to passersby.

Germany's wines crop last year was the poorest since 1898. There are signs of a crisis similar to that in France. The growers are agitating for greater legislative protection from the competition of adulterated and sugared wines.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

The attitude of Walter N. Lawrence, manager of the Madison Square theatre, New York, toward the American playwright to whom, according to official announcement, he will hereafter give the preference in the selection and production of plays, will inspire the American dramatist with hope of a more promising future. If Mr. Lawrence persists in overlooking the foreign writers for the stage and exploits the works of native authors as he successfully has done in the past, he will not only add to his bank account, but convince the public that after all, the American playwright is a too neglected factor in the amusement world entitled to recognition and respect.

The American stage is no longer dependent upon British, French or German authors for plays of merit or drawing power. The success of Mr. Lawrence with "The Three of Us," which will be at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night, and other American plays of that character which have been eminently profitable and which have scored genuine artistic renown, is convincing proof that the American playwright stands second to none, be his nationality what it may. While we are disposed to think that the managers have been guided by sound business rules of the American playwright on the eastern stage inevitably leads to the conclusion that they will think twice hereafter before they pick theatrical lemons in the foreign play marts and allow the luscious fruit hanging in their own gardens to languish and rot.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Lawrence will find many followers in the managerial field. Should this be the case, the American dramatist will have public felicitate itself upon the discernment of managers who supply them with the best intellectual entertainment American brains can provide.

FOR SABBATH DAY OBSERVANCE IN STATE.

Because New Jersey is becoming more or less of an irreligious playground, and there is great need in the State for greater Sabbath observance, according to their views, Sabbath observance workers, at a meeting held Monday in the Trenton Y. M. C. A. parlors, decided to hold a convention in Trenton on January 30 and 31, at which time plans will be discussed for a campaign in the interests of strict observance of Sunday.

While this convention question was being considered by the Sabbath observance delegation, the Trenton Ministerial Union was informed of the plan, and at its meeting Monday in the First Presbyterian church, the campaign outline was unanimously endorsed. The union was represented at the meeting by the Rev. Samuel Hodge, of the Fifth Presbyterian church. Those at the meeting besides the Rev. Mr. Hodge, were the Rev. Dr. T. T. Mutchler, of Philadelphia, president of the Federation of Sabbath Rest Associations of America; the Rev. Dr. F. J. Stanley, of New York, of the American Sabbath Union; the Rev. Alfred Wagg, presiding elder of the Trenton District of the New Jersey Methodist Episcopal Conference; the Rev. Dr. Percy Shelly, of the Sabbath Observance Association of Hunterdon county; David Biggs, of Pleasant Run, Hunterdon county; the Rev. Dr. Samuel Price, of Camden, chairman of the Sabbath Observance Committee of the Presbyterian Synod of New Jersey; the Rev. Dr. James W. Rogan, of Hunterdon county, and the Rev. Dr. S. H. Hann, of Camden, of the State Law and Order League.

At the close of the conference a committee, consisting of the Rev. Drs. Price, Wagg, Mutchler, Hann and Mr. Biggs, was named to arrange for the convention to be held at Trenton in January.

The object of the January convention will be to form a general State organization for the furtherance of Sabbath observance.

Allaying Suspicion.

Three tired citizens a lawyer, a doctor and a newspaper man—sat in a back room recently in the gray light of the early dawn. On the table were many empty bottles and a couple of packs of cards. As they sat in silence a rat scurried across the hearth into the darkness beyond. The three men shifted their feet and looked at each other uneasily. After a long pause the lawyer spoke.

"I know what you fellows are thinking," he said, "you think I saw a rat, but I didn't."—Boston Record.

SOME STATEMENTS REGARDING NEW THEORY

Followers of Cooper and His Novel Ideas Give Reason for Their Belief in Him.

With a theory that human health is dependent on the stomach and with a medicine which he says proves this theory, L. T. Cooper, a comparatively young man, has built up an immense following during the past year.

Cooper has visited most of the leading cities of the country, and in each city has aroused a storm of discussion about his beliefs and his medicines. Wherever he has gone, people have called upon him by tens of thousands, and his preparation has sold in immense quantities.

The sale of this medicine has now spread over the entire country, and is growing enormously each day. In view of this, the following statements from two of the great number of followers which he now has, are of general interest.

Miss Agnes Viggenhouser, of 942 St. Louis Avenue, Chicago, has the following to say on the subject of the Cooper preparations: "For more than ten years I was broken down in health. I could not sleep and I was very nervous. Gradually I began to lose my memory, until I could not remember things from one day to another. I had severe pains and cramps in my body, and I would at times see dark spots before my eyes. I was unable to do any work whatever, as my strength was failing. I had no appetite, nor could I take any medicine.

"I had about given up hope of ever being well again when I read of Mr. Cooper's remedies. I decided to give them a trial, and I began to feel better at once. After taking the medicine for two weeks I can say that I am a new woman. I can eat with enjoyment, the pains in my body have left me, and I am stronger than I have been for years.

"I cannot say enough for Mr. Cooper's remedies. They are wonderful, for they have done everything claimed for them in my case."

Another statement by Mr. W. B. Stewart, 109 W. Madison St., Chicago, is as follows: "I have had stomach trouble for years, and anyone who is afflicted this way knows what an awful distressed feeling it causes. Many a time I have felt that I would give most any price to be cured. It was by accident that I heard of this man Cooper's remedies. I immediately made up my mind to buy a treatment of him. I used it for about two weeks, and it is impossible to tell how much good it has done me. I feel altogether different. I have more life and energy than I have had for years. This medicine certainly does stimulate and strengthen the whole system. Tired feeling and weak condition of the stomach has entirely passed away. I feel well again."

We sell Cooper's celebrated medicines which have made this wonderful record in all parts of the country.

$1,500,000 FORT PLUMS

In First Year Governor Will Distribute Offices Worth $827,500 in Salaries.

SOME ARE IN UNION COUNTY.

Terms of Chief Justice and Associates Expire—Attorney-General's and Chancellor's Places to Be Filled.

Few Chief Executives of this State have had the opportunity that will be given to Governor-elect John Franklin Fort to appoint men to so many and such high offices. The first year of his term, 1908, will leave vacant more important positions than any other year. The aggregate salaries of the appointees of that year for their whole term of office will amount to approximately $827,500. In his whole term of office he will have the distribution of salaried places aggregating in value approximately $1,500,000.

To begin with, the Governor has the power to appoint a private secretary at $4,000 per year and an executive clerk at $1,800. Then there are the appointments to be made with advice and consent of the Senate. First in the list is the Attorney-General, a position now occupied by Robert H. McCarter, at a salary of $11,000 a year. Chancellor William J. Magie's term will also expire in 1908, leaving a $7,000 a year office to be filled.

In the Supreme Court Chief Justice William S. Gummere's term also comes to an end at the same time as that of four of the associate justices. The salary of the chief justice is $11,000 per year for seven years and that of the associate justices $10,000 per year for the same term. Mr. Fort will have the appointment of his own successor on the bench.

Atlantic, Bergen, Hudson and Morris counties all have new appointments to the county court bench, positions lasting for five years and carrying a salary of $3,000 a year. Two members of the State Board of Assessors, which he will have to appoint for terms of four years at salaries of $2,500 a year, will add $20,000 to the total.

Only one district court judge's term comes to an end in the coming year, but $4,000 a year will have to be expended for five years to fill his place. Thirty thousand dollars more will be needed to cover the salaries of the four county court judges who will be appointed for seven years.

In the State Board of the Equalization of Taxes one vacancy will occur, and the man who is appointed to the position will draw $3,500 for the five years of his term. Another five year appointment that will come in for a share of Mr. Fort's consideration is that of Commissioner of Public Roads, the term of which is three years with a salary of $5,000. In 1908 the Bureau of Statistics will lose its chief, and to supply this vacancy some one will be appointed to draw $2,500 for five years. Next year also the State Sewerage Commission loses two members and the Passaic Flood Commission five. The salaries of the first will total $69,000 during the three years which the appointees hold office, while those of the latter will aggregate $50,000 for the four-year term. Besides these there are prosecutors of pleas to be appointed in Atlantic, Cape May, Hudson, Mercer, Morris and Union counties.

That will not end the newly elected Governor's appointments. With the consent of the Senate he has several unremunerative offices to fill and by his own choice is allowed to fill several more, both with and without compensation. The biggest single term on the compensated list will be the salaries of the oyster superintendents of Atlantic and Ocean counties, both of which carry with them a three-year term at $1,000 a year. Outside of these there are a member of the State Board of Pharmacy, who gets $5 a day for services rendered; a State oyster commissioner, salary $500 per year, for three years; oyster commissioner for the district of Shark river, salary $500 for three years, and three oyster commissioners for Atlantic county, amounting to $3,000 for their three-year term.

The years of 1909 and 1910 also have some large offices that will have their occupants designated by the Governor. In the second year of his term Mr. Fort will have to appoint three judges of the Court of Errors and Appeals, a justice of the Supreme Court, two district court judges and a county court judge. In that year, too, Essex will be in line to have its vacant office of prosecutor of pleas, now held by Henry Young, supplied. The term of David Baird, of Camden, on the Board of Assessors comes to and end the same year.

Vivian M. Lewis, clerk in Chancery, who was mentioned for Governor in the State convention this year, comes to the end of his term in 1910. With him will go out District Court Judge Lintott, of Newark. Another man who comes to the end of his term is Major Carl Lentz, member of the State Board for Equalization of Taxes.

Besides, there are likely to be unforseen vacancies, due to deaths, resignations and removals. It is, indeed, a rich prospect for a Governor to build up a strong personal political machine.

Football and General Sports

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The alumni eleven which played the city high school team Election Day, is still organized, and Manager Bert Leggett will arrange games with other teams. He is completing arrangements for a second game with the city high school eleven, to be played Thanksgiving morning.

The Dunellen football team will play the Mohawks at Dunellen tomorrow afternoon. The whistle blows at 3 o'clock. The game should be a hard fight, for neither team has been beaten this season.

The borough high school eleven will play the team of the Holy Cross Choir Boys Club on the Cricket field this afternoon. Game called at 3:30.

Carlon Smith has been elected captain of the North Plainfield high school team, which is practising regularly. Percy Bailey, the manager, is making up a schedule for the team.

During the past three weeks, there has been a total attendance of 801 in the various classes at the Y. M. C. A. There is a marked increase in the enrollment in the business men's class and in the boys' classes.

The city high school eleven will play the Hudson River Military Academy at Finderne tomorrow afternoon. This will be a return game; the first time the elevens met this season, the local players won by a small score. The high school management has arranged for a special trolley to take a bunch of the school "rooters" to the game.

BOWLING.

The Central Journal Bowling League tournament will begin the last week in November. The Park Club, which is a member of the league, will be represented by a strong team under the leadership of Captain F. O. Ball. It is now expected that Alex. Milne will be a member of the team as he has about recovered from a severe injury to his foot.

Bowling Entries Coming In.

Entries for the five man team bowling tourney to be held at Campbell's alleys during the winter, will close tomorrow night. Enough names have already been handed in to form six teams and it is thought there will be enough for ten.

EMPIRES DEFEATED.

Newly Organized Bowling Team Drops Its First Match Series.

The recently organized Empire bowling team met the Dunellen five in a match series on Campbell's alleys last night and lost two out of the three games played. Scores on both sides were low as a rule, only one man, Smith, of Dunellen, going over the 200 mark. The winners lost the one game by only sixteen pins and would have taken it but for a couple of breaks in the last frame.

VAUDEVILLE SHOW AT LOCAL THEATRE

Beginning next Monday afternoon and lasting for three afternoons and nights, Manager Counihan will inaugurate a series of high class moving pictures and vaudeville combined at the New Plainfield theatre. The pictures are of the same variety as those seen for the past few weeks at the New York Lyceum and have been applauded nightly by large audiences. Several of the subjects are of recent taking and include the giant steamer Lusitania entering the New York harbor, Governor-elect Fort on his campaign tour and the Elks parade at Philadelphia.

The vaudeville acts will be of the "all star" variety and the same as those seen on the Keith & Proctor circuits. This style of entertainment has not been offered at the local playhouse since last season and will undoubtedly be greatly appreciated by the patrons.

BIG M. E. CONFERENCE HERE IN APRIL NEXT

Bishop Henry Spellmeyer will preside at the next annual meeting of the Newark Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The announcement was made today, when the list of conference assignments was given out by the board of bishops in session at Spokane, Wash.

Because of his popularity in the Newark Conference and the fact that he was a member of it at the time of his election to the bishopric in 1904, an effort was made a year ago to have Bishop Spellmeyer assigned to preside at the session in Morristown last spring, when the conference celebrated its fiftieth anniversary. It was found, however, that the bishop would not return in time from the tour he was making of the conferences in China.

The fifty-first meeting of the Newark Conference will be held in the First Church, Plainfield, beginning April 1. Among Bishop Spellmeyer's other assignments are South Florida Mission, St. Petersburg, January 16, and Florida Conference, Jacksonville, January 23.

The New Jersey Conference will meet at Millville, March 11, and Bishop Wilson will be the presiding officer.

Pensions Now, Not Turkeys.

With each recurrent Thanksgiving Day it has been the custom of the Westinghouse Air Brake Company to give each of its 3,500 employes at Wilmerding, Pa., a fine fat turkey. At a recent meeting of the Air Brake Company directors the proposition of establishing a pension fund was taken up. The directors named a committee to formulate a plan. Following the meeting, it was suggested that instead of giving turkeys the money be turned into the pension fund. The money that was expended for turkeys will not be made the nucleus of the fund, but it will be a nest egg that will help considerably in swelling the total that will be used as the base of the fund.

Great Opportunities.

The millionaire frowned and gently stroked the ear of his $5,000 bulldog.

"And so," he said, "you want to marry my daughter?"

"I do," replied the young man, as the sweat rolled from him and trickled gracefully on the gorgeous carpet.

"What are your prospects?" the great man asked. "Is there any chance of promotion in your business?"

"Not one chance but a hundred and ninety-eight!" said the young man. "Our firm employes two hundred men, and my job is next to the lowest. Yes, I'm bound to rise."

Expresses Appreciation.

Chief Doane received today for the firemen's pension fund a generous check from Mrs. Rowland Cox, of West Seventh street. It was forwarded as a means of substantially expressing her appreciation for the work this department performed at her home last week when painters set fire to the residence.

Lieutenant Colonel David Legge Brainard has assumed his duties at San Francisco of chief commissary of the department of California. Besides his excellent military record, he was a member of the Lockwood exploring expedition in 1882 to the northwest coast of Greenland and also figured in the Greely expedition in 1881.

Kearny Postpones Bond Sale.

On the advice of banking experts, the Kearny (N. J.) Common Council has decided not to try to dispose of its issue of $235,000 worth of bonds until after the first of the year, at which time it is believed better rates of interest may be obtained. The issue was offered for sale a short time ago, and no bidders replied. It was then suggested that the rate of interest be raised, in hope of finding purchasers, but this scheme was abandoned, after consultation with bankers in this city. The bonds are for new schools and other municipal purposes.

Bound Brooker Tangled Up.

William Stout, an old man from Bound Brook, got intoxicated in the city yesterday afternoon and wandered into police headquarters in mistake for a saloon. He was close to the helpless state and Doorman McCue locked him up for safe-keeping. He was arraigned before Judge Runyon this morning and was allowed to go under suspended sentence.

CHAPTER VIII.
A Night in Nice.

The drive to Nice is not only a short but pleasant one. Mr. Barnes, seated by Lady Chartris, though chatting alertly, keeps both his eyes and his ears open.

Once or twice the American listens intently, he thinks he hears pursuing hoofs. But these blend into the noises of general traffic as they reach and pass through the old town. Crossing the river by the Pont Neuf and turning down the Quai St. Jean, they drive along the Avenue Massena nearly to the sea.

Though visitors have for the last month been leaving the great watering place by the Mediterranean, there are still enough sojourners to comfortably fill the public gardens. The band is playing, the night is only pleasantly warm, and Lady Chartris seems in high spirits as Barnes says to her: "You can drop me anywhere now. Only, where shall I meet you?"

"At the Hotel de la Mediterranee. There Count Danella is doubtless waiting for me," replies the hostess. "Call for me at 11 and I'll drive you back."

Barnes alights and, as he glances at the neighboring Hotel des Anglais, he recollects this had been the scene of his first call upon Enid when Lady Chartris had invited him to accompany her and her charge to Monte Carlo. He can scarce believe it is only a month ago since he had looked in her face. His step grows light with happiness.

Barnes Alights, and as He Glances at the Neighboring Hotel des Anglais, He Recollects This Has Been Enid.

Suddenly somebody in the passing throng mentions the name of the fascinating American adventuress. A Parisian countess is saying to a lady friend: "That La Blackwood crushes us with her toilettes. Did you ever see such a robe as the wretch sported to-day?"

"By Jove, that reminds me. I wonder what Sally has to say to me?" thinks Burton, and pulls out an almost forgotten note from his pocket.

A big arc light, which was the great illuminating medium of that epoch, permits him to read:

"Mon. Cher Barnes:

"Don't hold your horses, but come to me at the St. Petersburg like a shot. I want to warn you of a very imminent danger. I have just discovered your location here by accident. Don't think I hate you, though I ought to.

Yours sincerely,
"SALLY SPOTTS."

"Will that woman never let me alone?" thinks the American, and pushes the note back in his pocket. "I'll forget Sally Spotts forever by going and seeing the minister."

But at the entrance to the residence of the divine a suspicion enters his mind that he is being followed. He makes his interview with the minister of the church of England a very short one, and coming rapidly out of the house, his quick eyes perceive two men on the opposite side of the street. These turn casually toward the traffic of the busy avenue from the railroad station and are lost in the crowd from an arriving train.

Now that his footsteps are being dogged, he thinks he had better see Perrier, the French detective recommended by the Pinkerton man. Therefore, keeping his eyes about him sharp at any dark corners of the streets, he walks to the Rue Palermo, and rings the bell at the house mentioned in Emory's letter.

Here an old woman concierge informs him that Monsieur Perrier's room is number four on the second floor.

Barnes, pushing his way to number four on the second floor, is confronted at the door of this apartment by a man of very brisk manner, sharp, penetrating eyes and a nose whose peculiar aquiline formation impresses itself on Barnes' memory.

"In order to avoid any mistake," says Barnes, "I will ask you if you are Monsieur Perrier?"

"Yes, of course; you know by my returning the word of recognition to you," remarks the Frenchman.

"I must have a reason for your declining to aid me. This matter is too important for you not to listen to me."

"I have been informed," answers Perrier, "by my poor friend Emory's letters of this peculiar and most unfortunate affair, but I do not wish to engage in it."

"Why not?" asks Barnes, shortly. "Don't you think I have money to pay for it?"

"Of course, I know Monsieur is rich," answers the Frenchman, deprecatingly. "But my life is my only asset. I have a wife and children. I saw one vendetta in Corsica a few years ago, and I don't want to get into another cat fight where cats are armed with stilletos. Your enemies already know your location at Villefranche, Bernardo Saliceti has come from Corsica hoping to win the election in his island by vengeance upon you. He and Enrico Danella, the dead Musso's nephew, are in Nice."

"Has Enrico a scar upon his forehead over his yeft eye?" asks Barnes, eagerly.

"He has."

"Then I've the name of the scar-faced gentleman, thank you," remarks Burton. "Now it is necessary you come into this affair, Perrier. You've got to aid not only me, but two women."

The answer that comes causes Barnes to look aghast.

COURT HOUSE CEREMONY

Cornerstone of Somerset's $400,000 Marble Building Laid with Masonic Ritual.

WAS AN IMPRESSIVE SERVICE.

Judge Schenck Witnesses Work Conducted by Worshipful Grand Master at Somerville—Officials Present.

An assemblage of about 2,000 people, including the judiciary, grand lodge officers and representatives from sixteen Masonic lodges in this part of the State, together with Somerset county officials were present yesterday afternoon at the laying of the cornerstone of the county's new $40,000 court house at Somerville. It was one of the most interesting events in the history of the county and the ceremonies, which were in charge of the Masonic Order of New Jersey, were most impressive. Among the Masonic bodies represented was a large delegation from Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., of this city.

Most Worshipful Grand Master Austin Hall McGregor, of Newark, officiated, taking charge of the ceremonies. He was assisted by William D. Wolfskeil, of Elizabeth, deputy grand master; the Rev. Alton M. Sherman, senior grand warden; John Zoulaf, junior grand warden, and about fourteen other grand officers of the grand lodge.

The principal address of the afternoon was delivered by Rev. Dr. Charles H. Elder, of Trenton, who talked for about a half hour. He is a member of Ashlar Lodge, F. and A. M., of Trenton, and his address was greatly enjoyed.

Among the county officials present were Judge Schenck, those connected with the county courts, together with the members of the Board of Freeholders and representatives of a number of county societies. The members of Solomon's Lodge, F. and A. M., of Somerville, arranged the details for the ceremonies. The Masons gathered in the lodge rooms and marched in a body to the new court house, where the imposing work of laying the cornerstone took place.

MORRIS JESUP DUMONT TO WED MISS WILDEY.

Announcement was made today of the engagement of Miss Janet Wildey and Morris Jesup Dumont, both of this city. Miss Wildey is the daughter of Charles F. Wildey, and is prominent in Plainfield and New York society. She is also a fine tennis player, having taken part in nearly all of the important tournaments in Philadelphia, New York and throughout the Metropolitan district. She is also a clever horsewoman and exceptionally fond of all outdoor sports.

Mr. Dumont is also well-known in social circles both here and New York, and is devoted to athletics. He is one of the best golf players in this vinicity and both he and Miss Wildey are members of the Plainfield Country Club. No date has been set for the wedding.

For a Workhouse.

Upon the recommendation of the committee on grounds and buildings of the Union County Board of Freeholders, it was decided at the meeting of the board on Thursday to purchase a lot in the rear of the Court House off Rahway avenue, where it is proposed to establish a workhouse where prisoners confined in the county jail will have an opportunity to do something in return for lodging and board at the county's expense. The lot, 40x130, was purchased for $2,750. This action is the result of a communication received by the board from Mrs. Elizabeth Tiffany.

High School Playing at Finderne.

The city high school football eleven are at Finderne today playing a return game with the Rudson River Military Academy. The local football players made the trip by trolley, leaving this city at 1 o'clock with a large party of rooters. The game is called at 3:30. When the teams met in this city several weeks ago, the local players were victorious by a small score.

Mrs. Tomlinson Attending Convention

Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, county president of the W. C. T. U., and national superintendent of parlor meetings, is attending the national convention of the union which opened at Nashville, Tenn., yesterday. New Jersey has twenty-four delegates at the convention, which will continue for six days. This afternoon Governor Patterson, of Tennessee, will give a reception to the women at his mansion.

Miss Baird, of Philadelphia, is the guest of her friend, Miss Edith Gilbert, of Crescent avenue.

John Klassen and Edward Schempp arrived here Wednesday from Germany on the steamship "Trave."

LAY SACRED HEART'S CORNERSTONE TOMORROW

The cornerstone of the new Sacred Heart church at South Plainfield will be laid with appropriate ceremonies tomorrow afternoon. Bishop McFaul, or his Vicar General, Mgr. Fox, of Trenton, will perform the ceremony and will preach a sermon at the spot. Rev. Edward J. Dunphy will be in charge of the program and societies from Plainfield and Perth Amboy, with many out of town clergymen, will attend. The Holy Name Society of St. John's church will march to the site in a body to attend the ceremony. The building is to be a frame structure, to cost about $8,000, and the work of construction will be pushed ahead rapidly, so as to have the church enclosed before the snow flies.

BOROUGH SCHOOL GIRLS ENTERTAIN FOOTBALL TEAM

In appreciation of the excellent work done by the borough high school football team so far this season, the girls of the senior class of the school tendered a reception and dance to the members of the eleven at the Somerset street school last night. The merry-makers assembled early and a luncheon, cooked by the girls of the class in the cooking school room, was served to the young gridiron warriors in the drawing room. Practically the entire senior class, both boys and girls, were present, and Mr. Phelps, coach of the team, was there, with other members of the school factulty.

The drawing room at the school had been appropriately decorated with the class and school colors and with bunting. The "feed" was a great success. The girls of the committee, realizing that the football players were accustomed to "eat their opponents alive," and would in consequence of this, develop enormous appetites, provided most worthy opponents for the occasion, and all declared that the dainties, while not of the sort provided for a training table, was attacked by the team as worthy opponents, and the plates soon showed that the pig skin chasers had made a clean score.

After the collation, the young people adjourned to the other building, where an informal dance lasted until 11 o'clock. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Miss Agnes Cooley, who as president of the class was chairman; Miss Ida Englehart, Miss Ethel Webster, Eldon Miller and Clarence Steiner.

Y. M. C. A. BASKETBALL TEAM TO PLAY SECOND TEAM.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball five will play the second team of the association in the gymnasium Monday night. At this time, the five which is to represent the association in the Northern New Jersey League of seven teams, will probably be finally chosen. There is some fast material on the second team, and a practise game last night showed good work in the first few minutes of play, when the seconds were ahead of the regular five. The regulars braced, however, and won out 50 to 18.

The business men's team will play the five from the First Baptist church between the halves.

HAD ONLY ONE DRINK.

Barnwell's Statement Taxes Credulity of Judge Runyon.

John Barnwell, the man who dropped into police headquarters with a jag yesterday and got miffed because Judge Runyon refused to take a complaint from him, was arraigned in court this morning. He admitted being drunk but took his solemn oath that he had only drank one glass of whiskey.

"Well, you certainly got more fun out of ten cents than any man I know," was the comment of the Court, "and if it's true that you had only one drink you must have sucked something out of a long-necked bottle."

Barnwell apologized for his conduct and sentence was suspended.

Horse Blankets Stolen.

William Totten, of the borough, was arrested this morning by Chief Marshal George Weiss charged with having broken into Conroy's harness shop and stealing several horse blankets. The place was broken into Thursday night and the borough police have been working on the case since, tracing up clues. Totten was placed under arrest while he was riding on an ice wagon and is now locked up in a borough cell. Chief Weiss says that there were others in the case, and other warrants are out, but up to noon today no additional arrests had been made. The party broke into the harness store late at night and took several blankets, which they afterwards tried to seel to a borough dealer.

WAS CAUGHT AFTER CHASE.

Prisoner Had Annoyed Women in the East End—Higgins Captures Him.

Caught in the act of persistently following Miss Rose Smith, of Watchung avenue, and making insulting proposals to her, Joseph Saciyitti, an Italian, was captured by Roundsman Morris Higgins last night. The fellow made a determined effort to get away and was rounded up after he had ran for several blocks. In the city court this morning Judge Runyon scored the prisoner heavily and sent him to jail for sixty days while the police are looking up his record.

Chief Kiely is positive that Saciyitti is the man who has been accosting women and girls in the East End of the city and about whom several complaints have been received. Miss Smith was in court when Saciyitti was arraigned and positively identified him. She declared he had followed her all the way from East Third and Church streets to Watchung avenue and East Seventh street as she was going home and that she was in a state bordering on hysteria when she saw Roundsman Higgins. She hurried to the officer and while she was telling her story, the Italian saw the uniform and started on a run down Seventh street. Higgins took after him and brought him to a stop at Richmond street. When he was returned to where Miss Smith was waiting he made another break to get away but only got a short distance.

The prisoner's description tallied with one furnished by Miss Miriam Hall, a telephone operator, of a man who had accosted her on Watchung avenue two weeks ago and the young woman was called to headquarters at this morning's session of court. She declared without a moment's hesitation that Saciyitti was her annoyer. The police believe that the fellow is guilty of a number of other charges and while he is in jail will get the evidence against him.

SEEK PARDONS AT CHRISTMAS FOR PRESENTS.

Tenth of the Population of Trenton State Prison Appeal for Clemency.

Trenton, Nov. 9.—Taking advantage of the fact that the next meeting of the Board of Pardons is to be held just before Christmas and that pardons are often given for Christmas presents under such conditions, nearly one-tenth of the population of the New Jersey State prison, in this city, has made application for clemency.

Included in the list are the applications of nineteen persons serving sentences for murder or manslaughter, among them being William A. Death and Walter McAlister, of the notorious Bosschieter tragedy in Paterson. There are 120 applicants in all from all parts of the State. It has been noticed in recent years that the Court of Pardons has always been more disposed to be merciful at the Christmas meeting, and it is on this account that so many of the convicts are now seeking pardons.

NO RECOUNT.

John P. Dullard, the original Frank S. Katzenbach boomer and personal representative of the Democratic gubernatorial candidate in the recent campaign, said last night relative to State Chairman Hudspeth's charges of treachery and crookedness in Hudson county: "I make no charge of treachery. I am naturally disappointed in the returns. I do not believe there will be a recount."

Britton's High Score.

In a match game on Campbell's alleys, yesterday afternoon, Edward Britton, one of the city's crack bowlers, made a score of 297. Eleven straight strikes were piled up, but in the final the ball picked off seven of the ten pins. Chief Kiely, who holds the city record of 298, was Britton's opponent in the game and rolled 242.

ROBBERIES CLEARED UP

Confession of Boys Arrested at Fanwood Throws Light on Two Local "Jobs".

WORK OF RICKTER'S "GANG."

Youthful Law-Breaker Known As "City's Worst Boy" Leader in Breaking and Entering.

Arraigned before Recorder Sheelen at Fanwood, this morning, on a charge of breaking into a pigeon loft and stealing eight birds, William Richter and William Hand, two Plainfield boys, made a confession that clears up several robberies that have been baffling the local police. They volunteered the information that a "gang," of which Richter is the head, robbed the homes of E. C. Kieb, at Fanwood; C. W. Opdyke, of Watchung avenue, and the Netherwood Tennis Club building at Netherwood. They gave the names of the other boys who helped and steps are being taken to arrest them. The two prisoners were released on bail to wait the action of the Grand Jury.

Richter and Hand were caught by Marshal Logan as they were getting away with the pigeons taken from a coop on premises owned by J. P. Stevens, of this city. The residence is unoccupied and was first broken into by the pair but they found nothing of value. Neighbors afterward heard the rustling of the pigeons and notified the officer.

Richter has a long police record in Plainfield and only a short time ago was paroled in the custody of the probation officer. He lives on East Second street and is known as "the worst boy in town." The Hand boy is a newcomer so far as the cops are concerned but is said to have travelled with Richter's "gang" for a long time. He lives on South avenue near Terrill road.

MAY PUBLISH SECRETS OF THE GRAND JURY

The taking of testimony in the certiorari proceedings of the acts of the Hudson County Grand Jury was resumed in Chancery chambers, Jersey City, before Supreme Court Examiner Dingler, yesterday. The investigation resulted from the indictment of Chief of Police Frank Monohan, of Jersey City, several other police officials and some political office holders under Mayor Fagan. J. Merritt Lane, counsel for the Lexowers, having finished with his witnesses about a week ago, William Speer, Jr., Prosecutor of Pleas, representing the grand jurors, started in yesterday to call those subpoenaed as witnesses by him. Among those examined were Under Sheriff John J. Erwin, former Representative Marshall Van Winkle, private counsel to Sheriff John C. Kaiser, and nearly all of the grand jurors, including Dr. Ulamor Allen, the foreman; Postmaster Otto C. Lange, of Bayonne, and George Gonzales, Councilman-elect, of Hoboken. During the examination Prosecutor Speer cautioned the jurors not to reveal any secrets of the grand jury room. Frederick C. Wolbert, a Jersey City man, said he was willing to abide by the wishes of the prosecutor, but he believed that the doings of the grand jury should be made public to satisfy the people. Mr. Lane announced that an application would be made to the courts to sanction making public the grand jury doings.

Freight Wreck on Jersey Central.

The New Jersey Central tracks at High Bridge have been blocked since 3 o'clock this morning on account of a freight wreck. An engine drawing a heavy eastbound freight train jumped the tracks at the switch in front of the High Bridge station, piling up a dozen cars over the tracks. The engineer and fireman jumped and escaped injury. The accident is believed to be due to a broken flange on the engine.

THREATEN MOB VIOLENCE

Dunellenite Wrought up Over Arrest of Charles Robinson on Serious Charges.

FIFTEEN BOYS IMPLICATED.

Guards At Dunellen Jail Protect Prisoner Till His Hearing Before Justice Von Minden This Afternoon.

With the arrest of Charles Robinson, a colored driver employed by the Dunellen Lumber and Stone Company, on serious charges preferred by George H. Rockefeller and involving his three sons and about a dozen other boys of the borough, the feeling of the Dunelenites was aroused to such a high pitch today that a mob gathered and Marshal Owen Mohan now has a guard of men at the jail where the man is locked up. The crowd, which includes the fathers of several of the boys involved, threatened to lynch Robinson and Mohan had great difficulty in preventing them from storming the jail.

Robinson was arrested by Marshal Owen Mohan this morning on complaint of George H. Rockfellow, who lives on North avenue. The man was found at the offices of the Dunellen Lumber and Stone Company, and when Rockfellow caught sight of him, he made a dash for him, threatening to kill him. Mohan held him back. Robinson was taken to the lock-up and a crowd quickly gathered. The cell and the building is guarded by a squad of men. The hearing is before Justice of the Peace R. V. P. Von Minden this afternoon at 3 o'clock, and there is a group of men, roused to high pitch of excitement, watching the jail.

Rockfellow declares that the man has been at his alleged practises for about a year. He got a clue to what was going on three weeks ago, he says, and secured the warrant from Justice Von Minden this morning, after a talk with his three sons, Harold, Raymond and LeRoy, the latter being but five years old. Others boys implicated in Robinson's crime are James Greenhouse and William Marlenahek and they claim that there are about fifteen in all. Robison has been with the Dunellen Lumber and Stone Company for nearly five years, and was employed as driver.

Stone Thrower Arraigned.

Testimony submitted this morning convinced Judge Runyon that Vaughn Bagger, of West Fourth street, was guilty of the charges of stone throwing and disorderly conduct preferred by Charles Drake. The complaint was preferred several days ago and was laid over to permit Drake to secure witnesses. Baggar was lectured and his father, who was in court, was warned that if the boy did not behave himself he would be turned over to the probation officer.

PICK PLAINFIELD BOY FOR U. S. AMBASSADOR

Dr. David J. Hill to be Named by President to Succeed Charlemagne Tower at Berlin.

HE IS THE SON OF A MINISTER.

His Father, Rev. Daniel T. Hill, a Pastor of Local Churches for Many Years—Dr. Hill's Rapid Rise.

Dr. David Jayne Hill, a Plainfield boy, is slated to succeed to the ambassadorship at Berlin, President Roosevelt having announced his purpose to reward him for his valuable services as minister to the Netherlands. Mr. Hill is a son of the late Rev. Daniel T. Hill, formerly a Plainfield pastor. The latter was pastor of the First Baptist church from 1828 to 1839. The clergyman was pastor of the Second Baptist church, which is now Reform Hall, in West Second street, when young Hill was born here in 1834. The Hill home was on West Fourth street, opposite Truell Court. In the 50's the family removed to New York State, but later they returned when Rev. Mr. Hill became pastor of the Union Baptist church, which was located where Trinity Reformed church stands in West Second street.

As there were no schools here when young Hill was in his teens his rudimentary education was obtained elsewhere. He was always greatly interested in political economy and joined the Republican party in its infancy. His first Presidential vote was cast for Fremont and Dayton, the latter being a cousin of Dr. John Dayton, a local dentist. Vice President Candidate Dayton was a frequent visitor here and took a great interest in young Hill.

Not many years ago Dr. Hill was president of Rochester University, a post now held by Rev. Dr. Rush Rhees, who is also a Plainfield boy.

Secretary of State Root announced yesterday that Mr. Hill, American Minister to the Netherlands and formerly Assistant Secretary of State, will be named as Ambassador to Berlin, to succeed Charlemagne Tower, who is about to retire on account of ill health. Mr. Hill has had great experience in the diplomatic service. He speaks German fluently, and it is said that his appointment will give great satisfaction to Germany. President Roosevelt first offered the post to Assistant Secretary Bacon, who declined it, as he preferred to remain in the State Department.

Dr. Hill had a long and successful career as an educator before he entered the State Department. He is fifty-seven years old. He was valedictorian of the class of '74 at Bucknell University, Lewisburg, Penn., was immediately appointed an instructor, was promoted to the chair of rhetoric three years later, and in 1879, only five years after his graduation, he was elected president of the institution. Nine years later he was elected president of the University of Rochester, to succeed Dr. Martin Brewer Anderson.

After eight years of successful administration he resigned, to devote his entire time to the study of law and diplomacy. He spent nearly three years in Europe in furtherance of his object, but was called home in October, 1898, by President McKinley, who desired to avail himself of Dr. Hill's expert knowledge and practical experience as Assistant Secretary of State. He remained in the department for five years, during the greater part of Secretary Hay's administration, serving frequently and with satisfaction as Acting Secretary of State in the conduct of international negotiations requiring judgment, tact and a thoroughly informed mind. He was popular socially in Washington, as well as respected for his learning, and for several years filled the chair of European diplomacy in the School of Comparative Jurisprudence and Diplomacy in that city.

In 1903 he was appointed United States Minister to Switzerland, was transferred to the Netherlands in 1905, and now receives promotion to the embassy at Berlin. He is possessed of means large enough to enable him to keep up the dignity of the embassy without embarrassment. He is married, Mrs. Hill having been Miss Juliet Lewis Packer, of Williamsport, Penn., daughter of Judge Hezekiah B. Packer. Dr. Hill is a member of many learned societies,

Reading of the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills I went to Randolph's Pharmacy, got a box and began using them. Whether this has been a wetter fall than usual is a matter on which the Weather Bureau is best informed, but the wetness is more prominent in football plans than ever before. Usually snow and rain are merely incidental to footbball campaigns, something the hardy gridiron scrapper takes as part of the day's work. No man who does more than limit his football to the clearest of skies and the most velvet turf can be looked on as a mollycoddle, but the fact that several teams have been driven to cover by the rain for their practice indicates either that the players are getting tenderer or that the managers are getting more sensible.

In any event three squads, Harvard, Yale and Brown, took their practice 'neath a roof on Wednesday, an occurrence that marks something of an era. The Princeton practice was shortened on account of the marshy field and a game somewhere was cancelled on account of the bad weather. Discretion is the better part of valor, and there are times when needless valor becomes foolhardiness; but it was not supposed that anything short of a cyclone, cloudburst or similar upheaval of nature would postpone a football game.

It would take an earthquake, a blizzard, a landslide or something equally violent to prevent the playing of a Yale-Princeton, Harvard-Yale, Pennsylvania-Cornell, Army-Navy game or one of that class. Several years ago one of the most active snowstorms that ever struck this neck of the woods raged while Pennsylvania and Cornell were fighting it out on Franklin Field. The Quakers slipped into dry clothing between halves, but the poor Ithacans, having brought only one suit apiece, had to go on as they were. In 1889 Harvard and Yale played in a drenching rain, but even then had it on the spectators in that they were able to get into a dry place between halves. The hold football has on the public is shown by the way spectators brave rheumatism, pneumonia and kindred dangers when the weather is bad.

Columbia and Williams played a game at the Polo Grounds a few seasons back in which a third of the gridiron was under water. When the players were not running they were swimming. Goal kicking had to be abandoned because there was nobody amphibious enough to kick a goal from out of the water, but though many a player was soaked to the skin the game went on with unabated ardor. Practice under cover has its good and weak points. It keeps the men from taking unnecessary risks, but it also deprives them of just so much practice under conditions that may prevail during the big games. All along the line the teams had practice in handling a wet ball last Saturday, and if they all did as well at it as Princeton they needn't worry on that score about coming wet days.

GOLF.

A number of decisions were recently announced by the rules of golf committee of St. Andrews. One of these deals with a ball becoming impaled on a hairpin, an incident which happened at Troon several months ago. On that occasion the player who had the misfortune to see his ball crippled in that way went on the assumption that it was a rule of the green, for he not only continued to play the ball carrying the hairpin along the course but actually attempted to hole out with it. The rules committee returned the decision that such a ball should be considered as unfit for play.

Then there was the case of a ball which lay on a piece of soft ground. In playing the ball it and the mud stuck to the face of the club, which gave rise to the question, What should the player do under the circumstances? The rules committee, after admitting that there was no rule dealing with the subject, suggested that the player should have shaken the ball off the club without penalty at the spot where the incident occurred.

That this tolerant spirit had not always marked the answers of committees was shown by a ruling on a similar point some years ago. This was when ball and mud adhered to the putter on the putting green during a match at the Faversham Golf Club, and the rules committee rather brusquely replied that it had no experience of such tenacious mud, and that such a contingency should be provided for by the local rules.

Several apparently sensible recommendations have been offered by the committee. One is that when heavy rain falls in course of a stroke competition, covering some of the putting greens and holes with large pools of water, the local committees would be adopting a fair as well as a sensible practice in declaring such a competition held on that day null and void.

The Campbell family was well represented in the recent tournament of the Eastern Professional Golfers' Association at the Country Club of Brookline. Alec won the title with a score of 144 for the thirty-six holes, while his brothers Andrew and Matt were in a four-cornered tie for seventh position with a score of 153. Jack, another brother, finished fourteenth, with a score of 160.

In the four-ball competition on the following day they finished second, third, fourth and thirteenth respectively, with their partners. On the last day, when the "pros" were paired with amateurs, the Campbells finished in these respective positions with their partners: Alec, second; Matt, eighth; Jack, twenty-first, while Andy failed to return a card. The latter is only nineteen years of age.

REJECT "FARE;" ARRESTED.

Montclair Cabmen Found Guilty of Charge Made by J. W. Morgan, a Wealthy Resident.

Montclair, Nov. 9.—J. W. Morgan, a wealthy resident of Upper Mountain avenue, arrived on a train from New York, Thursday night, and called a cab to ride to his home. When the cab driver, Joseph Galway, learned the destination of Mr. Morgan he balked and refused to make the trip.

Montclair has a legal rate of cab fares that beats the New York taximeter system, twenty-five cents being the fare to nearly all points in the town, which has an area almost equal to Manhattan Island, up to ten o'clock. After that the rate is doubled. Mr. Morgan lives far from the railroad station, consequently the cab driver rejected him, having a shorter trip in prospect. Mr. Morgan tried another "cabby," William Bran. He was again repulsed, and after trying two others he gave up in despair and walked home. Yesterday, however, Mr. Morgan had two of the cabbies, Galway and Bran arrested, and they were charged before Recorder Henry L. Yost with violating a town ordinance. Both men were adjudged guilty, but the Recorder suspended sentence.

Returns from the Election Boards throughout Middlesex county indicate that Governor-elect Fort carried the county by three votes.

THAT "FULL DINNER PAIL."

Some consolation may be had by the Democrats in the fact that the party could not be blamed for the business depression beginning the day after election. The heads of countless manufacturing plants cunningly bided their time until their skilled employes had voted the straight Republican ticket for the "full dinner pail" before announcing the unwelcome news that many of the men would have to be laid off on account of the "hard times?" Had their been a Democratic victory, what would have been the seemingly logical conclusion?

A FITTING TRIBUTE.

When the "Get-Together Club," the body of organization Republican workers, banquetted in honor of Andrew McCardell on Thursday night, they paid a fitting tribute to a zealous, indefatigable and honorable leader. The enconiums of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, County Chairman F. H. Smith, Assistant Prosecutor English, Assemblyman Moxon and others were well deserved. He may be called a "boss," but there are good and bad bosses just as there are good and bad "trusts."

IT MAKES A DIFFERENCE.

When Assemblyman Randolph Perkins wanted a perpetual lease on his office he impressed upon the voters how deeply he appreciated his public duty. But when the Republican cause was in peril in Union county a few days ago, Randolph did not vote. In fact he did not set foot in Union county, his nominal residence, on election day.

THE UNFORTUNATE VICTOR.

Now that Mr. Fort has gotten over the worries of the campaign fresh troubles are in store for him, for it is to be expected that the army of ready letter writers will besiege him with claims for preferment.

OH, YOU STORY-TELLER!

"Truthful James" Martine told a big fib on Tuesday when he declared that he had voted for the "next Governor," but we will accept his explanation that the "report was premature."

POLITICAL AFTERMATH.

In tabulating the vote received by the candidates for Assembly in Hudson county it has been discovered by the County Board of Elections that there is every prospect of the returns showing that Charles E. Hendrickson, Jr., Democrat, has been beaten by Richard Cooley, Republican. Cooley was the candidate selected by the liquor interests in opposition to Hendrickson, who was marked by them because of his stand in supporting the bishops' bill. Hendrickson also opposed the Sunday baseball measure. Pasters were used liberally, and in Jersey City alone it has been found that Hendrickson ran 3,000 votes behind his ticket.

Bayonne Republicans are dissatisfied with the returns from the Fifth ward and will apply for a recount. They believe that their candidate for the Council, Samuel Kovacsky, was elected over John J. Boyle, who, it is asserted, won by two votes. Voting machines were used throughout the ward.

Seven physicians were elected mayors in Jersey this year. Dr. McBride, who has been county physician of Passaic county for several years, was elected mayor of Paterson, and Atlantic Highlands, Frenchtown, Rahway, Summit, Trenton and Washington chose physicians for Mayors.

—Prof. Bachimont, Ph. D., of the University of Paris, will give a free lesson illustrating his psychological system of teaching French, Tuesday, November 12, at 3 o'clock, in the Casino. Highest testimonials.

THE NEW YORK & NEW JERSEY TELEPHONE CO.

READ THIS!

From a Prominent New York Newspaper:

"In this hustling, bustling age of ours, where every second has a commercial value, the telephone plays a most important part. Without it the activities of the day would not be possible and business would proceed at the sober pace which characterized it some fifty years ago. And yet although most people will realize the truth of these assertions, few appreciate the enormous void which would be left were the telephone to be suddenly wiped out of existence."

FAVORS ELECTION OF ROOSEVELT AS KING.

Professor Joseph P. Drake, of Michigan University, Tells Class Elevation to Throne Is a Necessity.

Ann Harbor, Mich., Nov. 9.—Prof. Joseph P. Drake, of the law department of the University of Michigan, startled his class Thursday by declaring that he would favor electing Roosevelt king of this country. The students at first took the statement as a joke, but it was reiterated, and Professor Drake asserted that it was given with all seriousness and sincerity.

The nomination of the President to the throne of the United States came after a discussion of the corporation problem in this country. Professor Drake declared that although an attack upon the vested interests had been attended with many dangers to the prosperity of the nation, the President has wisely handled the situation, and as the final solution of corporate encroachments upon the rights of the public could not be reached before the passing of many decades, he favored retaining Roosevelt at the helm through the thickest of the fight.

Professor Drake said he thought that election to the Presidency and the maintenance of the office under the present system was attended with too many political complications and evils, and for this reason he advocated the burning of all bridges and giving of free hand to Theodore Roosevelt for the solution of the corporation menace.

Proceedings of the Union County Board of Freeholders.

(Official.)

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county, held on Thursday, October 3, 1907, at 2:30 p. m.

The following members were present: Director King, Freeholders Adams, Cady, Cladek, Darby, Doane, Donahue, Fay, Gruener, Jones, Krouse, Meisel, Perry, Pierson, Robison, Smith, Swain and Wilbur—19.

Absent—Freeholder Woodruff—1.

The minutes of the previous meeting were, on motion of Freeholder Cady, approved as per printed copies mailed to the members.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The following communication, addressed to Freeholder Krouse, was read as follows:

Elizabeth, N. J., Sept. 27, 1907.
Henry Krouse, Esq., Linden, N. J.:

Dear Sir—I have a lot on Rahway avenue, adjoining the rear driveway of the county or Court House property. It has a frontage on the avenue of forty feet and runs back to an alley in the rear which has a right out into Union street, the depth being about one hundred and thirty feet.

I have two applications for the purchase of this property, and before determining with them write you to know if the county would like to buy the plot for $3,000.

I thought it best to let you know as to this before dealing with others.

Very truly yours,
P. J. RYAN.

On motion of Freeholder Swain it was ordered on roll call that the communication be referred to the Committee on Public Grounds and Buildings, and County Attorney, with power.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

By Committee on Bridge on Cranford Road at Aldene:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Gentlemen: Your committee appointed to inspect bridge over brook at Aldene on Cranford Road, respectfully report that they recommend the building of a new iron beam brick arch top and the repairing abutments at a cost not to exceed $300.

Henry Krouse, Thomas J. Pierson, S. P. T. Wilbur, Committee.

Freeholder Adams moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by an unanimous vote.

Freeholder Gruener, Chairman of Committee to inspect a bridge on Madison avenue, Rahway, reported that open investigation it was found that several new bridges were needed in that section, but as funds were not now available for that puhpose, the committee would report progress, which was received.

By the committee on Elkwood avenue bridge, Summit:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Gentlemen—Whereas, the cost of the Elkwood bridge has exceeded the appropriation, we respectfully recommend an additional appropriation of $100 to meet the deficit.

John N. Cady, W. H. Swain, Peter H. Meisel, Committee.

Freeholder Krouse moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by an unanimous vote.

The following report was presented and read:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen: The undersigned committee, to whom was referred the communication of A. H. Dundon, secretary of the Board of Health of the Borough of Plainfield, respecting the unsanitary condition of Green Brook, between Norwood and Geraud avenues, which is a stream separating the counties of Somerset and Union, beg to report that we have considered the matter in conference with the County Attorney, and are of the opinion that such matters are not within the jurisdiction of this Board; and that if the matter complained of required action, it should be taken care of by the proper authorities of the adjoining municipalities, to wit: the Borough of North Plainfield and the City of Plainfield.

And we would recommend that the Clerk of this Board forward a copy of this report to Dr. A. H. Roudon.

Respectfully submitted,
S. P. T. Wilbur, J. Hervey Doane, Committee.

Approved: W. R. Codington, County Attorney.

Dated October 3, 1907.

On motion of Freeholder Gruener the report was received and placed on file.

The committee on the adoption of a portion of North Broad street, etc., as a State Aid Road, reported progress, which report was received.

NEW BUSINESS.

Freeholder Pierson said he desired to call the attention of the Board to the matter of decorating the Court House for the time of (Old Home Week), and which began on October 6. He was informed that the County Attorney was of the opinion that the Board had no authority to spend the public money for such purposes.

Some discussion ensued, after which it was decided that the decorating should be done, and that the expense should be borne by voluntary contribution of the members.

By Freeholder Meisel:

Resolved, That the bills of C. R. Van Houten, amounting to $85.79, for bridge work done in Union Township, be paid when properly audited by the committee.

Freeholder Cady moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll call it was unanimously adopted.

By Freeholder Adams:

Resolved, That the folowing bills of James G. Moore be paid when properly audited by committee having same in charge, to wit: For bridge near Baldwin's, $665; and for retaining walls in bridge known as Carter's bridge, $85, both in Union Township.

Freeholder Krouse moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll call it was unanimously adopted:

By Freeholder Wilbur:

Whereas, It is reported by the Clerk of this Board that there may be an insufficient number of ballot-boxes for use at various polling places throughout the county of Union for the general election to be held on November 5, 1907, without removing from some of said boxes, which were used at the last primary election, the contents thereof; therefore, for the purpose of avoiding the necessity of purchasing additional boxes, be it

Resolved, That the County Attorney be and hereby is instructed to procure from the Judge of the Circuit Court an order authorizing the Clerk of this Board to remove the contents from as many of said ballot-boxes as may be necessary for use at the general election above referred to.

On motion of Freeholder Cady the resolution was adopted without dissent.

By Freeholder Gruener:

Whereas, A contract has heretofore been awarded for the building of a bridge over the Robinson Branch, Rahway, N. J.; and

Whereas, It has been ascertained that it will be necessary to reinforce the foundations of said bridge to a greater depth than was anticipated, which will entail an additional expense; therefore be it

Resolved, That the committee in charge of said work be and are hereby authorized to make such additional expense as may be necessary to secure a firm and safe sub-foundation for said bridge.

Freeholder Krouse moved the adoption of the resolution, which was duly seconded.

County Engineer Bauer briefly explained that the contractor had excavated for foundations of the bridge to the depth required in the specifications and had found a bed of quicksand.

As the same is not provided for and could not be foreseen at the time the original contract was made, it was necessary for the county to provide a proper foundation on which the bridge could be constructed.

The resolution was then on roll call, unanimously adopted.

The following bills, properly audited and approved, were read, and on roll call approved as read, viz:

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Senators By Popular Vote.

Commenting on the fact that New Jersey has adopted the policy of the popular choice of United States Senators, the Philadelphia Ledger characterizes this method as "the new assault upon the dignity and honor of the Legislatures of the States." Theoretically this is correct. It takes from the Legislature one of its highest functions, as far as it can do so without an amendment to the National Constitution. But why have the people of New Jersey, and of about a dozen other States, compelled their Legislatures to abandon this prerogative? It is plainly and only because the State Senators and Assemblymen have eliminated both honor and dignity from their methods of selecting United States Senators. There can be no assault, such as the Ledger describes, unless there is dignity and honor to attack. Had the Legislatures of the different States acted with a true appreciation of the popular will and of their own responsibility there would never have arisen any desire for the popular choice of United States Senators; but when this high place was bartered so often for cash and was so frequently made an asset of corporations, then the people determined to assume the trust which the Legislatures betrayed.—Newark News.

Mr. Barnes, American

By Archibald Clavering Gunter

Author of Mr. Barnes of New York, Mr. Potter of Texas, That Frenchman, etc.

A Sequel to Mr. Barnes of New York

Copyright, 1907, Dodd Mead & Co.

"I dare not," answers Perrier, shortly. "The fate of my poor friend Emory is too horrible."

"Fate! What fate?"

"Why, he was to be here two days ago, according to his letters to me, to arrange for guarding your villa. He is not here even to-day. His last note from St. Tropez indicated he was close upon the track of those who have sworn this blood feud against you—and all who aid you. That letter was written four days ago and—what has become of Emory?"

"How can I tell?" mutters the American gloomily.

"But I can," answers the private detective. "Madame Blackwood, for whom I have executed some little commissions, called on me two days ago excitedly. 'Perrier,' she said, in her American abruptness, 'I want you to bring to justice some villains who murdered a Yankee detective named Emory, the other day near St. Tropez.' 'You saw him killed?' I asked. 'No, but I've got evidence—a few words from—' she checked herself; but added, 'I don't dare to tell Mr. Ruggles of this; he's so impulsive he'd spend his money and his blood, too, to bring a murderer of one of his countrymen to justice. So you just go on and get the evidence against these fellows and trot them to the guillotine.' But the fate of Emory warned me, I determined to give up the whole affair," adds Perrier.

"Thank you again," sneers Barnes, and coming out the American laughs to himself. But the mention of Madame Blackwood reminds him of her letter. "By George, Sally's note hinted at grave danger to me. It must be this Emory business!" and without more ado Mr. Barnes, hurriedly keeping his eyes alert for sudden daggers, makes his way to the promenade, by the sea and shortly after enters the luxurious Hotel St. Petersburg.

It is ten in the evening. He is about to send up his card to Madame Blackwood and request an interview when she enters. As she comes in by the ladies' entrance, the Kansas cattle king, who attends her, chances to glance into the office and calls out: "Whew, Barnes, that was a lucky address you gave me in Paris five weeks ago," and, taking him aside, whispers, "I caught the lady. The goods came high, but they're worth the money. Step up and have supper with us."

This invitation Barnes finds it impossible to politely decline, as Sally Blackwood has already put her beautiful eyes upon him and said: "So glad you're here. You mustn't refuse. We saw so little of you in Monte Carlo."

A moment later Barnes finds himself ushered into La Blackwood's private parlor, where supper is shortly served to them. Several times Burton is about to hint at the purport of her note, but the expressive eyes of the adventuress warn him to hold his tongue. Coffee, however, is no sooner served than the fascinating creature says: "Now, Dan, supposing you run downstairs and have your smoke there. I want to talk with Mr. Barnes of New York—something I don't want you to hear. That needn't make you jealous—it's about my parents in Ohio."

The minute the cattle king disappears the lady's manner changes. She cries airily: "Guess what made me write to you?"

"Hate," mutters Barnes, between puffs of his cigarette.

"No, though I ought to hate you. What I want to see you about—" La Blackwood's eyes become intense and her voice falls to a whisper—"is to save your life—if I can. Do you know that half of a commune in Corsica want your blood?"

"I've guessed it in the last few days," observes Barnes grimly.

"Are you acquainted with a certain Count Cipriano Danella?"

"Never have seen him."

"No, but you've heard of him?"

"Oh, yes, he's a brother of the Danella who was killed in Corsica."

"Yes. Now, this gentleman, who is a very good man and very tender-hearted, obtained an introduction to me about three days ago on the des Anglais. From some words of a Lady Chartris, a cousin of yours, he has learned that you are to marry very shortly the pretty girl whose lips I threatened to kiss at Monte Carlo. Well, this Cipriano Danella, who looks quite romantic in his Corsican mourning, while making love to me till Dan got jealous," she laughs slightly, "hinted to me that it would be very unfortunate for Miss Anstruther should she become Mrs. Barnes of New York; that, as your wife, she would be drawn into this blood feud that has been declared against you. 'Now,' suggested Count Cipriano, 'you are the lady best fitted by past friendship and present charm, to prevent this danger to the pretty English girl, by destroying the wedding.'"

"You have brought me here for this?" says Burton, his eyes growing angry.

"Wait! Listen! As an American, my desire is to protect you from death. I appeared to accede to Cipriano's request to fascinate you again. I wonder if I could do it?" She looks at him roguishly and laughs through her white teeth. "Don't be frightened of me. So I pumped the romantic Corsican, who made half love to me while he tried to persuade me. I found out that not only was the commune of Boco—Bocognano or something of that kind—anxious for your blood, but that several gentlemen from that neighborhood were here in order to obtain it, and to make their task easy, they had done up in some way or other a detective you had employed to shadow them, a Yankee named Emory, I believe. Therefore, I said to myself: 'I'll take care if possible to inform Mr. Barnes of the dangers that surround him, and if he is the man I think him, he is about as well able to protect himself and his coming bride as anyone I know.'"

"Hold up a moment. I want to ask you a question," interrupts Barnes. "What makes you think the devils have done up poor Emory?"

"Well, a careless expression of Count Danella—only this: 'He won't bother them again,' something of that kind from Cipriano."

"I must be going. I'm deeply grateful to you." Burton rises. "Mr. Ruggles—"

"Don't be afraid. Dan won't be jealous."

She extends to him her beautifully formed white fingers dazzling with rings. "Good-by, I hope you'll be happy on your wedding trip, but don't let love make you careless, mon Bayard."

Barnes takes her hint. His pistol is ready as he throws open the door of her apartment and passes cautiously out; so all the way down the stairs of the hotel he is careful as to corners, and out on the street, well peopled as is the Des Anglais, the American has a wary eye about him. Lady Chartris has doubtless told Cipriano Danella of his visit to Nice and that he returns with her to her villa this evening. He therefore breaks his appointment with Prunella and taking a hired carriage watches till the lady, tired of waiting, drives angrily home, then jogs along a few hundred yards behind her, ready for any emergency. But nothing of a threatening nature is seen.

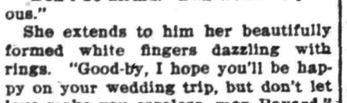
As the vehicle enters the grounds of the villa, the sight of a Scotch tar on the lookout gives the coming bridegroom confidence in the sailor's watch.

As he wakes up in the morning, notwithstanding the thought that it is his wedding day is dominant in his mind, he reflects over the matter. What has this Cipriano Danella done except to arouse his suspicions? "Even the count's conversation with la Belle Blackwood didn't disclose that he meditated any attack upon me or my bride," he reflects, moodily, "only that Cipriano wished to prevent an innocent young girl being drawn into this frightful feud. Hang it, I can't shoot the cuss on suspicion—and yet!" The American closes his jaw with a snap and goes down to breakfast, to meet as charming a bride as the sun has shone upon.

CHAPTER IX.

The Coming of Danella.

At the morning meal Barnes finds the rest of the party growing excited over the approaching ceremony, and



"Have You Found Out About That Accursed Letter?"

Maud telling them about her maid-of-honor dress. "You'll have to lend me a pair of silk stockings, Enid," cries the putative infant. "I don't think I have any bang up enough for the ceremony. They should be corkers. Mine show, yours don't."

This oration is interrupted by Lady Chartris saying, insinuatingly: "Cousin Burton, you must have had a pretty long chat with the minister. I waited for you last evening till half-past 11."

A sly giggle from Maud sets Enid's blue eyes ablaze, though there's a whimper on her sweet lips.

"Yes, lots of details," replies Barnes, casually. "Did you have a pleasant outing with Cip, Cousin Prunella?"

"Of course I did, with such a cavalier."

"You invited Count Danella to my wedding?" asks the American abruptly.

"Of course I did," cries the widow, rapturously. "He accepted immediately; said he was very anxious to meet you."

"The pleasure will be mutual," observes Burton, grimly.

Enid and her brother look at each other solemnly, but Marina's face, when she learns that Cipriano Danella has accepted the invitation to the nuptials becomes so serious that Barnes, after breakfast, takes her husband aside and says: "Have you found out about that accursed letter?"

"No, she begged me not to ask her. She sobbed it was for my happiness that I didn't know. You'll soon discover, Barnes," remarks Edwin moodily, "that you cannot do much with a bride when she turns on the hose and washes the matrimonial decks."

This reminds Burton that he had better not start his married life with a secret, and getting Enid alone with him, which isn't very difficult, he briefly, but pointedly, tells his fiancee of his interview with la Belle Blackwood.

"Oh, I'm so glad you told me—so glad she's not all bad!" exclaims the girl, rewarding him with so rapturous a kiss that he is delighted he refused Sally's farewell salute. "I—I learned from Maud that you had received a letter from her," she adds, hesitatingly.

"You didn't doubt me?" This issues in stern reproach from the lips of the American.

"Oh, no, but—but no secrets from me, please," she entreats. "There's no real love without a little jealousy;" then shudders: "And so those villains killed poor Emory?"

"I'm afraid so," answers her lover, and his tone grows very solemn. "You see how remorselessly, how craftily we are pursued, that the haven of safety I had planned for you, dear one, when I left you to put those devils forever out of the way, is now known to them. You remember the awful threat against any woman who weds me. You've—you've no wish to delay our marriage?" His eyes are very eager.

Her eyes answer his with equal passion. "No, on the contrary," answers the resolute English girl, "I am resolved more than ever."

"Then may God never forgive me if I don't save you from all harm," mutters the coming husband. "Yet we must take all precautions. Just try and see if you cannot do better than your brother."

"How?" asks Enid, eagerly.

"The knowledge of the contents of that letter to Marina may be vital, not only for the happiness of her husband and herself, but perhaps to the safety of all of us. See if you cannot in some woman's way get the information of what it contained."

About an hour after this, Enid returns and remarks disappointedly: "Not a word from Marina except that it was something entirely between her and her husband; that we would discover some day." Then she blushingly asks: "Where are you going to take me after marriage?"

This is a proposition upon which Barnes has been racking his brain. He says, meditatively: "Supposing you and I go out on the yacht?"

"What, alone together? Delightful, romantic!"

"Not entirely. I shall take Graham and three seamen, to sail the schooner. We'll only be away two or three days."

"Two or three days of happiness," whispers the girl, radiantly, and runs away to prepare for her coming nuptials.

Barnes's own preparations occupy him most of the time till the ceremony, though he contrives to discuss his yachting plans with Edwin.

"All right," answers the sailor, "Graham can take care of the schooner as well as I. You leave me the balance of the jackies and I'll guarantee everything's all a-taut when you come into port. I shall take no cruises into Nice. I have enough here to make me happy."

"If Emory should by any chance turn up," remarks Barnes, "keep him with you to help you."

They are interrupted by the French cook, who has come on shore in the dingy bearing a magnificent wedding cake that he has manufactured in the schooner's galley. "My offering to your bride," remarks the culinary artist. "This will be the crowning glory of your noces, Monsieur Barnes. I am to cook for you on your wedding cruise. I must walk into Villefranche to get supplies."

The American is minded to call him back and caution the fellow to have a quiet tongue, but Maud breaks in upon him in all the glories of her child maid-of-honor frock, crying: "The notary is here and the minister has arrived."

Soon after the party assembles in the parlor, which has been decked with the flowers of southern France, and Miss Anstruther comes down to them looking in her fresh beauty, with her modest blue eyes filled with love, very bridelike. She is in an exquisite summer yachting costume, all lace and sheer muslin, through which her fair arms and shoulders gleam like chiselled ivory. A hat of white plumes and ribbons graces her golden hair.

"I didn't put on an evening gown," she whispered, "so I'm ready to go on board, Burton, immediately after the ceremony."

"My heavens, no bridal veil," flutters Lady Chartris; then she cries in a tone of dismay: "and Count Cipriano is late."

But without waiting for him, the English divine having made the necessary official arrangements as prescribed by the French law, the civil contract is hastily signed before the notary, Edwin acting as Enid's guardian and giving his formal consent.

Then what is to Miss Anstruther her real wedding begins, the sacrament of the English church. She standing before the divine, giving her assent modestly, but very firmly, Barnes making the responses ardently and determinedly, and thinking even as he puts the ring upon his bride's finger: "It is a kind of curious feeling, getting married with a revolver in your hip pocket ready for business."

A moment later the usual congratulations and kisses have been given, the party are about to turn to the dining-room, where the wedding supper is spread, there to drink the bride's health before she flits away.

But their steps are stayed by the sound of prancing steeds announcing the coming of the belated yet only invited guest. "Oh, at last! But you are late," cries Prunella, ecstatically, as she runs into the hall. "Just time, Count Cipriano, to toast the bride."

"Yes, an unfortunate accident to my horses," enters to them in a soft, southern voice from the hallway, where Prunella is interviewing the cavalier she has been waiting for so eagerly.

As this takes place, Edwin whispers: "I'll keep my eye on the beggar."

"And I'll talk to the gentleman as soon as I can get a chance, and if he doesn't give me a clean bill of health—"

The rest of Barnes's speech is interrupted by the entry of the object of their suspicions. Count Cipriano greets the company with extreme politeness.

Upon the ceremony Marina had looked with a very pale face, but now two hectic spots flame in either cheek as she returns the salute of Danella, who murmurs: "'Tis years since I saw you—the little girl poor Musso loved. You have grown into a beautiful woman—you who were my dead brother's ward."

But soon after, as the champagne sparkles, the count toasts the bride very gallantly, remarking on her youthful English beauty. "Signore Barnes should be a very happy man," he whispers to her, and goes on chatting so unaffectedly and pleasantly that Enid, who had looked upon his entrance as if he were Mephisto himself, begins to think this pleasant-voiced but vivacious-mannered gentleman is not so dangerous as she suspected.

Dressed in the deep mourning of southern France, the high Corsican hat he still carries in his hand lends picturesqueness to Cipriano's costume.

Notwithstanding his somber garb, soon the gentleman is laughing with Lady Chartris; Maud driving her mother distracted by crying: "I'm only 11, but I'm as tall as the bride, ain't I, mamma, dear?" and standing up back to back with Enid, making a great juvenile display of baby waist and pink silken stockings.

It's her high-heeled slippers," cries her mother, angrily. "The deceitful child is standing on tip-toe!"

"Ma foi, la petite is anxious to be married herself," smiles Cipriano.

"Ain't I?" cries Maud, merrily. "Ask mamma for me, count."

"Oh, mercy, the champagne has gone to the minx's head," gasps Lady Chartris, savagely. But Correglo has again devoted his attention to Marina. As well he may; her dark, liquid eyes carrying in their depths the passion of the south, yet always seeming to ask this man a pathetic question—one his orbs refuse to answer, though several times there is so amorous a gleam in them that the young English husband would like to take their owner by the throat.

At the first opportunity, while the ladies are gathered about Enid talking to her of her yachting cruise, Barnes says to Danella: "A few words in private with you, please, count."

"Certainly, I was about to request that myself," remarks Cipriano.

"Perhaps the garden would be more secluded," and the American, ready for action, keeping his eye upon his visitor, politely opens the door and bows him out into the grounds.

His visitor walks well into the shade of the orange ad citron trees, passing to where a rift in the foliage permits a view of the boat landing, which in the coming night is now hardly discernible. Here he pauses carelessly, his brilliant orbs occasionally directed toward the water. A moment later he observes quietly: "Your wedding made me sad, Signore."

"So much so you tried to stop it," rejoins Barnes, drily, striving to keep the anger from his tones.

"Ah, Madame Blackwood told you our conversation." The Corsican laughs slightly. "I confess I should have done even more to prevent or postpone your nuptials had I seen your bride before and known her extreme youth, beauty and innocence."

The American is about to interrupt him, but Cipriano continues, a strain of sadness in his voice: "Therefore I am very sorry that I didn't arrive before your nuptials. You were the companion of my dead brother, you went mufloon shooting with him several times in Corsica. As such I wished in friendship to warn you not to make any woman your bride; at all events, not till an unhappy suspicion had been settled forever. Some of the natives of Bocognano, who loved my brother, believe that his death was in some way attributable to you, not personally, perhaps, but it would please me if you would give me the particulars as you understand them of the murder of my brother."

BANQUET OF MEN'S CLUB

Rev. Dr. Whittaker Tells Members their Organization Gives Opportunity for Usefulness.

TWO OTHER SPEAKERS PRESENT

Men of the First Presbyterian Church Have a Big Time at Their Annual Dinner.

Under the auspices of the Men's Club of the First Presbyterian church the annual banquet was held last night in the chapel of the church. About sixty members and friends of the club gathered and enjoyed a program of excellence, including several short addresses, and vocal selections by Miss Anna Case, soprano of the church choir, accompanied by Clifford A. Braider. The occasion marked the first meeting of the men and the inauguration of the winter's activities.

The banquet was served at 7:30 by Mrs. John S. Johnston, Mrs. Alvin E. Hoagland, Mrs. N. W. Currie, Mrs. George A. Ballentyne, Miss Bessie Bond, Miss Alice Miller, Miss Georgia Ricker and Miss Ella Lounsbury. The menu was an excellent one, from oysters on the half shell to crackers and chees and demi-tasse.

After the dinner, F. O. Dunning as president of the club, made a few introductory remarks in presenting the speakers of the evening, the first being Rev. Dr. William Force Whittaker, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Elizabeth. He brought the information that a Brotherhood was organized in his church Thursday night, it being the youngest one in the Elizabeth Presbytery, and on its behalf he extended greetings to the Plainfield organization.

In his reference to the value of men's clubs, Dr. Whittaker said that the day has passed when the parson is expected to do all the work of the church. There was a time when he was called "it," but he was pleased to say that the men's organizations are coming to the rescue and are proving a valuable aid in Christian effort. The day has arrived for larger paticipation on the part of the laymen and strong earnest men are rallying to the support of the pastor.

The speaker said that there is being put into energy those parts of the church body that have been lying dorment for years and not heretofore active. "I am interested in Brotherhood organization," said Dr. Whittaker, "because it permits us to use as bait many things not possible in the past, in our efforts to catch men. We can use different bait for different men. I am not quite sure that the prayer-meeting and the Bible exclusively are always the best way to interest men in the church. There are other agencies that can be used legitimately and with good results, not that I would sacrifice the Bible or the prayer-meeting in the least. Some men who have in the past been permitted to lean, but they are now lifting and helping in church work."

The Rev. Perry Bascom, pastor of the Methodista Episcopal church, Bound Brook, took for his subject: "Men—Not Wanted." He said that in some societies the blackball is used to exclude men not wanted, but he did not mean to suggest that for church clubs. However, there are men who would be out of place in such a club or in the church. "The lazy man is one that is not wanted," said Mr. Bascom. "This is the age of hustle, hurry and activity and the man who cannot keep awake and up with the procession is a lonesome individual.

"The church doesn't want lethargy, neither does it want men who are willing to let somebody else do the work. There are some men hitched to do most of the pulling and they generally do. We want to be fired with energy and zeal, set things on fire. The cowardly and weakling are also out of place in the church: the man who is afraid to do things: the man with a jelly-fish backbone. Then there are some people who are always criticizing the minister. Why, I know one pastor who was severely criticized because he had large hands and feet and another one did not get a call to a pastorate because of the way he entered the pulpit when he preached as a candidate; yet he was a good man and lived to do a great work. What we want are real men in every sense that the word applies and then we will be able to accomplish things."

The third and last speaker was Rev. C. J. Culp, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Bound Brook, who spoke briefly of the great tidal wave now sweeping the country through the agency of the men's club in churches. He for one was not of the opinion that the golden age had passed, but that it was yet to come, but before the border line of that age is reached there are certain problems to be met and settled. He urged earnestness on the part of the men of the church.

At the conclusion of the speeches, a vote of thanks was extended to the speakers and Miss Case, and Mr. Braider, the accompanist, for the very enjoyable program.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Symons, of East Third street, will spend Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. William Symons, of New York.

THIS YEAR'S CORN CROP 2,553,732,000 BUSHELS

Preliminary returns to the Department of Agriculture at Washington on the production of corn indicate a total yield of 2,553,732,000 bushels, an average of 26 bushels an acre, as compared with a yield of 30.3 bushels an acre in 1906. The general average as to quality is 82.8 per cent., as compared with 89.9 per cent. last year.

It is estimated that about 4.5 per cent. (130,995,000 bushels) of the corn crop of 1906 was still in the handsof farmers on November 1, 1907, as compared with 4.4 per cent. (119,633,000 bushels) of the crop of 1905 in farmers' hands on November 1, 1906, and 5.3 per cent. the ten years' average for old corn on hand November 1.

BOB DAVIS STRIKES BACK

Resents Ex-Senator Smith's Charge of Trickery and Asks Nugent Questions.

WASHES THE PARTY LINEN.

Hudson County Boss Tells Some State Secrets and Exposes Essex County's Brand of Democracy.

Robert Davis, Democratic boss of Hudson county, presents his compliments to James R. Nugent, political lieutenant of former United States Senator James Smith, Jr., of Essex, and denies the imputation of trickery in the defeat of Frank S. Katzenbach. The crust of the Hudson harmony pie served up on the Davis outing last summer has been punctured, and the twenty or more stinging darts concealed therein are flying with caustic points toward Democratic heads in Essex.

Smith has alleged trickery—a trade between Davis and Dickinson for the defeat of Fagan at the cost of large Democratic majorities for Katzenbach. Davis turns to the pages of Democratic history in Essex and gives tit for tat. Smith, through Nugent, his chief air, wants to know why Katzenbach was knifed in Hudson. Davis, through James E. Hennessy, his private secretary and co-worker, wants to know why the Democratic Assembly candidates in Essex went down to defeat. And the Smith-Davis feud is on again, while Democrats throughout th State are paying their election bets and keeping their own counsel.

This is the epistle of the Philistines that comes out of the land of the Davisites:

People living in glass houses in Essex county should not throw stones in Hudson county. Essex was not at all particular when she made a deal with Passaic and other counties with Democratic Assemblymen toe leav Hudson out in the distribution of honors in a Democratic House of Assembly.

Essex must not forget the trickery by which she turned down Joseph A. Riordan, of Hudson, for Speaker and substituted Edgar E. Lethbridge, of Essex, and the subsequent efforts all the time to freeze out Hudson in legislation. James R. Nugent must not forget that disgraceful scene in April, when he attempted to secure a snap sine die adjournment through his Speaker. It is not "up to" the pot to call the kettle black.

Mr. Nugent in charging Mr. Davis with treachery has a very short memory. He forgot his appearance in the Trenton House just before midnight of the night before the Democratic State Convention, when, flushed with wine consumed at a dinner given by James Smith, Jr., in New York city, he attempted to carry out orders to kill Katzenbach as a candidate by booming James E. Martine.

Hudson stood by Katzenbach and saved him the nomination with the aid of other loyal Democrats, outside of Essex, which had desired his defeat and was sullen and revengeful. The great majority given Wittpenn in Jersey City was the result of local conditions that had nothing to do with the contest for Governor of New Jersey. The Republicans who voted for Wittpenn would not vote for Katzenbach.

Judge Fort had sat in Hudson, and the people respected him and voted for him in preference to a candidate whom they knew nothing of and who did not declare himself, as he had been expected to do, on the issues of the campaign. Mr. Davis did all in his power to elect Frank S. Katzenbach Governor, and no man knows that better than I do. But you cannot make people vote for a man whom they do not know and who was silent on certain issues.

Did Essex Democrats support James M. Seymour for Governor as they should have done for an Essex candidate, or did they stand by Charles C. Black, of Hudson, as they should have done for a party candidate? Essex has participated in party treachery for years, while Hudson's Democracy has always been the bulwark of the party in the State of New Jersey. No reproaches from Essex will injure Robert Davis in the estimation of the people of Hudson county, nor will the people of the rest of the State be fooled long by outcries from professional party knifers in Essex.

Hoboken Democrats repudiated the candidate for Governor to a great extent because he was silent on the excise question. They did not know where he stood on a question that they considered vital. Katzenbach would have been cut still more in Hoboken if he had spoken there and had been as silent as elsewhere in the State on the excise question.

Hudson gave Mr. Katzenbach, despite all, a Democratic majority that puts to shame Essex's vote for him, and Hudson returns a solid Democratic delegation to the Assembly, while Essex loses eleven Democratic Assemblymen.

J. Evarts Tracy and family, of West Eighth street, have closed their house and will spend the winter in New York.

Mrs. Army E. Lorton, of Watchung avenue, who has been suffering with an abscess on her face, is much improved today.

VERY FIRST OF THE NEW GOLD COINS

The first of the new coins designed by the late Augustus Saint Gaudens, under the general direction of President Roosevelt, has reached the City National Bank from the United States Mint in Philadelphia. It is the $10 gold piece, or half eagle, and for the first time since 1873 the words "In God We Trust" are omitted from the coin. It is understood that these words will be omitted from the coins of all the other denominations, according to the designs approved by President Roosevelt.

It could not be learned at the Treasury Department who was responsible for the omission of the words "In God We Trust," but the Department officers have had nothing to do with the change in the coin designed except to carry out the orders of the President.

The Secular League of the District of Columbia and other organizations of the same kind has been making an intermittent campaign for years against the use of the name of the Deity in Thanksgiving proclamations and various official documents, and especially against the use of the motto "In God We Trust," on the coins of the Nation. All the old coins above the dime bear this motto.

The new gold coin issued from the mint bears on one side a spread eagle holding a number of arrows in its talons, and on the other side the head of an Indian in full war dress.

ROBBED BY TRUSTED FRIEND.

Unfortunate Parent in Jail Entrusts Trunk to Man, Who Fled With It.

Paterson, Nov. 9.—John Schneider is serving a term in jail, ignorant of the fact that he has been robbed by a man in whom he placed implicit confidence. Schneider thought so much of Charles Vierney that he wanted his daughter Sophie to marry him. The girl declined, and differences that cropped out between her and her parent caused her to leave home.

Schneider atrociously assaulted Patrolman Frank H. Perry about three weeks ago. The sentence was thirty days in jail.

The prisoner sent for Vierney a few days since and gave him the keys of a trunk in his home at 211 Mill street. He requested the boarder to pawn two gold watches contained in the trunk, and Vierney did as requested, but failed to turn over the money.

Miss Schneider went to her father's home Friday, and learned that Vierney had not been there for several days. Wednesday he gave up his position at the Watson Machine Works, and told fellow-employes that he was going to sail for Europe. Miss Schneider investigated, and found that her father's trunk was missing. In addition to the watches pawned, it had contained two other watches, about 100 imported towels, a large quantity of silk dress goods, shawls and other valuable goods. She reported the matter to Chief of Police Bimson.

Mayor Warns Against Tipping.

Montclair, Nov. 9.—Mayor Henry V. Crawford, in a proclamation to the residents of Montclair, yesterday advised against the practice of "tipping." The town has abrogated the contract under which the ashes and garbage were collected, and has taken this work upon itself owing to the numerous complaints about the old system. It is said that many of these complaints were due to favoritism shown by the ash and garbage collectors to those who gave them liberal "tips." The more economical citizens suffered in consequence, their accumulations of ashes and garbage being allowed to stand. Mayor Crawford warns the people to desist from the "tipping" habit if they want the town collectors to do the work without discrimination.

SEES NO IMPROPRIETY AT DROWNE PARTIES

Much testimony was taken yesterday in Newark before Vice Chancellor Stevens in the proceedings brought by Henry D. Drowne, of New York, to obtain through a writ of habeas corpus the custody of his ten-year-old son, who is now in the keeping of Mrs. Drowne. George L. Kose, of the Hotel Washington, in Jersey City, testified that he had never seen Mrs. Drowne under the influence of liquor.

Russell Spaulding, general manager of the Elevated Air Brake Company, testified that while Mrs. Downe was staying at the Latourette House, in Bayonne, where he lives, he never saw anything wrong in her behavior.

Mrs. Virginia Forsythe Webb, mother of Mrs. Drowne, denied that Mr. Drowne after procuring a Dakota divorce had gone to live in New Jersey because she was afraid to go to New York, but admitted writing a letter which was in part as follows: "We left this God-forsaken country a month ago, Lou having received her decree. We came here because the New York courts do not recognize a Dakota decree. Most of the Eastern States and many foreign countries do."

In another letter which the witness acknowledged was written by her references were made to Mr. Drowne's alleged meanness and counsel for Drowne asked her if she regarded a gift of $10,000 by Drowne to his wife as an evidence of meanness.

"I would hardly put it that way," answered Mrs. Webb. "I thought it was a bribe."

R. W. St. Hall, of New York, testified to having attended card parties in Mrs. Drowne's apartments in New York, but on those occasions he had never seen anything wrong nor had he seen Mrs. Drowne under the influence of liquor. The Vice Chancellor remarked:

"I don't understand that any impropriety occurred at those card parties. If any impropriety did occur it was as much on Mr. Drowne's part as on Mrs. Drowne's, but I have not been able to see that there was any impropriety at all."

William Graham, whose divorced wife figured in testimony given at earlier hearings, denied some of the things which were said about him at the time. He testified that his wife is living in Paris. In speaking of the divorce, which she procured from him in 1903, he said, "I gave her one." In answer to another query he said, "Yes, I gave her one. It was collusive."

Mrs. Drowne testified that she has an income of $55 to $60 a month, the proceeds of what remains of the $10,000 given her by Mrs. Drowne. Her mother, she said, has an income of $35 to $40 a month and pays one-third of their joint household expenses.

THIS A WEEK OF PRAYER

Special Meetings Being Held by Y. M. C A. Workers Throughout the Land.

TWO SERVICES TO BE HELD.

G. M. Rittenhouse to Lead Tonight's Meeting and J. H. Manning To Be In Charge Thursday Night.

This week has been set aside by the Young Men's Christian Association everywhere as a time when "men in North America shall pray for men throughout the world." The international committee of the association has issued a pamphlet containing subjects of daily prayer, private and public, during the week.

At the local association, but two meeting will be held. George M. Rittenhouse will be in charge of the meeting tonight, the topics for which have been announced by the international association as "The Boys' Departments," and "Association work in Cuba, Mexico, Panama, Central and South America." Thursday evening, J. H. Manning will lead a similar service of prayer. The topics for the day include "Work in the railroad and industrial associations" and "Association work in Hawaii and the Philippines."

A statement of the standing of the Y. M. C. A. movement throughout the world has been issued by the international committee at New York for the information of the members. It shows organizations among twenty nations in Europe with large central buildings in the chief cities.

The unfulfilled opportuities of the associations in cities of North America are suggested for consideration. Of the 1,205 cities in North America of above 4,000 population, 545 have associations, but 660 cities averaging 17,000 population as yet have none. Over $10,000,000 have been given associations for buildings in two years, but mostly for large cities. Work for the immigrant is a problem before the city organizations.

The international committee, which promotes the association movement, employs 75 secretaries in America, the Philippines, Canal Zone and Alaska and 70 in foreign fields, including China, India, Japan, Korea, South America and Mexico, with home expenses of $200,000 and foreign of $170,000. In the canvasses conducted by its secretaries last year over $2,000,000 was secured for new buildings for city associations. The state and provincial committees employ 120 secretaries, with an annual budget of $300,000. By the cooperation of these committees the association movement is fostered and supervised.

With the help of North America associations have been extended to the capitals of Brazil, Argentina, Cuba and Mexico, and buildings worth $330,000 were secured the past year for Buenos Ayres and Mexico City, while nine secretaries have been sent to the Canal Zone to direct the work for the 6,000 Americans there in the four club buildings already erected by the United States Government.

Over 57,000 of the 200,000 men students in North America in the 741, colleges and schools are members of the college associations. These have 33,000 men in Bible studies and 18,000 studying missions. Already over 3,500 students have been induced to become foreign missionaries and thousands of these members have entered the minstry.

The Needlework Guild.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield branch of the Needlework Guild was held Thursday afternoon in the Crescent Avenue church parlors. There was a large attendance of directors and associates. A most intesting and attractive exhibition of new garments collected for distribution to the different charitable institutions in Plainfield was followed by a tea and generally social time. The garments collected this year, numbering 2,646, was a most encouraging increase over last year and most gratifying to the directors. Mrs. John B. Dumont, as president, wishes to thank the directors and associates for their very evident interest in the work.

Surprise Party for Boroughites.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Townley, of Somerset street, were pleasantly surprised at their home last night by a party of their friends and neighbors. The evening was passed in playing pinochle and in a social way, and the affair proved a complete surprise. Refreshments were served at midnight.

Men's Club Invited.

The Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue church holds its November meeting this evening at 8:15. Members of the men's clubs of other churches are invited to come and hear Lee De Forest speak on "Telephoning Without Wires."

COUNTY ELECTION BOARD NOW AT WORK

The County Board of Elections is today canvassing the returns of the recent election, in accordance with the requirements of the election laws. The Board of Elections resolved itself into a Board of Canvassers, of which County Clerk James C. Calvert was made clerk. He was sworn in by Robert H. McAdams, chairman of the board.

All the members of the board were present, those besides the chairman being Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of this city; Frederick Zior and George L. Stewart of Elizabeth. The meeting was called to order by Mr. McAdams and the members settled down to work on the long lists of figures.

It will probably take four or five days for the canvassers to complete their work, and it may drag out through the week. One thing that will make for delay, as it does every year, is the delinquency of certain election officials who forget to enter all the figures that are required of them. Constables may be sent out after these officials, for it is mandatory to have all returns in.

There is no doubt that the report of the canvassers will substantially sustain the earlier newspaper reports of the election, and that there will be no reversals of any consequence announced. There is some talk of a recount being demanded in Rahway in the election of John Stephan, who defeated Freeholder Gruener. There is but a difference of one of the votes for the two and friends of the defeated incumbent intend to insist on a recount.

There is not much difference expected in any of the figures already announced.

MINISTER'S DEFINITION OF SUNDAY OBSERVANCE

Rev. A. Peter Tulp, pastor of the New York Avenue Reformed church, Newark, preached on "Sunday Observance" on Sunday morning. The minister-pastor pointed out that the origin of the Christian Sabbath was human and not divine, and declared that it differed from the Jewish Sabbath.

"The question is not, Shall a man walk in the park or call on his friends, or read the magazines or play this game or that," declared the speaker, "but, are we using the day for spiritual culture and soul-improvement?

"How shall we keep Sunday? Not as the Puritans, turning a day meant for gladness into sadness and gloom; nor like the Parisians—a day for frivolous amusement and secular pleasures; but standing fast in the liberty with which Christ has made us free, let us breathe a purer air and rejoice in it, lighted by a diviner heaven."

HOSPITAL MEETING.

Financial Report of "Gathering of the Clans" Not Submitted.

Only routine business was transacted at the November meeting of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, held at the Casino, last night. The committees were not ready to report on the net receipts from "The Gathering of the Clans." This will be made later.

The medical board reported the number of patients in October as follows:

Remaining at date of last report, 27; admitted, 68; discharged cured, 42; improved, 9; not improved, 2; died, 6; total number treated, 95; hospital days, 855; operations, 82; patients remaining, 36. In the dispensary there were treated 36 patients; visits of patients, 159; operations, 6.

Bird Life of the Bahamas.

Members of all the Men's Clubs of Plainfield are invited to attend the lecture to be given at the Congregational church tonight, under the auspices of the Men's Club by Prof. Frank M. Chapman, of the American Museum of Natural History, on "The Bird Life of the Bahamas." It will be a "ladies' night" affair and a general invitation is extended to all interested. Miss Bertha vanNuis Willis, soprano, will be the soloist.

Will Begin Work Today.

R. P. Gay, who has come to Plainfield to work under the direction of the Shade Tree Commission and the P. S. C., in the work of trimming trees, was formerly with the Munson-Whitaker Company, experts in forestry, arboriculture and entomology. He will probably begin his work today, the employes of the P. S. C. undertaking the work of trimming trees in the vicinity of their wires, as Mr. Gay shall direct.

Mr. and Mrs. George Morris, who went to Washington, D. C., last week on their wedding journey, have returned to New Market.

HOW FIRES ARE FOUGHT

Chas. E. Hill, Author of Books on Fire Fighting, Lectures at Grace Church.

NEW YORK COMPANIES BEST.

Metropolitan Department Has Well-nigh Perfect Force and Greatest Water Power in the World. Engines Abroad.

A discription of the methods used by various countries in fighting the flames was given by Charles E. Hill, of New York, under the auspices of the Men's Club of Grace church in the parish house last night. Mr. Hill's talk was illustrated by steriopticon pictures and there were moving pictures of a metropolitan fire department in action and reproductions of photographs of fire houses and boxes. The affair was well attended and nearly $100 was netter, which will be turned over to the manager of "The Pilot," the parish paper.

Mr. Hill gave much practical information of the "inside workings" of a metropolitan fire department, describing step by step just what happens from the time the alarm is turned in from a street corner until the department rolls up the hose and returns to the fire house. Much of this discription was new, and of great interest, as practicaaly stated by the lecturer. In speaking of the fire departments of the world, Mr. Hill stated that the New York department was the best, but said that the Americans could get many practical points from the German departments, which he described at length. He summarized the work of the English and French departments, and said that automobile fire engines were coming into almost general use, especially in the latter named country. In Egypt, too, they fight the flames with a regular organized department, the apparatus of which is on the model of a sedan chair, carried on the shoulders of the firemen. Mr. Hill said that the great height of the buildings in New York City was the reason for the fact that the fire departments of the metropolis have the greatest force of water in the world. Anecdotes of the firemen, and stories of the various fire departments furnished amusements to the lecture, and Mr. Hill dwelt especially upon the description of the apparatus of various countries of the world where fire is fought by organized companies. The lecturer is the author of "Fighting the Fire," "Floating Fire Engines," and "Fire Patrol." He has made a study of metropolitan fire fighting, and in connection with it has studied the workings of fire departments of the various countries of Europe of various trips abroad.

The affair last night was under the auspices of the Men's Club of the church, and the entertainment committee arranged for the lecture.

CHAMBER CONCERT.

First of McIntyre Series Thursday Night.

The first of the McIntyre Chamber Music concerts takes place at the Casino Thursday night. Features of the program will be the Trio opus 29 by Gade, for violin, 'cello and piano, and the great sonata for violin and piano by Grieg in C minor. Madame Shanna Cumming will sing two beautiful arias from Handel's operas and a group of three English songs.

Mr. McIntyre will preside at the piano and Vladimir Dubinsky, 'cellist, whose work last season aroused so much enthusiasm aming the music-lovers who attended the concerts.

P. S. C. Improvements.

It is the intention of the Public Service Corporation to start the work this year of laying the foundation for its large gas holder on its recently-acquired property on Watchung avenue, formerly owned by the Guion estate, for the purpose of erecting the holder possibly next summer. This holder will be in the nature of a reserve storage tank for gas in case anything should happen to the main which runs from Camden to Plainfield, supplying gas to the city. There has been a rumor that the company intends erecting an eight-story building on the Watchung avenue side of the property, opposite Fourth street, where offices will be established and a waiting room and where a trolley transfer point will be made, but inquiry among the officials fails to confirm the story. It is possible, however, that the company may build a structure on this property within another year.

Awaiting Verification.

The four Duer street hunters, who spent yesterday rabbit hunting near Martinsville, came home last night with twelve cottontails. Of these, the gun of John Roberts proved fatal for seven, and Chauncey Colthar got three. The other members of the party were A. J. Leader and W. H. Kirch.

SOUTHSIDE SEWER WORK NOW WELL UNDER WAY

Work on the Southside sanitary sewer, which has had more ups and downs than any contract ever executed in the city, is now progressing favorably but it will be several months yet before the job is completed. John Sutcliff, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., who was brought here by the people who went security for Peter Morgan, is acting as foreman and with the assistance of Patsy Miele, the padrone, is keeping a large force of men at work.

Miele has supplied men for the contract all along and when the mix-up occurred that resulted in Morgan abandoning the job, the padrone lost a large sum of money. When work was resumed he cheerfully consented to furnish the labor and has since been receiving his money without any trouble. Miele is one of the best known padrones operating in this vicinity and has made many friends in Plainfield by his business-like methods. He recently secured a contract to furnish 400 laborers for canal work at Schenectady, N. Y., and 200 for road work at Middletown, N. Y.

Y. M. C. A. AUXILIARY IN ANNUAL SESSION

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. was held yesterday afternoon, when it was voted to raise money for the work, by voluntary contributions from active members. At the close of the meeting the annual meeting was held and the reports for the year showed gratifying results.

For a long time the association has felt the need of dormitories in the Y. M. C. A. building, and this year the auxiliary completely furnished two rooms.

The membership of the society stands just three short of 300; 170 active and 127 associate—the same total as last year.

The treasurer reported the receipts of $474.89. This has largely been expended in furnishing the dormitories, in paying for the telephone, in defraying the expenses of a boy at the summer Y. M. C. A. camp, and in a contribution to the State work. Several suppers have been served and the bills paid by the auxiliary.

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. H. C. Krebs; first vice president, Mrs. W. S. Freeman; second vice president, Mrs. H. M. Maxson; third vice president, Mrs. A. J. Gavett; secretary, Mrs. H. J. Hubbard; assistant secretary, Mrs. Asa Randolph; treasurer, Mrs. Harry Runyon.

Park Avenue Endeavorers to Meet.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will hold an important business meeting at the home of Charles F. Dayton, of East Sixth street tonight. Mr. Dayton has just been elected president of the organization, and at the business meeting tonight, he will announce his committees and there will be a discussion of the plan of work to be adopted for the coming year.

School Basketball League.

Managers of the three local school basketball teams will meet Physical Director George H. Listman at the Y. M. C. A. Friday afternoon, at which time a president, secretary and treasurer of the league will be elected and the schedule of games between the schools will be arranged.

Politicians at Trenton.

Among the members of the Legislature conspicuous at Trenton today were State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, Assemblyman C. B. Pierce and John R. Moxon, of Union county. County Chairman Frank H. Smith was also on hand.

BOOK-KEEPER IS MISSING

DISAPPEARED LAST WEDNESDAY

Employed by Public Service Corporation and Officials Find Evidence of Discrepancies In His Accounts.

Continued absence on the part of Anthony Kregar, a well known local resident living on Liberty street, has led to his family and friends calling upon the police to aid them in locating him. He disappeared last Wednesday morning, leaving at the customary time with the ostensible purpose of going to his work at the Public Service gas plant on East Fourth street. He has been employed as bank-keeper in the coke department but the last the officials saw of him was when he quit the office Tuesday. An election bet of $20, which he made with one of the men and won, is still waiting for him at the plant.

Kregar has always been known as a man of exemplary habits and has never remained away from home before more than a day or two at a time. Mrs. Kregar has been greatly worried over his absence and is at a loss to offer any explanation for his conduct. No one has been found who saw him after Wednesday morning and it is believed he is somewhere out of the city.

Kregar is well known as a musician and until recently was a member of various local orchestras.

It was said this afternoon that the Public Service officials had discovered evidences of discrepencies in Kregar's accounts and that legal steps will be taken to apprehend him and secure an explanation.

HORSE HAS RUNAWAY HABIT.

At Its Old Trick Yesterday but Patrolman Stops Game.

A horse belonging to John Geary, of South Plainfield, and attached to a runabout, became unmanageable in the cramped quarters at Front and Somerset streets, yesterday afternoon at 4:30 and crashed into a rig belonging to Otto Arens. The Geary animal afterward made a desperate effort to run away but was prevented by Patrolman Charles Flynn, who risked personal injury in bringing it to a standstill. The harness on the Arens horse was badly ripped and the wagon was somewhat damaged.

Geary's horse was driven by a South Plainfield man and is one that has a habit of running away. On one occasion a short time ago the owner was badly injured by getting thrown beneath a heavily loaded wagon when it started off on a mad plunge.

SNOW TONIGHT?

John Neagle, who figures on local weather probabilities, forecasts snow for tonight. The minimum official temperature for the past twenty-four hours was 38 degrees, but the raw air made it seem colder. Heavy snow is reported by the weather bureau in the west, and there was snowfall as far east as St. Louis.

Weather Forecaster Neagle said today that under conditions reported moving eastward, the precipitation due tonight or tomorrow will be snow.

Another Coat of Cement Necessary.

Because of the haste of some people in wanting to drive over the brick pavement on West Front street, City Engineer Gavett has instructed Contractor Meeker to give the surface another coating of cement. Scarcely before the cement was allowed to begin the process of setting, wagons and autos run over the pavement, causing the brick to loosen. Mr. Gavett asks the indulgence of the people for a short time until the work can be completed.

Grace M. E. Club's Sociable.

A social meeting and an evening of good time and polity brought many of the members of the men's club of Grace M. E. church together at the church last night. Before the pleasure of the evening, there was a short business meeting, at which routine matters were despatched. Afterwards games were played and refreshments served. The entertainment committee, of which Raymond Miller is chairman, was in charge of the affair.

Borough High vs. Westfield Here.

The football eleven of the borough high school will play the Westfield high school team on the Westervelt avenue grounds tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The game played at Westfield several weeks ago was forfeited by the borough boys, who were ahead, 5-0, when the argument started.

THREE CARRIERS MORE FOR LOCAL POST OFFICE

Postmaster E. H. Bird has received official notification from the postal department at Washington that his request for three additional letter-carriers has been granted, and he will place them in the service just as soon as he can rearrange the several routes. There is now an urgent need for better service in the Netherwood district and in the West End and it is with a view to improving the mail deliveries in these parts of the city that Mr. Bird is now working.

When Mr. Bird was appointed postmaster his force of letter-carriers numbered ten, that was nine years ago. Since then it has been gradually increased until at present, with the three additional ones just granted, it numbers twenty-one. In comparison to the increases allowed in other offices of the same size as Plainfield, Postmaster Bird feels as though the government has been fairly liberal in taking care of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

The new letter-carriers, appointed from the substitute list, are Francis Legg, Britton Shepherd and Daniel VanWinkle. Just as soon as Mr. Bird can make provisions for them they will begin regular duty. In certain sections of the city where only one partial delivery is now being made there will be an effort to complete this delivery and possibly add an extra one. It is Mr. Bird's intention to equalize the carrier service in such a way that the most important sections will be amply provided for and at the same time not slight the other sections. He believes that with the three extra men he can do this.

SENATOR COLBY'S JOKE ON HIS BROTHER FAILS

What was planned as a practical joke on Howard Colby, whose engagement to Miss Ruth Morgan Tenney, of this city, was exclusively announced in The Daily Press yesterday, in which his own brother, State Senator Everett Colby, was the instigator and Sheriff Sommer was to play the principal role, miscarried yesterday at Newark because of the victim's preception. Howard Colby was arrested Saturday by Patrolman McNellen for running an automobile without a license and today paid a fine of $10 in the First Precinct Police Court. Senator Colby arranged that when his brother paid the fine he should be told to go to the sheriff's office and inquire whether was a complaint against him under the State law. In the mean time the Senator hurried to the court house and posted the sheriff. It was arranged that when Howard Colby arrived a mock trial should be held, with the sheriff presiding. Senator Colby was to keep in the background. Acting-Captain Caffrey, as requested, told Mr. Colby after the fine was paid it would be necessary for him to go immediately to Sheriff Sommer's office, where final disposition would be made.

"I do not want to send an officer with you," the acting captain said to Mr. Colby, "and hope I can depend on you going to the sheriff's office right away."

With an apparent air of seriousness Mr. Colby left, thanking Caffrey for his courtesy and promising to go to the court house as quickly as possible. There the ponderous jail keys were produced, handcuffs and chains were hunted up and things were about prepared when the recent prisoner walked into the office unexpectedly. He saw his brother sitting there and began to laugh.

"So this is the joke," the prospective victim remarked.

The conspirators were forced to admit that they were beaten.

Christopher Maden's Funeral.

The funeral of Christopher C. Maden, who died at his home on West Third street yesterday morning, will be held at the Calvary Baptist church tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The service will be conducted by Rev. J. B. Mitchell, assisted by Rev. G. W. Bailey and Rev. F. G. Alexander.

Funeral of Mrs. Neilsen.

The funeral of Mrs. Christian Neilsen was held at her late home on East Second street, yesterday afternoon. It was conducted by Rev. A. E. Finn, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends. Burial was made in Hillside cemetery.

Bazaar and Mother Goose Dinner.

Under the auspices of the Women's Guild of the Church of the Holy Cross a bazaar and Mother Goose dinner will be given in the parish house, Wednesday and Thursday nights, November 20 and 21, from 6:30 to 8:30 o'clock.

BOOM W. W. SMALLEY FOR THE SPEAKERSHIP

Somerset County's Ideal Assemblyman in Contest for Head of Lower House.

HIS FRIENDS ARE NOW ACTIVE.

Rely On His Record In Advancing Claims For Preferment—Hard At Work Today at Trenton.

When the Republican politicians gathered at Trenton today for their weekly confab a new name was sprung up in the Assembly speakership fight, W. W. Smalley, of Somerset county, being the man whose name was whispered about as a newcomer to be reckoned with in the solution of the problem. The wise ones had it that Assemblyman H. D. Thompson, of Mercer county, was slated for the job, but the friends of Assemblyman William Martin, of Essex county, are still making a hard fight. No let-up is shown by the boomers of Assemblyman John D. Prince, of Passaic, either.

A representative delegation of Somerset leaders was on hand early to say a good word for Assemblyman Smalley, among them being State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen and former State Senator Charles A. Reed. It was conceded that Mr. Smalley would make an ideal man for the place, his record in the Assembly being a clean one all through. Some of those on the inside declared that the contest really lay between him and Mr. Thompson. Smalley's firm stand against the re-election of United States Senator John F. Dryden was counted as a good card for him with the Colbyites, inasmuch as he had declined to join with Somerset's Senator in helping the insurance president retain his job at Washington. His vote on that matter was in line with his entire course in the Legislature.

When asked yesterday whether he was a candidate for the speakership, Mr. Smalley said to a representative of The Daily Press:

"It is true that my friends are booming me for the place and it is equally true that I would not decline the high honor. No man appreciates more than I do the importance of that position and what it means to all concerned. During the time that I have had the honor to represent Somerset county, I have steadfastly endeavored to perform my duty to the utmost of my ability remembering that I am the chosen representative of all the people of my grand old county. In the Legislature, I have tried to be fair and honest in all my dealings and have done what I considered was the wish of my constituents and for their best interests, ever mindful of what was best for the State at large."

Mr. Smalley is a native of Bound Brook. He is a graduate of the New York University Grammar School and the Eastman Business College. After seven years' employment in a New York banking house, he engaged in the lumber business in Bound Brook twenty-seven years ago. His first public office was that of councilman in his own town. In 1906, he defeated former Prosecutor William V. Steele, the Democratic nominee, for the Assembly. His unanimous renomination was followed by re-election a week ago today, he being the only Republican on the county ticket to pull through.

Mrs. Edward S. Robinson, of Westfield, has been reappointed New Jersey secretary in the general Federation of Women's Clubs.

DUNELLEN.

In remanding Charles Robinson to the New Brunswick jail to await the action of the grand jury relative to his alleged crimes against several small boys in the borough, Justice of the Peace R. V. P. Von Minden took occasion to speak of the danger of allowing the young people to remain out at night. According to the testimony of the boys, as offered by their fathers, the attacks had been made late in the evening after 9 o'clock. This, said Judge Von Minden, was in a measure the fault of the parents. Children of the age of some of the lads implicated, in some instances not yet in their 'teens, should be at home and in bed at that time of night, not out on the streets. The judge said it should be the business of the parents to keep the children in doors of an evening, or at least to know where they were and exactly what they were doing. Local ministers have brought out this point repeatedly in their sermons, and the judge illustrated the case forcefully by the case up for a hearing.

Within a few weeks it is probable that extensive improvements will be begun on First street, between Washington and Lincoln avenues. At the last meeting the property owners of this district of the borough submitted a petition, providing for the installation of electric lights at intervals along the stretch of roadway, claiming that the district was so dark as to be dangerous to women pedestrians after nightfall. They also asked for a fire hydrant, to be placed on First street, at Lincoln avenue, and petitioned that gutters be laid on First street to better the drainage

The Lesson of the Eagle and the Weasel

The familiar story goes that once, when an eagle pounced upon a weasel and soared with it high into the air, the weasel fastened its fangs deep into the eagle's breast and commenced to draw its life-blood. The eagle tried to shake the weasel off, but the weasel hung on until the eagle fell lifeless to the ground.

Fourteen-year-old George Norton, Jr., of Dias Creek, was bitten on the foot last July by a horsefly. The application of home-made ointment seemed to give relief. The bite has never healed, developing into a running sore. Saturday it become necessary to perform an operation to save the boy's foot.

Oberlin Smith, president of the Ferracute Machine Company, Bridgeton, had as his guests Saturday, O. Yamagata, superintendent of the Imperial mint, of Japan, and T. Hirose, his assistant. They were here to inspect the plant of the Ferracute company, and to get estimates upon new machinery and dies for their mint.

Tripping over an obstacle in the rear of his home at 330 Lemon street, Camden, Henry Parker, who lived a hermit's life, sustained a fracture of the right leg several days ago, but was not discovered until Saturday. Neighbors found the old fellow lying on the floor of his hut in a nearly famished condition. He was sent to Cooper Hospital.

Deputy Sheriff W. H. Nickerson, of Vineland, who takes such pride in his blooded fowls that he actually furnished his new hennery with lace curtains at the windows, imbued such an aristocratic spirit among his roosters that one of them disputed the right of way of an electric train on the West Jersey Railroad and lost its head and one wing. It is supposed Nickerson dined on chicken potpie yesterday.

Colored ministers and the entire negro population in the heart of Atlantic City's colored section are warring over the application for a license for a saloon in Kentucky avenue, above Atlantic avenue, where the church element has twice defeated petitions for a saloon. The colored remonstrants propose to invade council when the license comes up for action, and enter a vigorous protest.

Philadelphia autoists, wading in muck to their knees, near Atlantic City, pried a horse out of the deep mud alongside the meadow boulevard after their skidding car had hit the team of Jacob R. Lewis, a mainland farmer, and sent both vehicles off the road. J. R. Lippincott, William Reed and John Spencer were in the automobile, which was partly overturned. They dashed clear of the road, but their fall in the mud saved serious injuries.

A class of sixty-five candidates, of whom forty-three were prominent young men of Trenton, was yesterday initiated as Knights of Columbus at the Immaculate Conception School building in Chestnut avenue. The remaining twenty-two candidates were from Mt. Holly, Burlington, Princeton, Lambertsville, Millstone, Yardley and New Brunswick.

Mr. and Mrs. Achilles P. Willits, of near Haddonfield, had a narrow escape from death in a runaway Sunday afternoon. They were returning from Friends' meeting, and had neared Ellis street when their horse took fright and turned short, ran into the curb and dashed the couple to the ground, which at this point is paved with stone. Mrs. Willis sustained two broken ribs and she had severe bruises about the head and face. Mr. Willits received several cuts on the head.

Charles Walton, of 25 Vine street, Paterson, an employe of the Erie Railroad, will lose the sight of one eye and perhaps both, as the result of an accident which occurred Saturday afternoon while making some repairs to rails at Riverside. Walton was using a sledge, pounding down the spikes that bind the rails to the ties. A small piece of iron chipped off and struck Walton in the left eye. The eye was penetrated and the sight destroyed.

WHEN IT STRIKES HOME.

The extortionate price of white paper for which the trust is held responsible has caused much alarm all over the country, among newspaper managers, who have sought relief at last by appealing to President Roosevelt to use his good offices in having the tariff moved in order to restore honest competition. The big Metropolitan dailies principally have been sorely hit and their owners have now led in the fight to be relieved from the bondage. When it strikes home no man applauds a tariff which creates a domestic trust to his own personal detriment and that is the exact situation in this case. Even here in Jersey where struggling papers have attempted to conduct an honest business by retailing their newspapers at the price of one cent, the condition is already critical. Two plants have been compelled to announce a raise in the price of subscription and others necessarily will have to follow.

Referring to the present condition, the Elizabeth Daily Journal says:

"With the cheapest grade of white paper suitable for news print costing close to three cents a pound, penny papers are bound to disappear rapidly within the next year. The Perth Amboy Evening News and the Perth Amboy Chronicle are the first New Jersey dailies to boost the price from one cent to two. There are signs that there will be others very soon.

"A newspaper that is worth anything at all ought to be worth two cents. When a publisher doesn't get two cents for his paper it simply means that he is putting on unjust share of the expense of publication upon the advertiser. A newspaper has just two sources of revenue, advertising and circulation. Generally speaking the sbuscribers to a newspaper outnumber the regular advertisers twenty to one. A newspaper which sells its product for a penny gets only one-fifth of its revenue from subscriptions, the balance must come from advertising. The proportion is unjust all round.

"The craze for great circulation is chiefly an outgrowth of hot competition in New York city, where several of the papers are subsidized for political influence or backed by the millions of ambitious men like W. R. Hearst. He is not an expert newspaper man at all, which has been demonstrated by the fact that his chief rival in his own field, The World, is a much better and infinitely more profitable newspaper. Moreover, it stands on its own bottom, which all newspapers should do, if they would enjoy public confidence and support."

MR. SMITH'S WORK.

The majority of Union county voters are too busy hurrahing for Fort to stop and think for a moment how such a victory was achieved a week ago today. Possibly were they to reflect many would cite the stand taken by the nominee on the Bishops' bill as the reason why such obstacles as confronted the county campaign managers were so splendidly overcome. But it is submitted that the admirable work of the county chairman, Frank H. Smith, should not be lost sight of in the reckoning. Few, indeed, are aware of the work performed by this zealous, persevering and enterprising politician.

Were it not for Mr. Smith's efforts it is very doubtful if the general aid of the clergy would have been enlisted in the cause for the preservation of the Sabbath. No stone was left unturned by him to direct the attention of all Christian people in the county to the impending danger. From the pulpit, on the eleventh hour, rang out the needful warning and when the hour came the church people demonstrated that they were alive to the situation. They rallied beneath the banner of J. Franklin Fort, the defender of the American Sabbath, and it was largely due to Mr. Smith that they did so.

SMALLEY FOR SPEAKER.

It would be hard indeed to elect a more suitable candidate for speaker of the House than Assemblyman W. W. Smalley, of Somerset county, whose name was prominently mentioned at Trenton today for that honor. Mr. Smalley belongs to that type of citizenship sorely needed in public life. He is in no sense a politician; just a plain every-day business man embued with the right sort of public and private ethics. In business life, he has won a name for probity and fair dealing and in public life for rightly discharging the trust reposed in him. His name is synomous with conscientious effort; his public record is without a semblance of stain.

FRENCH EXPOSITION'S TRIBUTE TO MRS. EDDY

Boston, Nov. 12.—Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, the leader of the Christian Science denomination, has been awarded a diploma of honor by the International Exposition of Book and Paper Industries recently held in Paris.

The interesting information reached the Christian Science Sentinel of Boston, through a letter from Dr. W. H. Tolman, Commissioner General for the United States at the Book and Paper Exposition. Dr. Tolman's letter was addressed to Rev. Wm. P. McKenzie of the Christian Science Publishing Socnety, and is as follows:

Paris ,L'Octobre 23, 1907.

Dear Dr. McKenzie:

It gives me sincere pleasure to inform you that, on my recommendation, the highest award, a Grand Prize, was made your exhibit by the International Jury at this Exposition.

A Diploma of Honor was awarded Mrs. Eddy as the founder of Christian Science.

Very sincerely yours,
W. H. TOLMAN,
Commissioner American Section.

The exhibit spoken of in Dr. Tolman's letter was made up largely of Mrs. Eddy's writings.

BISHOPS' LAW UPHELD BY SUPREME COURT

The Supreme Court at Trenton yesterday decided the validity of the Bishops' law regulating the saloon business, by issuing through Justice Hendrickson an alternative writ of mandamus, compelling the Hoboken Common Council to issue an order compelling the screens in front of saloons to be removed on Sundays, so that passersby can see the interiors. The issuing of the alternative writ gives the Hoboken Council the right to demur and show cause why the screens are not ordered down, and the court then will pass on the matter, when it comes up for review.

Justice Hendrickson holds that the functions of Councils in ordering screens down is a matter of public right, and involves the performance of a duty which affects the public generally.

One of the grounds on which this case was fought was that when Council did not order the screens down, that citizens had a remedy in getting the indictment of William O. Lay, the saloonkeeper, whose screens were not removed. The court said to this proposition that the indictment would not furnish the remedy, as even then a public duty had not been performed.

The Supreme Court also granted an alternative writ of mandamus directing the Board of Council of the town of Union to compel by resolution or otherwise the removal of screens from saloons on Sundays, based on the decision in the Hoboken case.

A labor case of importance decided in the opinions handed down yesterday was that reversing the district court of Elizabeth in the suit of Louis Levin against John T. Cosgrove and the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, No. 59. Levin applied for membership in the union, paying the fee of $25 in advance. He was rejected as a member, and sought the return of his fee. The Brotherhood contended that he was given "protection" while his petition for membership in the union was pending, and therefore his fee had been earned. The court decided that the right to labor was granted by the constitution and not by any union, and therefore the union could not exact the fee as a matter of "protection." The fee is ordered returned.

The court overruled the demurrer of Sheriff Kaiser, of Hudson county, to collect fees from the Board of Freeholders for feeding prisoners of the county institutions. This sustains the act of last winter putting the sheriffs on a salary basis, and putting the feeding of the prisoners in the hands of the county, the amounts not to be disbursed in fees to sheriffs.

NO RECOUNT IN SUMMIT.

Democratic Leaders Decide That They Will Not Contest.

Summit, Nov. 12.—The idea of asking for a recount of the votes cast here on election day, because it was believed some of the eleven rejected balots should have been counted by the election boards in the Second district in the First ward and in the Second district of the Second ward, was abandoned at a conference of the Democratic leaders Saturday night. Former City Counsel McKirgan, to whom the matter had been referred, informed those in the conference that so far as the legal aspects of the case were concerned there were sufficient grounds upon which to contest the election, and with good prospects that the courts would sustain the contention that the First ward ballots should have been counted, as well as those marked with a cross between the words "For" and "Against."

It was doubtful, however, the lawyer believed, whether a sufficient number of these rejected ballots contained the name of James F. Mooney, who was defeated for the office of city clerk by a plurality of seven, or Henry Atterbury, who lost the office of councilman-at-large by eleven votes, to elect either, in the event of the courts ruling in favor of the contestants. After a discussion, in which some of the leaders made a determined effort to have a recount, a majority of those in the conference decided to abandon the contest.

GOVERNOR-ELECT TALKS POLITICS WITH FAGAN.

Lakewood, Nov. 12.—Governor-elect John Franklin Fort, accompanied by Mrs. Fort, Miss Fort and Mr. and Mrs. Franklin W. Fort, are at the Laurel House here for a week of rest after the strenuous days of the campaign. They will not leave Lakewood before Thursday of Friday, and the new Executive-to-be will probably go to the Jamestown Exposition shortly after leaving here.

Among those who also spent Sunday at the Laurel House were Mayor Mark M. Fagan, Corporation Attorney George L. Record and Andrew Knox, a member of the Board of Works, all of Jersey City. They spent several hours of their time talking over the campaign with the Governor-elect, and left late yesterday afternoon in Mr. Record's automobile for Jersey City.

Mr. Fort spent Sunday quietly. In the morning he attended the Presbyterian church, and in the afternoon precided over a meeting for men held in Knights of Pythias Hall, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., that meeting being the opening session of the week of prayer. George F. Joly, of Philadelphia, was the principal speaker of the afternoon.

SUIT TO OUST MAYOR IN HUDSON COUNTY.

The Supreme Court handed down a decision yesterday at Trenton dismissing the demurrer filed by Mayor Joseph P. Riordan, of Harrison, Hudson county, in the ouster proceedings brought against him. Some time ago a writ was served upon him to show cause why he should not be removed from office, on the ground that his election was unconstitutional. The Supreme Court will prepare a formal opinion upon this writ, and until it it filed the whole matter remains in doubt.

Riordan was elected last November for a term of two years, and if the writ is upheld Harrison will be without a mayor until next November. The curious part of it is that the mayor cannot discover who it is who is attacking him. He has found out that former Judge Gilbert Collins, who has an extensive corporation practice in Jersey City, is the counsel in the case, although the Attorney General appears as prosecutor, but he has no information as to the identity of the persons behind Mr. Collins.

It is staated that he has incurred the enmity of a large corporation with interests in Harrison and that he suspects it is this company which has instagnated the service of the writ.

FOR CHANCERY REPORTER.

Trenton, Nov. 12.—Mayor Frederick Gnichtel is said to be a candidate for the post of Chancery reporter and special advisory master to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Carroll Robbins. Other Trenton lawyers being spoken of for the place are State Senator Hutchinson and John M. Dickinson.

The place is an extremely profitable one, although it carries a salary of only $500 a year. This salary is for acting as Chancery reporter. In addition, the reporter has the profits from the exclusive sale of the printed reports of the decisions of the Chancery Court. Further, the official, in his capacity as special advisory master, receives fees which aggregate a good-sized sum. The two positions net about $5,000 per year.

Chancellor Magie has the appointment, and it is expected he will fill the place this week.

READ THIS!

From a Prominent New York Newspaper:

"In this hustling, bustling age of ours, where every second has a commercial value, the telephone plays a most important part. Without it the activities of the day would not be possible and business would proceed at the sober pace which characterized it some fifty years ago. And yet although most people will realize the truth of these assertions, few appreciate the enormous void which would be left were the telephone to be suddenly wiped out of existence."

Pennsylvania Railroad

Bulletin.

THE NEW UNION STATION AT WASHINGTON.

All the passenger trains of the Pennsylvania Railroad will enter and depart from the new Union Station at Washington on November 17, 1907, and on the same date the present station at Sixth and B Streets will be closed to traffic.

The date is singularly fitting. In 1807 both wings of the Capitol were completed, and now a century later a building even larger is opened for a great public utility, which did not exist at that time.

The railroad terminal facilities at Washington have been inadequate for years, particularly at inauguration periods and on the assemblage of other large gatherings at the Capital. Their improvement was imperative and so it has come about that, by the combined effort of the railroads and the United States Government, one of the largest and unquestionably the handsomest railroad station in the world is now provided not only for the convenience of the citizens of the United States, but as a notable architectural addition to the great public building of the Capital City. It is a monumental edifice and a worthy type of the future structures, which will make Washington the municipal beauty spot of the world.

The station including the Concourse is longer than the Capitol and nearly as wide. The waiting room is larger than the hall of the House of Representatives. Their concourse, which is the train lobby, is longer than the interior of the Capitol building, if it were one continuous hall, and half as wide. It is the largest building ever constructed for a like purpose.

Within this great structure there is every convenience the traveler can desire, so grouped about the central hall as to serve his purpose to the best advantage.

The lofty arched entrances face a plaza as large as an ordinary city park, which will be laid out as a plaza and adorned with shubbery and fountains.

The trackage is sufficient for all demands upon it and as the entrance to and exit from the trains are spearated, the confusion and jostling of hurrying crowds moving in opposite directions will be obviated.

The bigness of the station is impressive; its utilities obvious.

SAGE OF PRINCETON AFTER BRE'R RABBITT

The opening of the season for rabbits was hailed by none at Princeton with more joy than by ex-President Cleveland. Disregarding the reports current that he is confined to his bed and attended by a corps of doctors and nurses, the ex-President donned his brown corduroy hunting costume yesterday and went in quest of game. He rose early, and, accompanied by his son Richard, and C. R. Priest, of Princeton, drove out to Woodside, the estate of W. G. McFarland at Rocky Hill, a distance of four miles from Princeton.

Mr. McFarland was waiting for his guests, and the party immediately proceeded to hunt over the 300-acre shooting preserve, which is a part of the estate. It was a hard day for rabbits, quail, and woodcock in the vicinity, as Mr. Cleveland is still a crack shot, and Richard Cleveland has been handling guns almost since he could walk. The preserve is full of game, and afforded excellent sport for the hunters. At about 1 o'clock the reports of guns ceased and the party returned to Mr. McFarland's residence for luncheon. After an hour's rest they went out again and the shooting resumed. By 4 o'clock enough game had been bagged to satisfy any sportsman, and Mr. Cleveland started back for Princeton, arriving at Westland shortly before dark.

Mr. Cleveland looked much better than she has for some time, and declared that he had enjoyed the trip thoroughly. Some of the quail which fell before the ex-President's gun were served at dinner. Mr. Cleveland intends to take another shooting trip in the near future, probably going to Rosedale.

Trolley Car Bumps a Brick Wagon.

A westbound trolley car filled with motormen and conductors bound for the car-barns at Dunellen, collided with one of David Hand's brick wagons on West Front street, opposite the residence of A. E. Hoagland, at 5 o'clock this morning. The front of the car and the wagon, which was loaded with brick, were damaged slightly. Both were able to proceed. At the time of the accident it was dark and the motorman did not see the wagon until too close to avoid a collision.

DEMOCRATS WILL ABIDE BY ELECTION RETURNS

At a meeting of the New Jersey Democratic State Committee, held at Jersey City yesterday, it was decided not to ask for a recount of the vote cast on November 5, but to accept the plurality announced for J. Franklin Fort as final.

The members present were Robert S. Hudspeth, chairman; Charles J. Gallagher, of Mercer; David Crater, of Monmouth; Peter Egenolf, of Union; Samuel Iredell, of Cumberland; Charles Rogers, of Ocean; William H. Davis, of Camden; Louis Braun, of Passaic, and W. A. Faunce, of Atlantic. Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., the Democratic candidate, was present by invitation. James R. Nugent, of Essex, did not appear, and it was said that his absence was due to the fact that the executive committee of the Hudson county committee was waiting in an anteroom to call him to account for charges of treachery he is said to have made against Democrats of Jersey City.

James Hennessy, chairman of the executive committee, was non-committal on the subject, but he smilingly said that he would be very much pleased to have a talk with Mr. Nugent on the subject, and would also like to discuss charges of treachery that had been made against Democrats in other sections of the State in previous elections. The committee met behind closed doors, but it was said that Mr. Katzenbach took no part in the discussion, though he was an attentive listener. Mr. Katzenbach was introduced to P. J. Griffin, or Hoboken, who assured him that there had been no treachery in that city.

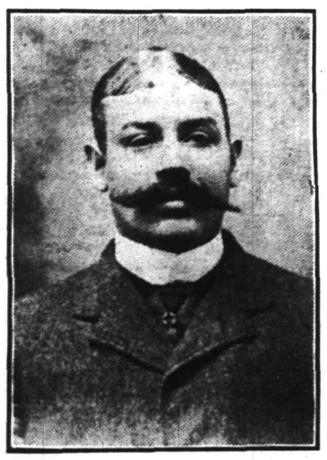
"I have no charges to make against any one," said Mr. Katzenbach, "either of treachery or fraud in the campaign just closed."

The decision of the State Committee was based upon figures presented by Michael I. Fagan, city clerk of Jersey City. He submitted statements of previous elections, showing that Charles C. Black, a Hudson county man who ran for Governor three years ago, only received a plurality of about 7,000, while James Seymour of Essex, who ran six years ago, received less than Black's vote. Mr. Fagan's returns showed that Katzenbach received 23,022 votes in Jersey City, and that this was only exceeded by James F. Fielder, a Jersey City lawyer, who was the candidate for State Senator, and Joseph P. Tumulty, who headed the Assembly ticket. After the matter had been fully discussed, the committee decided that it would not ask for a recount.

MT. ZION YOUNG MEN ORGANIZE CHURCH CLUB

In celebration of the anniversary of his birthday, Rev. Edwin B. Maynard summoned the young men of the Mount Zion A. M. E. church to his home on North avenue last night and brought about the formation of a club to further the work of the congregation. The organization will be known as Maynard's Young Men's Progressive Club and will have for its particular object, the raising of funds for payment on the parsonage property recently acquired by the church.

Following a short talk by Mr. Maynard in which he outlined his idea in having an auxiliary club of young men organized, the following officers were elected: President, Spencer



Rev. E. B. Maynard.

Kelly; vice-president, Charles Jefferson; secretary, Edward Blair; assistant secretary, Preston Clay; treasurer, John Jones; honorary chairman, Edwin B. Maynard. For the present the club will meet at Mr. Maynard's home but within a short time it will have a club room at the church.

During the transaction of business it was decided to hold an oyster supper and lecture at the church on Thursday night, November 21, under the club's auspices. The lecture will be on "Prison Work" and is to be given by William F. Richards, of this city.

The young men on the membership list are Spencer Kelly, Walter Johnson, Charles Jefferson, Omer Thompson, Alfred White, Benjamin Dyett, John Jones, Oliver Floyd, Preston Clay, Edward Blair, Andrew Rogers and Alex Stills.

THE HALL OF FAME.

Richard Mansfield had long cherished a plan of establishing a chain of English inns throughout this country, with plain furnishings and good plain food.

Henry Graves, who died the other day in Chicago, was the oldest settler in the city. He arrived at Chicago from Ashtabula, O., on July 15, 1831. No resident of Chicago now living was there then.

Deacon Daniel S. Cooper of the First Baptist church, New Haven, Conn., was presented with a purse of $100 recently in honor of his eighty-eighth birthday and fifty-first year as a deacon of the church.

Mark Twain was among the many thousands who visited the Lusitania at New York. In bidding adieu to the officer who showed him over the ship he observed, "I'll have to tell Noah all about this when I meet him."

E. J. Lupson, parish clerk of Yarmouth, England, who has completed forty-four years' service, has attended 12,000 weddings at the parish church and has been absent from church only three times out of nearly 2,300 Sundays. He has given away more than 1,200 brides.

Iowa's millionaire philanthropist, Abraham Slimmer, of Waverly, who has given more than $500,000 to benevolent institutions and also large sums to needy individuals, recently toured the State incognito distributing money among persons in want and seeking institutions worthy of aid.

The Marquis of Stafford, who recently celebrated his nineteenth birthday, is heir to the most extensive domain, if not the largest rent roll, enjoyed by any subject of King Edward. More than a million acres in England and Scotland are under the lordship of his father, the Duke of Sutherland.

Dr. Allan Ross Diefendorff, an alienist who testified in the Harry Thaw trial, has resigned from the medical staff of the Connecticut Hospital for the Insane at Middletown, Conn., and has accepted a position as lecturer on insanity at Yale and hereafter will make his residence in New Haven.

Thomas Hill, a Lawrenceville (N. J.) farmer, has trained a bull to run a treadmill that pumps water, churns butter and does all of that kind of work. The bull, Hills says, beats a windmill or gasoline engine "all to pieces," and the work prevents him from doing damage with his horns.

At Rick Island, Ill., recently Frederick Weyerhauser, the St. Paul lumber merchant, celebrated with his wife their golden wedding in the presence of 109 descendants. When Weyerhauser married he was a day laborer. Now he is the largest individual owner of standing timber in the United States. He is supposed to be worth over $100,000,000.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Do so well today that you need not long for tomorrow.

How important some little things seem to some men!

The trouble with forbearance of a fool's follies is that he takes your forbearance for encouragement.

History is to the effect that men's sins always find them out, but men continue to bet that they won't.

When a man gets up in the world people want to down him. When he gets down in the world people want to help him.

There is a time in the life of a female baby when you are not expected to take off your hat to it in the streets. At what age does the child expect it—at ten, fourteen or sixteen?—Atchison Globe.

PITH AND POINT.

Eternal gratitude is eternal slavery.

Silence oftener means offense than consent.

Are you as active in paying a bill as you are in collecting one due you?

About the worst advice that can be biven some people is, "Use your own judgment."

You think you would do better than the other fellow if you had a chance, but would you?

This butting in has its bad features but it's a pity some men's friends don't butt in oftener than they do.—Atchison Globe.

A Seat of Many Ills.

When the specialist to whom they had taken their sixteen-year-old daughter on account of what seemed to be a case of incipient melancholia diagnosed the case as one of eye strain and ordered prompt treatment from an oculist, the parents of a young New York girl were astonished. Eye strain seemed as remote from melancholia as would corns on the feet. Their astonishment was proportionately increased when after a few treatments and acquiring glasses the child showed noticeable improvement.

Latter day medical science traces to eye strain many ills which seem so remote from the eyes that formerly physicians never thought of establishing a connection between them. Sick headache, nervousness, melancholia, insomnia, are but a few which have of late been laid to the door of weak eyes, the proper treatment having been neglected.

Nervous diseases of the nature of St. Vitus' dance are now thought to originate frequently in eye trouble. The weak eyes blink incessantly, and this leads to a general contortion of the facial muscles, which grows on the subject through constant repetition.—Exchange.

TALES THEY TELL.

Every renter of flats in Des Moines, Ia., is required to sign an agreement not to cook onions or cabbage in the rooms.

Immediately following the wedding ceremony, a Kansas bride read all of her old love letters to her wedding guests.

A rat ran up the leg of Policeman Mallett's trousers in St. Louis, and in trying to dislodge the rodent the officer was thrown into the muddy street and his uniform spoiled.

A woman living on a farm near Hokah, Minn., hearing a noise in her chicken yard, fired a shotgun at random in the darkness. Next morning she found in the yard a pocketbook containing $900.

A man living in a Chicago suburb who was troubled with his cow straying away painted his telephone number plainly on the cow, and when she wanders too far away some one who finds a strange cow on his premises calls up the owner.

THE ROYAL BOX.

The king and queen of Portugal have their birthdays on the same day.

The Duchess Vera of Wurttemberg is fond of lizards, especially chameleons. She has some uninque specimens, which exhibit an intelligence that surprises all her friends.

Princess Eitel Frederick, the kaiser's daughter-in-law, is extremely fond of monkeys, and at Potsdam she has a house for them containing no fewer than fourteen. The kaiser does not hesitate to protest, for he considers it a foolish waste of money.

Princess Fedora of Sleswick-Holstein, the youngest sister of the German empress, has a romantic history, having declined all offers of marriage since the tragic death of her fiance, Duke Frederick of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, who, while in command of a torpedo boat, perished in the Baltic with the entire crew.

TRAIN AND TRACK.

Juvisy, on the outskirts of Paris, will soon possess the largest railway station in the world.

The first railroad in Morocco was opened some months ago. It was built by a German company to haul stone from a quarry to tidewater and is only about one and a quarter miles long.

The recent advance of shillings a ton in the price of coal in England means an addition of over 8,000,000 to British railways in yearly operating expenses. British railways use about 12,000,000 tons a year for their locomotives alone.

In the last year the Pennsylvania Railroad company has purchased about 20,000 cats, from two to six, to put in each freight house on the various lines to destroy rats and mice. The freight agents are instructed to provide a quart a milk a day for each cat.

"Does your husband sleep sound?" asked Mrs. Cobbs in the course of a call upon Mrs. Dobbs.

"Sound?" responded Mrs. Dobbs. "Well, I should say so! I don't believe you or anybody else ever heard such sound. It's enough to stop an alarm clock!"—London Express.

"He's one of the most stupid bores I ever met."

"And yet he seems to have accumulated money. Fortune appears to have knocked at his door"—

"I don't believe she merely knocked; she must have marched right in."—London Tit-Bits.

Mr. Barnes, American

A Sequel to MR. BARNES OF NEW YORK

COPYRIGHT, 1907, DODD MEAD & CO. N.Y.

Then he hurriedly slings a field glass over his shoulder; puts one or two little trinkets, mementoes of his lost love, in his pocket; takes his valise with the articles it happens to contain, jamming all open spaces full of cartridges for his revolvers, and brings it downstairs with him.

Marina stands in the hallway with her husband. To Barnes, as he wrings her hand, she whispers: "Remember, a dead man cannot take Enid from that barbarous home of mine. Therefore, guard your own life."

They step out on the porch. Some moving lights are at the landing place and they hear the swash of sweeps and the cries of the Italian crew as they warp their fishing vessel up to the platform.

"Here' I'll go down with you and see you on board and your craft shipshape," remarks Anstruther. "Let me carry that rifle of yours."

"Come!" says Barnes, to whom every minute seems an hour, and hurries down the path; but as Edwin follows, Marina's white arms twine round him close, tight and clinging as if they couldn't let him go.

"Don't fear for me, you trembling dear," whispers her husband, kissing the excited face. "I'll be back soon."

At the landing, Barnes finds he has quite a little to do paying the Italian fishermen to remain on shore as Graham is getting their stores and water properly arranged on the craft. Of this Anstruther now takes charge, but though he works with a will, it is almost half an hour before the young naval officer pronounces the fishing vessel shipshape in case of heavy weather.

Then the young English officer leads the American aside and says, with the craft of a seaman: "Under this present breeze, if those devils you're in pursuit of want to make their island quickly, they'll be compelled to strike its northwest coast somewhere near Porto. Graham will know how to steer the course. I'd go with you, but—"

"But your first duty is here to protect your wife."

"You think these devils haven't all gone away; that there is still danger for her?"

"Yes, keep a sharp eye on your loved one. That was my error," moans Burton. "I left Enid out of my sight for only a few minutes."

"Then good-by," says the sailor hurriedly, and wringing Barnes' hand, strides up the path to Lady Chartris' villa.

Then Burton stepping on board the fishing lugger, which is big enough to make the run to Corsica, they would immediately throw off their moorings to the little landing stage, but the Italian padrone of the craft, noting Barnes' haste seems great and his need extreme, steps up and demands additional recompense from the American milord for his vessel, declaring he will not let her go until he has more money; that his ship may be wrecked at sea and he has no insurance.

"Pay him!" mutters Barnes impatiently, and hands his pocketbook to Graham.

But payment takes some time, the light of the lantern not being very good and the Italian inspecting every bill to see its value and again greedily imploring for more money, stating that his men will desert him if he gives them not speedy employment.

"Give him what he asks," cries Burton again; then pauses and mutters: "Good God!" and springs on shore; For a shout has rung out through the night air from Lady Chartris' villa and there is terror in it, and he knows it is the voice of the stout-nerved Anstruther, who would not give cry unless some sudden and uncanny despair had come upon him.

The American rushes up the path and a few steps from the door almost runs against Edwin. In the darkness the frenzied men seize each other, for Anstruther is now as frantic as himself. Recognizing him, Barnes asks: "What's the matter?"

"By heaven! Another blow in the dark! My wife has gone also!"

"Marina? Impossible! You have looked the grounds over? You have searched the house?"

"Here's a note from her, left in her chamber, begging me to forgive her, saying it is to save my life."

"My God, what horrible plot is it that has bereft us both in a moment?" asks Barnes. "If she had only told you the contents of that devilish letter."

The two are in the hall together, in their anguish, their voices ring out loudly. A frightened-eyed, short-skirted creature runs to them, and tremblingly asks: "Did you want Marina's knock-out letter very much, Barnsey? The last part of it?"

"It was perhaps Enid's life, perhaps the life of Edwin's bride."

"Well, then, I—I—oh, forgive me! I lied to you. I've got the letter—the last part of it; I was going to sell it to you for marrons glaces—I'll get it for you. It is tucked in my lucky stocking for fear ma'll see it. It said something about murder! I'll—oh, don't look at me so awful!"

Maud flies upstairs and a moment later dashes back bringing the portion of the epistle.

As they try to decipher its cramped foreign hand, Lady Chartris, coming out wildly from her chamber, for now she fears she will be abducted herself, and is half crazy with fright, suddenly, looking over their shoulders, cries, half shrieking: "Oh, heavens, Cipriano's writing!"

"You are sure?"

"I fear, I fear! I've got three love notes from him—this looks quite like his hand."

And the astounded and dismayed widow wrings her hands, her face pallid with jealous chagrin.

"This is the most crafty, subtle and satanic plot against your married happiness, Edwin," whispers Barnes. "As near as I can make out, this devilish missive says that Marina must desert you, her accursed English husband; then they will spare your life. If she remains with you, your fate will be hers. Your safety from death is offered as a bribe to your young wife if she deserts your bed and leaves herself open to the stilletos of these devils. If she stays with you and clings to you, you will be assassinated, even in her arms."

"Then the wife of my heart has left me fearing as the attack upon my sister's liberty has been successful their efforts against my life will be equally so," shudders Edwin; next cries out almost angrily: "She was mad not to trust me."

"Marina knew you wouldn't let her go if she did," suggests Burton more calmly.

But the other breaks in: "She is helpless in that devil's hands, who's tricked us both. This man means to kill her!"

"Not as you fear," mutters Barnes. "Cipriano doubtless came here, in his mind some infamous plot against your life and hers, but now I think the same crazy passion for Marina that was in his brother has entered him. Never did your wife look more lovely than when she so nobly offered to go to Corsica to try and bring your sister back."

"Bring my sister back? That's why she's gone," asserts Anstruther. "Do you suppose any other consideration would have induced her to leave me? She thinks her word is potent among the friends of her childhood in Bocognano. Marina is going to Corsica, Barnes, and I go with you. The vessel is there—come!" Anstruther's rapid strides are carrying him to the door of the hallway, but the American's voice stays him.

"She will never get to Corsica," says Barnes, sadly.

"Why not?"

"Why not? Danella longs for her. Couldn't you see his uncanny passion gradually growing as he looked upon her loveliness? No, she will not be permitted to get very far away from him. Don't you suppose his emissaries are alert now—the man with the scar over his eye that delivered this dastard note to her?" Then the tone of the American changes; he says very solemnly: "And yet, I think you can thank God that the passion of the lover has entered this devil's heart and taken the passion of the assassin from it; for otherwise, with his thugs about her, your wife would now be dead. You stay here and try and find Marina. As for me, my duty is to go to that island and if she is living, to bring back my bride—if she is dead, avenge her!" continues Burton.

"That is my duty here, rescue or avenge Marina!" cries the Englishman.

Barnes leaves his brother-in-law arming himself and making ready to go out of the villa in pursuit of the loved one he has lost, and hurries down the path to the water. The darkness is now so great he can scarce discern the little fishing vessel still tied up to the landing stage. He rapidly springs over her low freeboard, and calls: "Get under way!" The alert Graham is already at her helm; her big lateen sails are hoisted flapping in the soft air, and a moment later under a smart breeze the little craft is gliding toward the entrance of the Bay of Villefranche.

The illuminations of Nice fade away in the darkness of the night to the American upon the deck of the fishing vessel, which now, under a fresh and increasing breeze, is bounding through the water.

Graham is still at the wheel, Barnes pacing the little deck of the silent craft. His steely eyes peer into the gloomy blank ahead of him. His life seems a blank also. To-night he had expected the lovelit eyes of his fairy bride to be beside him on a honeymoon cruise. Now! He smites his hands despairingly together.

He turns to Graham at the wheel and asks: "How long before we reach Corsica?"

"With this breeze, I dinna think before early to-morrow."

"You are carrying all the sail possible?"

"Every cloth she has."

Barnes turns to step into the cabin.

"You're going down to try and get a wee bit o' sleep, I ha' hopes," remarks the Scotch mate sympathetically.

"Sleep?" the American laughs as if in mockery of the idea, yet goes below and tries to force his mind to the common sense of this strange abduction.

The next morning with the first rays of the sun, Barnes is on deck again, peering toward the east, and before him is a blue haze that Graham, who is again at the wheel, says is Corsica.

But now some few feet from the stem of the little vessel, a figure that has been crouching under the low bul-

"Pleased to See You Aboard, Ma'am."

warks, rises, half shrouded by the sea fog, before him. After two glances to make his astounded eyes believe, he gasps: "Marina!"

For the wife of Anstruther, with some wraps thrown over her fete costume of the night before, stands before him, the fresh breeze twining the garments about her figure till she seems risen from the mists of the morning.

"My God, why have you come here?"

"To try and save your wife, the sister of my husband!" cries the Corsican girl. "You couldn't have done it. You know too little of this curious island and its customs. To you, a stranger, every one of that jealous, suspicious race would be an enemy—to me, born with them—the name of my family adored—some will be friends. You would surely fail, I may succeed!"

"You should have told your husband." The American's voice is almost stern.

"I dared not! Edwin would not have let me go. My darling values me too highly to risk a hair of my head on such a venture," answers the Corsican bride proudly.

"Why didn't you tell me when I came on board? You lay here unsheltered all night save by the bulwarks," utters Burton sympathetically.

"The night was warm; the wind, though strong, was balmy. Besides, I waited till you were near enough to Corsica not to turn back from it, even to restore me to my husband. There is the island. There I will help you find your bride. Enid shall not die nor suffer because she is the sister of my husband or because she is your wife."

"Great Scott, you're the Marina of old!" he exclaims in astonished admiration.

"Of course I am," she answers buoyantly. "My darling husband is for the moment safe. Their letter which branded me as traitor to my race for marrying Edwin, says if I desert my husband they will spare him. Corsicans keep their devilish promises. These assassins will think I have abandoned the husband of my heart and will spare him till I return to again nestle in his arms and shield him with my very life against these fiends of the blood feud."

GOLF.

There seems to be an increasing tendency to take more notice of the misinterpretations of the rules of golf, especially where they figure in championship tournaments. Especial attention has been called to an incident which occurred during the Olympic Cup competition at Euclid last July, for the reason that different decisions have been handed down by two prominent governing bodies.

It appears that a member of the metropolitan team got into difficulties while playing the eleventh hole. He teed out for a loss of two strokes, but failed to tee immediately behind the trouble, with the result that his right to do so was questioned. As opinions differ regarding a player's rights under the rule, an effort was made to secure an official ruling, and the following query was made to the secretary of the United States Golf Association:

"In a medal play competition A.'s ball lands just in the rear of some bushes which skirt the boundary of the course at a certain hole. Not being able to find a good place immediately behind the bushes to tee his ball, A. brings the ball out into the fair green, a considerable distance—not, however nearer the hole—tees it, adds two strokes to his score and proceeds with his play. There were some trees, as well as the clump of bushes, between the place where A.'s ball lay and the hole. This, of course, was not the case when the ball was teed out on the fair green. Were two strokes the proper penalty for A.'s action, or should it have been disqualification? The answer was as follows:

"Rule 10, medal play, covers your case. If it was impossible to tee behind the place where the ball lay it should have been teed as near as possible thereto, but not nearer the hole." As this reply did not seem to answer the question satisfactorily, the inquiry was submitted to the rules of golf committee of St. Andrews. The latter recently replied:

"The player was disqualified for not conforming to Rule 10 (special rules for stroke competitions)." Rule 10 reads as follows: "A ball may be lifted from any place under penalty of two strokes. A ball so lifted shall be teed if possible behind the place where it lay; if it be impossible to tee the ball behind the place where it lay it shall be teed as near as possible thereto, but not nearer the hole. The penalty for a breach of this rule shall be disqualification."

The use of the word "behind" would indicate that the intent of the rule is to keep the trouble from which the ball is lifted between the player and the hole. Many claim that it is an incongruity to construe the rule to mean that a player may tee the lifted ball any place he pleases, so long as the place is not nearer the hole.

FOOTBALL.

Yale will follow its usual custom and stay at Auburndale the day before the Harvard game, coming from there direct to the stadium, while Princeton will go to Norfolk, Conn., three days this week in preparation for the Yale game.

Alonzo Stagg's University of Chicago eleven is generally conceded the championship of the West, owing to its victory over Minnesota.

M. J. Thompson will officiate at more football games this season than any other former player. He has been selected as referee for every important contest. This is a flattering tribute to the old Georgetown tackle.

Secret practice has been instituted at Harvard and new plays and formations are being tried out to spring against Yale one week from Saturday.

Kelley, the fast sprinter, is proving a genuine find for Williams, and is playing a dashing game at half back.

Coach Cole of Nebraska University is very much annoyed because the athletic board did not schedule a game with Carlisle this season.

The list of football mishaps is assuming the usual proportions. It must be stated in defense of the game that the six fatalities occurred in games where the players were little more than boys, or did not understand the rules.

Michigan is sure of a big crowd when Pennsylvania visits Ann Arbor. Western football enthusiasts will travel many miles to see an Eastern team play in the West.

Gallagher, Penn's left guard, has had some international football experience this fall. He has played against a Pole, Irshman, German and Indian.

Coach Yost of Michigan says if Penn lost every game this season it would give the best team in the world a battle worth walking miles to witness. "They are fighters, and Mike Murphy will get them ready for us, and we will have a game at Ann Arbor that will be the peer of anything in that line this season."

BOWLING TOURNEY PLANS

Executive Committee Arranges Details for Big Pin Hitting Contest.

NINE TEAMS TO COMPETE.

City's Crack Rollers to Act As Captains of Each Five Men—Prize Money Aggregates $115.

Definite plans for the beginning of the proposed five-man team bowling tourney on Campbell's alleys were arranged last night when the executive committee met and received the entry list. Forty-five bowlers signified their intention of participating by paying the extrance fee and they will be divided into nine teams, each headed by a captain. The acknowledged best bowlers in the city were selected as these leaders as follows: Chief P. S. Kiely, Francis J. Blatz, John J. Campbell, Edward Britton, Louis Skelley, Chas. F. Meyer, Jr., Harry Radin, V. W. Nash, Jr., and Frank Willett.

The teams will be picked Thursday night and the opening games will take place next Tuesday. Each team will roll twenty-four games and it is probable the contest will run until February, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday being designated as "tourney" nights. The teams will be suitably named, the titles already suggested being the Grants, the Bismarcks, Washingtons, Garibaldis, Lincolns, Wallaces, Hassan, Ben Alis, Brian Borus and the Pansies.

Prize money to be divided among the winners will aggregate $115 and it has been portioned as follows: First team prize $40, second team prize $30, third team prize $20, fourth team prize $10; first individual average prize $7, second individual average prize $5, third individual average prize $3. The entire contest will be governed by the American Bowling Club rules and disputes that may arise at any time will be settled by the executive committee composed of Chief Kiely, Judge William N. Runyan, Thomas M. Muir, Charles W. Runyon, Harry Van Emburgh and William Schaub, the last named of Raritan. The bowlers who will participate, outside of the captains, are the following:

LOCAL Y.M.C.A. TO SEND DELEGATES TO CONVENTION

Joining the ranks of the delegates who will go to Washington next week from every branch of the Young Men's Christian Association in the land, five members of the local association will attend the thirty-sixth international convention of North American associations to commence Friday, November 22, and last until the following Tuesday. Those who will go from this city are William D. Murray, George M. Rittenhouse, A. B. Beers, Physical Director George L. Listman and Boys' Secretary Kenneth Robbie.

The headquarters of the convention will be in the association building there, and the day sessions are to be held in the D. A. R. Continental Hall, and the evening sessions in Convention Hall. An exceptionally strong group of speakers, including men of prominence in public affairs, will deal with social and civic themes, emphasizing association fundamentals with especial reference to their relation to future growth. Among the speakers are Hon. James Bryce, British ambassador to the United States; Hon. William Jennings Bryan; Gov. R. B. Glenn, of North Carolina; Rev. Charles Cuthbert Hall, of New York; Bishop C. H. Brent, of Manila; Bishop William F. McDowell, of Chicago, and Robert E. Speer, of New York. Great Britain, France, Russia, China, Japan, India, Australia, the Philippines, and several South American countries will send delegates to the convention.

CITY JOTTINGS.

—Mr. and Mrs. William G. Tunison, of West Second street, are parents of a boy born to them Sunday morning.

—After an absence of several weeks Russell Stewart has returned to his position in charge of the soda fountain at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

—The annual harvest home will be held at Muhlenberg Hospital on Thursday, November 21. Donations of fruits, vegetables, groceries, money, etc., will be acceptably received.

Y.M.C.A. FIRST TEAM WON

Defeated Second Team 48-42 in Hardest Game of the Season.

THE BUSINESS MEN WIN, 24-12.

Defeat First Baptist Church Five By Superior Team Work and Good Passing.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball five met their strongest opponents of the season in their game with the second team of the association on the gymnasium floor last night. It was either team's game till the final whistle, when the regulars were three baskets to the good, winning 48-42. Between the halves of this game, which was witnessed by a big gallery of enthusiasts, the business men's team of the association played the First Baptist church five, winning easily by a score of 24-12.

The first game proved the two teams well matched and was fast basketball both halves. Each man in the game has had opportunity to learn the game of the man against him, and the play was close because each man knew practically what to expect in his opponent's game. The regular five led by two points at the end of the first half, but in the second period of play, first one team and then the other was in the lead, the regulars finally winning out by three baskets. In shooting goals from the floor, Gilmore did the best work for the first team, caging the ball nine times. Martin, of the second team, scored six baskets from the floor, guarding especially well in the second half, though Collier, his opponent, also scored six baskets. Just previous to the game, last year's basketball five got together and elected Ted Gavett, who plays guard, captain of the team for the coming year. The summaries follow:

First Team—Rumsey lf; Loizeaux, Gilmore, rf; Collier, c; Gilmore, Loizeaux, rg; Gavett, Miner, lg.

Second Team—Templin, lg; Bentley, rf; Martin, c; Utzinger, rg; Jacot, lg.

Goals from the floor: Gilmore, 9; Collier, 6; Martin, 6; Bentley, 4; Rumsey, 3; Loizeaux, 3; Templin, 3; Jacot, 3; Utzinger, 2. Goals from fouls: Collier, 5; Jacot, 4; Templin. Each side was awarded a point for being fouled while shooting a basket. Busines Men, 24; Baptist Church, 12.

The business men's five used nine men in their game against the First Baptist church team, winning 24-12. The church players will have a team in the church league, soon to be formed among the local churches. They played well individually, but were inferior in team work and at times careless in passing. The summaries:

Business Men—Dunning, A. J. Spicer, lf; C. W. Spicer, Doane, rf; Shaw, Listman, c; Jarvis, lf; Stevens, Clark, rg.

Baptist Church—Lee Manning, lf; Douglass, rf; Jerry Manning, c; Woodland, lf; Guion Fountain, rg.

Goals from the floor: Doane, 3; Douglass, 3; Listman, 2; A. J. Spicer, 2; C. W. Spicer, 2; Lee Manning, 2; Shaw. Goals from fouls: Shaw, 3; Douglass, 2. The business men's team was awarded one point for being fouled while shooting a basket.

Charles B. Morse acted as referee and Bert Leggett was timer in both games. The halves were 20 minutes in both games.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis K. Anderson, who were recently married here, are now in Washington. Before returning home next week they will visit Jamestown.

John P. Powers, formerly engaged in the drug business on Somerset street and later in New Brunswick, has given up his position at the latter place preparatory to locating elsewhere.

Mrs. S. C. Black and her daughter, Miss Black, of Charleston, S. C., who have spent the past season with Mrs. Black's daughter, Mrs. Horace M. Fisher, of Sycamore avenue, have returned to their home.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Emmons, of Prospect place, who recently returned from a sojourn at Belmar, brought with them as a souvenir, one of the sand bags used as a ballast for a balloon in the recent balloon race across the country. The souvenir is prized highly.

The Yale freshmen will furnish two good candidates next year in Church and Hyde, their half an centre. Both men are big and show speed and willingness. Greenough promises to develop into a strong guard next season.

One of the best ground gainers for Williams is the outside kick, with which many of the larger colleges have done practically nothing this season.

SACRIFICE FOR FREEDOM

S. S Swackhamer Lauds the American Soldier to the G. A. R. Men.

AT LOCAL VETERANS' MEETING.

Captain Wiliam Hand Chairman of the Affair—Refreshments Are Served.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., entertained its friends last night, when a special program of music, vocal and instrumental, together with an excellent address by former Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer, combined to make the occasion one of much enjoyment. There was a large gathering of people, including a delegation of veterans from Ulric Dahlgren Post, G. A. R., and the Women's Relief Corps, of Elizabeth.

Captain William Hand was chairman of the committee on entertainment, and took charge of the program. There was vocal and instrumental selections by Mrs. John Manley and Miss May Smith, and duets by Mrs. Manley and Captain William C. Smith, who sang "Marching Through Georgia," with much enthusiasm, the audience joining in the chorus.

The principal feature of the evening was the patriotic address by Mr. Swackhamer, and after the entertainment the members of the Women's Relief Corps served refreshments. A social time followed.

Mr. Swackhamer spoke as follows:

"Life is a stern reality; Death is a dark and universal fact which cannot be abolished. The world is a vast theatre on which we play our part and pass on. The individual grows old and dies but the race is ever young. America is the Garden of the Gods, tilled by the greatest people that the sun shines upon. The Anglo-Saxon race, speaking the English language under the American flag will one day absorb the human family and dominate the world.

"The force that presses behind the advancing lines of civilization; the power that moves the world is not physical, but moral. It has its seat in the mind, in the will, in the conscience. The strength of this government is not in its army and navy, its guns and magazines, and military science, but in the moral and spiritual quality of its citizenship. The fathers of the Republic were not animated by the love of glory but were thirsting for civil and religious liberty. For this the Pilgrim fathers sailed the wintry sea and faced the pitiless tomahawk and the savage wilderness. For this the Sage of Monticello penned the immortal declaration; for this Franklin pleaded with matchless eloquence at the Court of France; for this Washington and the Continental farmers endured the agonies of Valley Forge and left their bloody footprints on the ice and snows of New Jersey; for this the boys of '61 marched proudly away under the flaunting flags keeping time to the grand, wild music of war; marched down the streets of the great cities, through the towns and across the prairies, down to the fields of glory, to do ond to die for the eternal right.

"We are told that among the finest monuments of Europe is that which is found in the beautiful Valley of Lucerne, to the memory of the Swiss Guard who fell around Louis the 16th, when the furious mob had stormed his palace. Placed in a niche of the limestone cliff of which it forms a part, a lion pierced with a spear still holds in his death grip the shield on which are carved the arms of the Bourbon. Few works of art, it is said, are more majestic or more fully show the hand of the master; but it is courage only that it honors, and you wonder at the power which has so ennobled and dignified it when the great idea of patriotism is wanting. The Swiss whom it commemorates simply did bravely the work which they had contracted to do when the subjects of the King, whose bread they had eaten and whose wine they had drank, deserted him. But the Union soldier was brave for a nobler cause and was actuated by a higher motive.

"A man may be courgeous and face the lightnings of war when animated by the hope of glory or the thirst for imperial sway. Hannibal could brave the icy solitudes and the slippery perils of the Alps and venture so close to the eternal city as to cast his sword over her walls, for he knew that to conquer the Mistress of the World would place his name high on the scroll of fame. Caesar could endure the fatigues of the march and smile at the battle axe on the ragged edge of war, for he was allured by the glitter of the Diadem. Alexander could suffer what it meant to conquer the world for the price of universal dominion, and Bonaparte could defy the allied armies of Europe and court grim death in a thousand hideous forms so long as he

DEFEATED NOMINEE TO DEFEATED ASPIRANT

In the scrap book of one hundred campaigns treasured by James E. Martine was added today a letter from Frank S. Katzenbach, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate, who thanks the "farmer-orator" for his magnificent and magnanimous efforts during his campaign. The scrap book in questions contains tributes to Jim written at various times by William Jennings Bryan, Samuel J. Randall, Charles Towne, James Smith, Jr., William C. Whitney and countless other sages of Jeffersonian principles.

"I shall never be able to repay you," says Mr. Katzenbach, "for the splendid work you did for me in the recent campaign. It is my earnest wish that I may have the honor of being your life-long friend. No man was more zealous in my behalf and I deeply appreciate the self-sacrificing work you did for me."

Mr. Katzenbach defeated Mr. Martine for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination but be it added, James E. Martine took off his coat and did his utmost to help the party's nominee.

WEDDING ENDS COURTSHIP BEGUN IN FATHERLAND

A friendship began in Germany several months ago and which quickly ripened into love, resulted yesterday in the marriage of John Klassen, a well known machinist, and Miss Selma Schorler, who came from the Fatherland last week. The ceremony was performed at 4 o'clock in the afternoon by Justice Hezekiah Hand at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Schempp, of Manning avenue. Only a few intimate friends were in attendance but last night a large gathering tendered the couple a reception.

Mr. Klassen and Mr. Schempp recently took a trip to Germany for a visit to their old home and while there they met Miss Schorler at a social gathering in their honor. She was then planning a trip to America and a comparison of notes showed that she and the Plainfielders had engaged passage on the same steamer. The three became fast friends and when the boat reached New York last week Miss Schorler and Klassen had agreed that it was to meet again in the near future.

The young woman came to Plainfield yesterday to visit other friends and was met by Klassen. They suddenly made up their minds to be married at once and the arrangements were quickly made. Mr. and Mrs. Schempp acted as the attendants. For the present Mr. and Mrs. Klassen will reside on Manning avenue. The groom was at one time employed by Henry Haurand and more recently was a motorman on the local trolley lines.

CONGRESS MEETING OF LOCAL CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS.

The November congress meeting of the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union will be held at the Congregational church tomorrow night. Members of the lookout committees of the various societies of the union will attend and Christian Endeavorers from local churches will be at the meeting. The Girls' Mission Club of the church will serve a supper in the church parlors at 6:30.

The religious program of the evening will begin at 7 o'clock, when an hour will be devoted to open discussion of the work in this city. From 8 to 8:30 there will be a discussion of the work of the various lookout committees, in charge of Fred Lounsbury, Jr., chairman of the lookout committee of the local union. From 8:30 to 9, the formal session of the congress will be held, which will conclude the services.

Supporting a College Student.

For the purpose of raising funds with which to support a young woman student a sale of fancy and useful articles was held yesterday and today at the Seventh-Day Baptist church. Miss Ethel Titsworth was the chairman of the committee in charge and in connection with the sale an informal tea was held. Liberal patronage was accorded and it is believed that a satisfactory sum will be realized.

Baraca Class Meets.

The monthly business meeting of the Baraca Class of Faith chapel was held last night. Routine business was transacted with despatch, and the meeting adjourned early to enable all the members to attend the anniversary services at the West End Tabernacle.

It Snowed This Morning.

What seemed to be a light, cold drizzle swept the faces of pedestrians early this morning. Soon after midnight a drizzle changed to snow.

PLUMS IN LEGISLATURE

Hillery, Senate President; Thompson House Speaker; Robbins Senate Leader.

FIGHT FOR THE CLERKSHIP.

Parker and Jefferies Two Leaders for Job—Democrats Conspicuous By Their Absence.

The State House at Trenton was the scene of a large gathering of political leaders, workers and members-elect of the next Legislature yesterday. The principal topic of talk was the probable organization of the two houses when the members convene on Tuesday, January 14. The air was full of deals, so far as the Assembly is concerned, but there was nothing definite arranged. Matters were put in such shape, however, that a week from today the names of the next Assembly officials will probably be settled upon.

The Republican leaders have not confessed their selections, but the most prominent of the managers were supposed to have their favorites.

William P. Martin came down with a number of the Assemblymen from Essex. Among them were Chairman Dalrymple, of the Republican County Committee, Austin Colgate and Henry Hines. They were understood to voice the sentiments of the entire delegation of eleven in favor of Martin for Speaker. Martin himself prefers to be the Republican leader on the floor, but will make the fight for Speaker if his friends desire him to run.

John R. Moxon, one of Union county's trio, is also a candidate for the Speakership but the story that United States Senator John Kean is behind him is not true.

John D. Prince, of Passaic, who is one of the professors of Columbia University, is a candidate, and is being boomed by Vivian M. Lewis. Prince seems to have a number of members, and was recognized as a leading candidate for Speaker. Professor Henry D. Thompson, of Princeton University, who is an Assemblyman from Mercer county, was moving around, working for the Speakership also. He has written letters asking for votes to all the members of the House of Assembly and it is believed that he is the "slate" candidate.

Thompson is said to be the personal choice for Speaker of United States Senator Frank O. Briggs. Frank B. Jess, of Camden, is understood to be the favorite for Speaker of many of the South Jersey members. There was a good deal of talk about a deal between Jess and Prince by which Pince is to be Speaker and Jess leader of the House. The latest announcement for Speaker was made late yesterday afternoon. The situation so far as Prince is concerned was complicated somewhat toward night by the entrance of James Parker, of Passaic, as a candidate for clerk. Parker has been the clerk through a great many Republican administrations and is popular.

It is a rule that the Speaker and clerk cannot come from the same county. Should Parker be successful, therefore, Prince would have to abandon the ambition to be Speaker, and vice versa. If Parker is not made clerk, the post will probably go to Upton S. Jefferies, editor of "The Camden Post-Telegram." Jefferies was the assistant clerk for many years when the Republicans were in control of the House.

Senator Thomas J. Hillery, of Morris, seems to be slated for President of the Senate, and Senator Samuel N. Robbins, of Burlington, seems to be slated for Republican leader on the floor of the Senate, without any opposition.

There were very few Democrats around the corridors yesterday, and they had no idea as to the part they would take in the organization. The investigation of the State House, which was slated for today, has been postponed, and will probably be continued during Thanksgiving week.

Luncheon for Miss Brokaw.

In honor of Miss Elsie Brokaw, whose marriage to Arthur Dunham Stout will be celebrated at the First Baptist church, Tuesday night, November 26, a luncheon was given at the Park Club, yesterday. Those present were Miss Elsie Brokaw, Miss Sarah Mae Howell, Miss Marion McCutcheon, Miss Mary Valiant, Miss Stout, Mrs. Clifford W. McGee, Mrs. A. B. Laing, Mrs. Edward T. GALA TIME FOR K. OF C.

Novel Features Mark Their Annual Entertainment and Reception.

REV. FATHER BOGAN "SPEAKS."

Phonograph Tells What Priest Has to Say On "Columbianism" —Unique Refreshments.

Replete with novel features, the members of Watchung Council, No. 552, Knights of Columbus, and their women friends enjoyed the annual entertainment and reception in the council rooms last night. The affair was in charge of Lecturer Andrew E. Kenney and was one of the most successful the organization has ever conducted.

In the early part of the evening, a program was rendered comprising Irish folk songs and a lecture on their origin by Mrs. Helen O'Donnell, accompanied on the piano by Mr. O'Donnell; songs in Italian and English by Signor Antonio, of New York, and Chinese songs sung to American airs by Lee Wong, also of New York. All of the numbers were highly enjoyable and each one of the contributors was encored repeatedly.

Another novel feature was an address on "Columbianism" by Rev. Father Bogan, only it was given from a phonograph record supposed to have been taken while the reverend father was talking in his sleep. Father Bogan was in attendance at the gathering and was called upon to speak. By prearrangement he declared that he had been taking a nap when Mr. Kenney called at the rectory to ask him to make an address and he had not had time to prepare it. The phonograph was then turned on and the speech was given just the same. Another record gave the audience an idea of the oratory Arthur H. Cannon uses in exhorting the members to turn out to meetings and advance the cause of the order. Both records were remarkably clear and very good all through.

With the program concluded, refreshments of chop suey and green tea, prepared by Lee Wong, who conducts a chop suey establishment on Seventh avenue, New York, were served. They were brought out by five members of the council dressed as Chinamen and so complete was their "take-off" that nearly everyone believed them to be genuine Orientals. The waiters were John J. Carty, J. J. Varley, Wilbur Shaefer, M. J. Monohan and A. E. LaPorte.

The affair was arranged by Mr. Kenney and the original features were the result of his planning. He was assisted in carrying them out by the five waiters, who acted as committeemen.

WEST END TABERNACLE OBSERVES ANNIVERSARY.

The first anniversary of the West End Tabernacle was celebrated last night with a program of special interest. The service was largely attended by workers and members of the tabernacle. The program was opened with an instrumental selection by an orchestra. F. C. Lounsbury, Jr., read the Scriptures, after which Frank Stewart briefly described the first cottage prayer-meeting which was the commencement of the religious work in the West End of the city.

The original building, fifteen feet square, was the subject of a few remarks by U. B. Crane and Gilbert Van Nest. "Obstacles in the Way," was the subject assigned to Percy Cannon. Robert Lee spoke on "Removal," and Miss Florence Scriven presented the report of the Ladies' Aid Society, showing what it has accomplished during the year.

This program was followed by a social hour, during which Miss Anna Bowden recited "What the Little Girl Said;" a vocal solo by William Hartley; a recitation, "Poppy Land Express," by Miss Grace Taylor; vocal solo, "The Solo I Heard One Sunday Morn," by Miss Florence Scriven. The entertainment concluded with the presentation of birthday bags and the reciting of appropriate verses by Miss Helen Taylor. Refreshments were served by a committee of women.

Miss Bessie Reynolds Weds.

Miss Bessie Reynolds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Reynolds, of Church street, and Remson Reid, of Elizabeth, were married in New York yesterday, after which they returned to this city, where they will remain for a short time. Later they will reside in New York. The bride is well known here, formerly being employed in a West Front street store.

'WIRELESS WIZARD' TALKS

Lee DeForest Explains Wireless Telegraphy and Telephony.

AT CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH.

The Pacific Squadron Will Use De-Forest's System, Which the Government Has Officially Adopted.

Modern wireless communication, as recently perfected by scientists through the means of wireless telegraphy and wireless telephony, was explained and discussed by Lee De Forest, who spoke before the Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue church last night. Mr. De Forest, who is a graduate of Sheffield scientific school, of Yale, was a classmate with L. R. Hopton, member of the executive committee of the local club, in the class of 1896. Since then he has been making a special study of wireless communication, and has perfected a wireless telegraph system slightly different from Marconi's. He has also done much work in the field of wireless telephony, and has finally perfected this means of carrying the human voice without wires.

Introduced by his classmate, L. R. Hopton, Mr. De Forest spoke at the start of the work he has been doing during recent years. "When Admiral Bob Evans' fleet leaves next month to go to the Pacific," he said, "sixteen battleships and twenty-four of the torpedo boats and auxiliaries will be equipped for wireless communication. Each of the big ships will have both telegraph and telephone instruments, and the smaller boats will be fitted with the telephone instruments. The apparatus for telephoning will be on the bridge of the flagship, so that "Fighting Bob" Evans, admiral of the fleet, can communicate with all the vessels by telephone, without raising his voice any louder than you would to talk to a friend in Albany by the long distance wires."

The system installed by the government on the war ships is that on which Mr. De Forest has been working, and the speaker explained in full his work along the lines of wireless communication. The theory of wireless telegraphy is antithetically different from that of wireless telephony in that in telegraphing there is no electrical disturbance in the air except that made in the transmission of the message, while in telephoning without wires the ether is in wave motion all the time with a powerful electrical current, which is influenced to more or less intensity by the voice vibrations.

In wireless telegraphy, the electrical spark is used to form electric waves, and is produced by an alternating current. The initial voltage is about 110 volts at the key, and this is made much greater—up to 25,000 volts—by conduction coils. The current waves, formed by the dots and dashes of the Morse code on an electrically connected telegraph key, are led aloft on a pole from the spark cap and radiate in all directions with the speed of light. The receiving sation is equipped with a so-called coherer, which gives off the messages in Morse code from the electrical wave disturbance in the ether. The sound waves, travelling in all directions, are long vertically and the pole is used to gather as great a part of the wave as possible. If a short shaft were used, there would probably not be as complete a transmission of the message.

In wireless telephony, ether is again used as the transmitting element, but in this case there is a continuous succession of sparks, produced by an alternating current, sending wave vibrations at the rate of 200,000 vibrations a second in every direction. Thus the ether is constantly disturbed by the electrical wave vibrations. In telephony as in telegraphy, a complimentary current travels along the ground or the surface of the water, as well as in the air. A resistence point is formed in this surface current, and a microphone telephone receiver is there installed. The receiver is more sensitive than for wire transmission, and oscillating carbons, the nucleus of the transmission by the voice, are used, varying in their arc according to the adjustment of the condensing coil. At the present stage of science Mr. De Forest has perfected the instrument for use in a ten mile radius so that individual voices may be recognized as by telephone and music may be clearly transmitted. At the present rate of perfection, he forecasts that within a year there will probably be perfected transmission over a radius of fifty miles.

The system perfected by Mr. De Forest was used by the Japanese war vessels in the Russian war with great success, and has been accepted by the United States government and installed on the nation's war vessels. The government has adapted a wave length of 425 metres for use in trans-

TROLLEY CAR AND BRICK WAGON COLLIDE

Main line trolley car, No. 23, bound east on West Front street at 5:15 this morning, collided with a brick wagon from the Hand yard at Waynewood place. Michael Mendel, the driver of the vehicle, was pitched headlong into the street but escaped with a badly wrenched arm. Patrolman James Flatley, who was riding on the front platform of the car on his way to police headquarters, was thrown against the vestibule and emerged from the wreckage with several slight lacerations. The motorman, Solomon Starks, was severely shaken up but was not hurt.

Blame for the accident has not been placed as both Hendel and Starks disclaim responsibility. The motorman claims the rig was proceeding ahead of him and turned suddenly to cross the tracks when he was directly upon it. Mendel denies attempting to cross the tracks and says that the car came upon him without any warning and he did not know of its nearness until the crash occurred.

The wagon was badly damaged but the horses escaped injury.

"SPIEL" WALSH SHOT BY CARELESS HUNTER

Starting out early Monday morning for a three days' hunting trip in Hunterdon county, a party of five Plainfielders had their sport interrupted by a serious accident that befell one of them yesterday and in which he had a narrow escape from death.

While the five men were tramping through the woods about four miles from Flemington, John J. Walsh, of Madison avenue, better known among his friends as "Spiel," walked toward a clump of bushes believing it sheltered some game. He was in the act of poking into the twigs and leaves when a strange hunter on the other side shot at a rabbit directly toward him. The greater part of the shot entered Walsh's legs and abdomen and he dropped to the ground in a helpless condition.

The other members of the party, Sergeant Herbert Overbaugh, of the local police force; William Feiring, Frank Day and Harry Hicks, were some distance away when the accident occurred but they hurried up in response to the calls of the hunter who had fired the gun. They improvised a stretcher and took turns in carrying Walsh to the nearest farm house. Arriving there a wagon was pressed into service to get him to Flemington and the journew yas continued to this city by train.

Walsh is one of the most enthusiastic hunters and anglers in the city and enjoys hunting trips at all times of the year, especially at the opening of the rabbit season. The party of five had planned an extensive junket but decided to return home as soon as Walsh became disabled. For the short time they were out they bagged fifty rabbits and a quantity of other game.

The careless hunter who caused the trouble hurried away in the excitement and his name was not procured.

J. E. Martine An Appraiser.

Justice Swayzey has appointed James E. Martine, J. Williams Crane and J. M. Meeker to appraise lands affected by the Baltusrol Railroad Company. The first meeting will be held on November 15 at Baltusrol. The land in question is to be taken by the company for the operation of the road and Justice Swayzey has named three commissioners to determine the value of the property.

Pupil's Bike Stolen.

Somebody "pinched" a bicycle belonging to one of the city high school boys from the school building yesterday morning during school hours. The loss was discovered when school was dismissed at 1 o'clock, and the police have been informed, but there are as yet no clues to the disappearance. The wheel was a Barnes' "White Flyer," with black frame and white rims.

Designed Association Building.

Evarts Tracy, of this city, of the well-known firm of architects of Tracy & Swartout, was the architects for the handsome new Y. M. C. A. building nearly completed at Stamford, Conn. The cost of the structure is $175,000 and is considered one of the most attractive of the many association buildings.

How's This?

John Schenck, of the borough, has returned from a successful hunting trip in Hunterdon county. He captured a fine specimen of the silver gray fox and in addition he and three companions shot forty rabbits.

ELWOOD R. HALL DIES IN MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL.

Elwood R. Hall, who was employed for several years as drug clerk by Howard Leggett when he conducted a pharmacy in the Y. M. C. A. building, died this morning in Muhlenberg Hospital. He was taken ill with pneumonia three weeks ago and at first underwent treatment in New York, where he had been working as a member of the staff of the Pharmaceutical Era, a trade paper. Becoming dissatisfied with the progress of his case he asked to be brought to Plainfield so that he might enter the hospital here. Complications followed, however, and the physicians were unable to save his life.

Mr. Hall was twenty-six years old and had a host of friends in this city. He was experienced in the drug business and at various times had managed stores in Newark, Montclair and Englewood. He came to Plainfield in 1900 and after he left the city he always retained his interest in local affairs. He was an admirer of Muhlenberg Hospital and its conduct and it was through his knowledge of the institution that he wished to be taken to it.

The body will be taken to Middletown, N. Y., where the funeral will be held at the home of his sister after which burial will be made at Monroe, N. Y., his native town.

Preparing to Install Switches.

The most difficult job in connection with the double tracking on East Front street will be that of installing the new double switch at Front and Somerset streets. The gang now employed there is getting everything in readiness to cut in the new device some night after the cars have ceased running. It may be necessary to transfer passengers at the corner for one day pending the arrangement of the several tracks.

Miss Finch Gives a Luncheon.

Miss Finch, of Park avenue, gave a delightful luncheon at the Plainfield Country Club, yesterday, in honor of Miss Mary Holly, Miss Marjorie Fleming and Miss May Waring. It was a chrysanthemum luncheon, the lavender and yellow flower being used with good effect. Mrs. George W. Elkins, of Philadelphia, chaperoned the party of young people which numbered twenty-two.

New Winter Suits

When you meet a man socially it is his personality, his appearance; his manner and his entertaining ability that count. But if you are to enter into close business association with him you naturally look at his past record—see the sort of stuff that's really in him.

Same way with suits. If you were to wear it only a few times, almost any stylish looking suit would do. But if you're buying a suit to be a part of you for the winter, see that the right stuff is there.

Our $15 Winter suits will hold their fine fit and elegant shape until the end of the season and longer, because they are Watson made — which means careful hand-tailoring and more painstaking detail work than goes into any other suits sold in Newark at anywhere near equal money.

Other remarkable values at $10, $12, $18, $20, $22 and $25.

Shoes! just think of all the good things you'd like to have combined in shoes, and you'll fidn them in the Walkover at $3.50 and $4.

THEBAUD'S BUTLER HAS $13,500 IN STOCKS.

Definitely Established that Bjorlin Shot Boy and Killed Himself—Young Man Recovering.

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 13.—That John Bjorlin, butler, employed by Paul G. Thebaud, deliberately committed suicide, and that he died owning $13,500, were developments yesterday of the mysterious shooting by the butler last Sunday morning of Paul G. Thebaud, Jr., sixteen years old. Young Thebaud was in slightly improved condition yesterday, but is not considered entirely out of danger.

When he recovered consciousness he first asked what had happened to him, and he was told that he had walked in his sleep and fallen against a table, cutting his head.

Coroner Squire found yesterday in Bjorlin's room a note written by the butler, evidently just before he killed himself. It reads:

"I have $13,500 in stocks. Give them to my family. My clothing and other effects give to charity or the poor.—John."

It has been established beyond doubt that Bjorlin shot the boy.

New Trolley Cars Coming.

The Public Service Corporation is completing plans whereby the local trolley lines are to be equipped with new and up-to date cars. This news will be especially welcome to the patrons of the Somerset and Fourth street and Netherwood lines. If the company is permitted to establish a "Y" at Watchung avenue and Fourth street, it will operate the Netherwood and Arlington avenue lines together, giving greatly improved service.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

FOOTBALL.

Tibbott, the fast Princeton half back, is making a big bid for the All America, and frequently seemingly does the work of three men on the field.

For the third time in three successive years Maine and Bates have battled to a draw for the State championship, the final score of the annual contest this year being 6 to 6. The two elevens are well matched.

The city high school football team will play the Laurenceville Preparatory school eleven on Hope Common tomorrow afternoon. The game is called at 3:30.

The elevens of the city and borough high schools will meet on Hope Common Saturday afternoon to decide the local scholastic football championship. The teams met about three weeks ago and the game resulted in a tie, 5-5, though the borough eleven had the advantage. Since then, both elevens have made good showing in their games. Under the coaching of Mr. Phelps, of the borough high school, the North Plainfielders have learned a lot of new plays and the team is running smoothly. The city eleven has made several strengthening changes in line-up and has steadied up, showing great improvement in the offensive and defensive plays.

Dill Starr is making good at half back for Harvard, although he is still a far better quarter back, and will likely so remain.

Michigan is not using any special tricks, but is saving them all for the Quakers. Two Pennsylvania scouts witnessed the Michigan-Vanderbilt game, but they were poorly rewarded for their pains.

The Carlisle Indians have two hard games remaining, Minnesota, which was badly beaten by the redskins, will be tackled next Saturday, and Chicago will follow the next week. This will round out the hardest schedule of any team this season.

Greene of Pennsylvania is in very poor physical condition. He has been roughly handled in the recent games and has played when hardly fit. He will rest for a couple of days after today's game.

Princeton's back field looks to be one of the best in the country and if the line holds in the game with Yale it will give the Blue plenty of trouble.

Yale is suffering from no lack of coaching material. As many as eleven coaches are on the field at the same time, one for each player on the 'Varsity team.

Coach Williams of Minnesota has his charges practice passing a water-soaked ball so as to be prepared for a rainy day.

Applications of the undergraduates in Yale for tickets for the Yale Princeton football game on November 16 call for a total of about 20,000 seats, which with 7,500 applied for by Princeton will leave less than 7,000 for graduates of Yale. The stands have been increased, making a total of over 37,000.

The great kickers of the year so far are Coy of Yale and Hollenback of Pennsylvania. Burr has not yet shown the form of his first two seasons at Cambridge.

Dr. H. L. Williams, the Minnesota coach, has a 165-pound man at centre, and says this is heavy enough.

The absence of former substitutes and ex-second team men has been noted on Soldiers' Field, Cambridge, this fall.

Lieut. Graves says he doubts whether West Point will have the services of Pullen even for the Navy game. The loss of Pullen is a heavy blow for West Point.

GOLF.

Marshall Whitlatch won the championship of the Dyker Meadow Golf Club, this week, defeating W. B. Rhett in the 36 hole final round by 6 up and 5 to play. Although the turf was soft in places the winner played well, getting an 83 in the morning and a 79 in the afternoon. The last nine holes were reeled off in 36, and had Whitlatch not missed a short put on the home green he would have returned a 35 and equalled the course record. Whitlatch also won the Crowell Hadden, Jr., memorial cup on Saturday, defeating H. P. Matthews 2 up and 1 to play in the final round.

At a recent meeting the members of the Roseville Golf Club voted to disband. Play on the links, however, will be continued throughout the present month, and the chances are that before many weeks have passed a majority of the members will affiliate themselves with other nearby organizations, such as the Arsdale Golf Club, the Forest Hill Field Club, the Essex County Country Club and the Baltusrol Golf Club.

During the last few years a number of fairly strong players were developed at Roseville, and only a few weeks ago the club won the team championship of the East Jersey Golf League. Two years ago the property occupied by the club was purchased by a realty company, and it is understood now that building operations are to begin in earnest in the near future. The clubhouse and two lots on which it stands are owned by a few members of the club. The house was so constructed that it can readily be changed into a dwelling.

The Golf Association of Philadelphia has announced the individual records for the season. In the competition for the Philadelphia Cup H. B. McFarland wins, with a total of 49 points, while Dr. Simon Carr comes next, with 39, and W. T. West third, with 29. Points have been scored by seventy-odd players in this contest. For the Philadelphia Cup, among the women Mrs. Caleb F. Fox easily leads, with a total of 55½ points. Miss Frances C. Griscom is second, with 39, and Mrs. R. H. Barlow third, with 30 points. Miss Winchester wins the Suburban trophy, with 21 points, leading Miss Townsend, who gets second place, with 18.

Now that the British clubs are discountenancing the use of a rope to hold back a tournament gallery possibly the American committees may also stop the dangerous practice. At the recent Sunningdale tournament the stewards were armed with red flags. "By means of a courteous word of direction to the enthusiastic crowd to keep to the right or to the left in order to leave plenty of scope for the shots of the players," states the Field, "they were much more successful in regulating the haphazard movements of the crowd than if the old and somewhat crude expedient of a long rope carried by caddies had been in use." The same account reports that the players had sometimes occasion to complain of the undue encroachment of inconsiderate spectators on the tees. To avoid this annoyance the Britishers should have the teeing grounds fenced on three sides by posts and rope, the method that prevails at American championships.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Season after season for the past twenty-one years Denman Thompson's "The Old Homestead" has been welcomed by thousands of theatregoers all over the country. The story of "The Old Homestead" appeals strikingly to the best element of one's nature, while the play itself is of so peculiar a quality as to defy all rules of dramatic art. It has no villain, no melodramatic hero, no lovers; and yet the interest is maintained from beginning to end by real people, who touch the heart with genuine pathos, bubbling humor and homely wit. The lights and shadows, smiles and tears, joys and sorrows in "The Old Homestead" are all genuine, and the world is better for such a play. It appeals to all classes, rich and poor, high and lowly, and preaches a sermon as wholesome and inspiring as that which falls from the lips of the most eloquent divine. "The Old Homestead" will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night.

The great college play, "At Yale," which made such a succession of hits last season, is again on the road, better and bigger than ever. In this new play Jules Murry, of New York, has the triumph of the season. It is full of dash and the charm that surges around any story of young, exultant, healthy workers. Dick Secley and his college friends are enough to keep any audience in a state of delight for any evening in the year. The play will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre next Tuesday night.

If you have pain in the back, dizziness and nervousness, it's time to act and no time to experiment. These are all symptoms of kidney trouble, and you should seek a remedy which is known to cure the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use. No need to experiment. It has cured many stubborn cases in Plainfield. Follow the advice of a Plainfield citizen and be cured yourself.

A. C. Lazzi, stone-cutter and carver, of 214 East Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For several years I was troubled by a distressing backache and pains in the region of the kidneys. My head also ached severely and the secretions from the kidneys were not at all natural. I tried several doctors and some so-called kidney remedies, but none gave me any relief, and as my case became more and more persistent, I became somewhat discouraged because I could find no relief. I saw an advertisement regarding Doan's Kidney Pills and got a supply at Randolph's pharmacy. Soon after taking them my troubles vanished like the mist and since then I have felt stronger and better in every way."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

could crown and uncrown kings and bear the sceptre of unlimited sway over the powers and possibilities of Christiandom.

"But the American soldier, with no thirst for glory, with no expectation of renown, with no promise of power or preferment, laid down his life that the great cause of human freedom might live.

"Standing on the threshold of the 20th century if I could catch the trumpet of fame and summon all the patriots and heroes and martyrs that have died in the world's great cause, I believe that the American soldier would rise above them all.. Compared with his invincible courage and heroic self-sacrifice, what was the valor of Caesar's 10th legion, or the prowess of Cromwell's invincible Ironsides, or the fortitude of Napoleon's old guard. It is well to recall the glories of the past; it is well to exult in the possessions of the present, but it is of supreme importance that we duly consider the obligations of the present and the possibilities of the future.

"If we are true to the trust reposed in us, we will instil into the minds of the youth the principles of patriotism and teach them the value of the government under which they live, and inspire them with such a reverence for the flag that if need be, they would lay down their lives in its defense. LaTour, the great French soldier, was the hero of many battles, but remained by his own choice in the ranks. Napoleon gave him a sword and the official title 'First among the Grenadiers of France.' When he was killed the Emperor ordered his heart to be entrusted to the keeping of his regiment, that his name should be called at every roll call, and that his next comrade should make answer, 'Dead, upon the field of honor.' To the keeping of the great American people have been entrusted the names of many heroes and when those names are caled we proudly and lovingly answer, 'Dead, upon the field of honor.'"

JULIA SAUERACHER'S FAMILY SCRAP DISTURBS COUNCILMAN.

A report of a drunken fight on Somerset street was made by Borough Councilman Edward Smith at the North Plainfield police headquarters late last night. Marshals Pope and Kiernan, sent out to investigate, found Julia Saueracher and her husband, Charles Saueracher, engaged in a punching and hair-pulling encounter at the New Jersey Bottling Company's place, near the bridge. The husband is employed there, and Julia went to see him last night, after wetting her temper with sundry drinks. The argument was started promptly on her arrival, and when the police arrived, the pair were actively engaged in trying to throw each other downstairs. It took both officers to get the combatants apart, and the double arrest followed, Marshal Keller, escorting Julia to the lock-up, while Pope followed with her husband.

This morning Charles furnished $5 bail, so that he could go back to work, but his wife is spending the day in a cell, awaiting their joint hearing before Borough Recorder Dolliver at the session of court tonight. Julia's name appears at frequent intervals on the police blotter and her appetite for drink is believed to be the cause of the family scrap.

ADDRESS BY NATURALIST

Prof. Chapman's Lecture on Bird Life in the Bahamas Well Illustrated.

SOME BEAUTIFUL PICTURES.

Curator of the American Museum of Natural History Interests Congregational Church Men's Club.

Before the Men's Club of the Congregational church and a large assemblage of friends, Prof. Frank M. Chapman, of the American Museum of Natural History, New York, gave a highly instructive illustrated lecture last night on "Bird Life in the Bahamas Islands." Aside from the extensive knowledge gained concerning some of the birds that inhabit those islands, the views were among the finest ever seen here.

During the first part of his lecture, Prof. Chapman described briefly the islands, the views were among the finest ever seen here.

During the first part of his lecture, Prof. Chapman described briefly the islands and their formation of coral reef which are devoid in the first instance of life. Then the sea birds appear and they are followed by land bird. The islands have no beach and are desolate in the first stages. The appearance of the sea birds and land birds are followed by various kinds of vegetation. The birds that inhabit the islands have no competition for existence and are not molested.

The speaker said that in the colony of birds there are thirty-one species found. It was learned, he said, that several years ago the negro spongers preyed on the sea gulls, but in later years they have left them alone. In his efforts to make a special study of the Flamingo, of which there are seven species, Prof. Chapman showed probably the most remarkable series of views yet seen. For ten days he lived in the marshy, swamp land within a blind where he was permitted to take numerous pictures and learn in detail the habits of these wonderful birds.

The views showed the bird from the first day of birth until it became full sized and the lecture described the peculiar habits of caring and feeding the young, together with the different calls employed by the parent bird to keep in touch with her young. Realizing the value of the bird, Prof. Chapman was instrumental in securing the adoption of a law in the Bahamas that protects the Flamingo between April and October. The rest of the year the bird is able to take care of itself.

Additional pleasure was afforded by the several soprano solos by Miss Bertha vanNuis Willis, soloist at the First M. E. church. She sang three numbers and was accompanied by Miss Mae Batchelor.

mitting messages between the ships of the navy. This means that all vessels are equipped with instruments especially constructed to receive messages by these wave lengths. This in a measure insures secrecy, but the instruments may be adjusted to other wave lengths at option, so that the admiral may communicate to a single vessel a message unintelligible to the other commanders. This makes a sort of "private wire," and the adjustment change may be made in a short time.

Wireless telephony is of especial value to the smaller vessels, such as torpedo boats, where there is no signal mast for flags. It is a quicker means of transmission, because the messages are received "verbally," and not in the Morse code. There is no perfected way of insuring privacy in this telephoning, though the wave length may be varied as in telegraphing, and this bringing of the carbons closer together attunes the instruments to various wave lengths.

At the conclusion of the talk, which Mr. De Forest illustrated with numerous blackboard diagrams, many of those present took advantage of the speaker's offer to answer questions about the two systems of communication. There were about a hundred in the audience, and later refreshments consisting of sandwiches, cake and coffee, were served. Mrs. Henry Johnson, of the Park Club, catered.

He Was Examined.

Francois Arago, the great French scientist, was a precocious youth. He was prepared for the rigid examinations of the Ecole Polytechnique before he was seventeen years old. The examiner was almost brutal in his manner toward the young candidates. A favorite companion of Arago was badly frightened at his severe questions and failed to pass the examination. At length Arago's turn came.

"Young man," said the examiner sternly, "you are probably as ignorant as your companion. I advise you to go and complete your studies before you risk this examination."

"Monsieur," replied the boy, "timidity was all that prevented my companion from passing. He knew much more than he seemed to know."

"Timidity!" exclaimed the examiner. "The excuse of fools! Perhaps you are timid also."

"Far from it," returned Arago shortly.

"Take care. It would be wise to spare yourself the disgrace of being rejected!"

"The disgrace for me would lie in not being examined," said the young candidate proudly.

Arago's solution of the problems set before him was so accurate and so brilliant that at last his examiner sprang from his chair and, throwing his arms about the boy's neck in delight, exclaimed:

"Bravo! If you are not received into the Ecole Polytechnique, no one will be admitted."

And Arago then began a career which added greatly to the stock of human knowledge.

Knew Him.

"Gaiboy's new stenographer is a fine one, but she'll never do for him."

"Why, isn't she quick enough?"

"Yes, but her hair is black and his wife's is yellow."—Judge.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN.

The borough street committee has been very busy during the past few weeks, and the roads are fast getting in fine shape for the winter months. Cross walks and culverts have been laid all through the borough and the work in this pepartment is practically completed for the winter. The work of putting a surface coat of macadam on North avenue, along the north side, has been commenced This resurfacing was done on the south side of the street during the summer. The gutters on the south side of the street are being cleaned out for teh winter. At Lincoln avenue and Front street, the work of changing the grade will soon be begun, and the width of the sidewalks on Lincoln avenue will be changed before the snow flies, the narrow walks being replaced by broader ones. The seats in the borough park have been taken away for the winter.

A party of nearly thirty friends "dropped in on" Miss Lizzie Liable at her home on Summit avenue last night. The occasion was her birthday anniversary, and the evening was spent with games and music. The affffair, which proved a complete surprise, was arranged by Miss Pearl Dodwell. Miss Liable received many presents, brought by her unexpected guests.

Borough hunters have been scouring the country round about after cotton tals this week, and many of the local "would be's" are telling stories of good hunting, varying the number of the rabbits shot according to the credulity of the listener button-holed. James Hills claims he holds the palms among the gunners, and if his stories of twenty-six rabbits shot since the season opened will stand the test, he should be quite an object of fear to the cottontail families back in the country.

C. Henry Dudwell, secretary of Washington Camp, P. O. S. of A., has recently been appointed district president over all the camps in Middlesex county. The local camp will meet tomorrow night in Jr. O. U. A. M. hall and at this time there will be initiation of three candidates. The degree team from Camp 43 at Somerville will be present and will carry on the initiation.

Miss May Ross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ross, who has been confined to her home with scarlet fever, is now out of quarantine, and is convalescing rapidly.

LARGE RED APPLE IF YOU GUESS HIS NAME

My Uncle Jim's a statesman bold,
Though on election day
He's always left out in the cold—
They never vote his way.
So many men oblivion find
In office holding life!
My Uncle Jim is not that kind,
He's always in the strife.

He's not a meteor rushing swift
To vanish in the air;
Whene'er the country needs a lift
My Uncle Jim's right there.
He's not like those whom people know
A while and then forget.
He started running years ago,
And he is running yet.

The kind of man this country needs
Is he who braves the shock
And stands up for his party creeds
Unyielding as the rock.
Though Uncle Jim has felt the smart
Full oft of fickle fate,
He's still a patriot from the heart
And still a candidate.

ROOSEVELT DEFENDED BY JAMES E. MARTINE

The spectacle of William Jennings Bryan's closest friend and warmest admirer in New Jersey defending President Theodore Roosevelt and his recent course has been of daily occurrence here since election day. It has remained for James E. Martine, the "farmer orator," to take up the cudgels for the Republican President in the bitter assaults made on him by many wealthy cummeters here.

That there was strong feeling against the President among the commuter colony was recognized by County Chairman Frank H. Smith, who did not attempt to conceal the fact that the Republican organization feared the result, particularly in Plainfield, last Tuesday. His forebodings were on good ground, for, while the majority of commuters did not "rebuke" the national administration by rallying to Katzenbach, it is conceded that more than half of them remained away from the polls.

"It is all sheer nonsense to blame Roosevelt for their troubles," said Mr. Martine. The handwriting is on their wall," he added. "'As ye sow, so shall ye reap.' As I have been telling those plutocrats here, they are bringing the temple of prosperity down on their own shoulders, and are cursing the man who has warned them of their danger. Mr. Roosevelt is a Democrat, or tries to be one, but unfortunately he doesn't know it. He is doing just what Bryan advocated, but I don't think he is capable of doing so well. These men must be taught that they cannot juggle with the nation's prosperity without being held to account. I repeat, the fault is theirs and not Roosevelt's."

GOVERNOR APPOINTS MRS. GROVER CLEVELAND

Governor Stokes yesterday appointed distinguished women to represent New Jersey in the Congress of Mothers to be held in Washington, D. C., from March 10 to March 17 next. Foremost among them is Mrs. Grover Cleveland, of Princeton. Her associates are: Mrs. Douglass Robinson, of Orange; Mrs. Harry Dawson, of Newark; Mrs. Caroline B. Alexander, of Bernardsville; Dr. Mary J. Dunlap, of Vineland; Mrs. William P. Brown, of East Orange; Mrs. Elizabeth V. M. Mansell, of Trenton.

The Governor also appointed the following delegates from New Jersey to a conference of representatives of States along the Atlantic seaboard to discuss the development of inland waters from Massachusetts to the Carolinas; Congressman John J. Gardner, of Egg Harbor; Senators Oliver H. Brown, of Monmouth, and Edward S. Lee, of Atlantic; Mayor C. Taylor Rue, of Burlington, and Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr., of Trenton. The conference will be held in Philadelphia next week.

Governor Stokes further appointed yesterday as members of the State Board of Certified Accountants W. Sanders Davies, of East Orange, and George Wilkinson, of Plainfield.

BOARDING HOUSE GEOMETRY.

"A scientific friend of mine has drawn up a boarding house geometry that strikes me as being noteworthy," says a youth with a third-story "front."

Some of his definitions run as follows:

"1. All boarding houses are the same boarding houses.

"2. Boarders in the same boarding house, and on the same floor, are equal to one another in the matter of price, but not in the matter of outlook.

"3. A single room is that which has no parts and no magnitude.

"4. The landlady of a boarding house is a parallelogram; an oblong, angular figure which cannot be described, but is equal to anything.

"5. All the other rooms being taken a single room is said to be a double room.

"Among postulates and propositions the following are worthy of consideration:

"1. A pie may be produced any number of times.

"2. The landlady may be reduced to her lowest terms by a series of propositions.

"3. A bee-line may be made from one boarding house to another.

"4. The clothing of a boarding house bed, although extended indefinitely in both directions, will never meet.

"5. Any two meals at a boarding house are together less than one square meal."—Edwin Tarrisse, in Harper's Weekly.

Fashion in Medicine.

A curious communication has been made to the French Academy of Medicine by Dr. Grimbert, who has a fondness for statistics.

The doctor has been making inquiries, with a view to finding out whether there is a fashion in medicine. He has discovered that the old-fashioned medicines, such as opium, laudanum, iodine and bismuth, are sold in about the same quantities as they have always been.

The sale of leeches has diminished. In 1878 50,000 were sold by a certain number of chemists' shops in Paris, but this year the same shops sold only 12,000.

The glycero phosphates and antipyrins sold 50 per cent. less than they used to and quinine has gone down 25 per cent. As for the newer drugs pyramidon, asperine, etc.—their sale has increased enormously. —Paris despatch in London Express.

FIRE CHIEF WOULD RETIRE.

But Newark Fire Board Holds Up Request of Robert Kiersted, 36 Years on Force.

Chief Robert Kiersted, of the Newark Fire Department, yesterday began a leave of absence, granted to him by the Fire Commissioners, which will not terminate until December 31. He also asked that he be retired on a pension on January 1 next, but the Board took no action on that request, nor will it do so for some time. John B. Oelkers, president of the Fire Board, declares that the commissioners first want to know exactly what is behind the application of Chief Kiersted for retirement before it is acted upon.

Some time ago Battalion Chief McDermit was refused permission by Chief Kiersted to leave the city for a day for reasons which the chief says were, in his judgment, good and sufficient. Subsequently McDermit was granted the leave of absence by Oelkers, the board president.

Later it was announced that Kiersted would retire from the department unless he could be chief in fact as well as in name. Since then Kiersted and Oelkers have not met except at one board meeting. Oelkers says that if the chief did use the language attributed to him charges of insurbordination could be made against the chief, but that he will not make them until he has thoroughly investigated, and may not do so even then.

Chief Kiersted says the McDermit incident did not cause him to determine to apply for retirement, but that he long ago decided to quit the fire fighting business on January 1 next. He has been in the department since 1871 and for the last twenty-two years has been its chief.

PLATT FIGHTS TO END WOMAN'S SUIT.

Senator's Counsel Asks That Papers of Mae Wood Be Kept from Her Lawyers.

Thomas C. Platt, United States Senator, through a representative of Tracy, Boardman & Platt, applied to Judge O'Gorman in the Supreme Court, New York, yesterday for an order directing the papers deposited in the county clerk's office by Joseph Day Lee, as counsel for Mae C. Wood, to remain there.

These papers consist of what purport to be a certificate of the marriage of Miss Wood and Senator Platt, which she declares was solemnized in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, and a letter to her from Mr. Platt in which he admits, according to the plaintiff, her marriage to him.

Senator Platt, in an affidavit, declares that the alleged marriage certificate is "part of a plot and the letter a forgery prepared by the plaintiff to establish a marriage and manufactured by said plaintiff to establish such." He denies that he ever married her or wrote the letter.

Miss Wood's attorneys declared that the papers had been in the possession of the county clerk long enough to be photographed by Mr. Platt's lawyers, and asked that they be returned to them.

BREAK SCHOOL DEADLOCK.

Following Appeal of Orange's Mayor, Board Appoints Principal of Day Street School.

After several months of criticism by the public of the present Orange Board of Education, which has been deferring the completion of needed business, Mayor Isaac Shoenthal, of Orange, last night sent a letter to the warring members directing them to cease their quarreling and attend to the business of the city. The school management had failed to name a principal for one of the city grammar schools located in Day street, and when the schools were reopened in September last the Day street school was not ready for occupancy, and several weeks elapsed before the pupils in the city were enabled to join their classes.

Last night the Board appointed H. W. Maxson principal of the Day street school. Three new members, elected to fill vacancies, broke the deadlock.

DEATH BARELY PARTS THEM.

Long Branch, Nov. 13.—Asa Dennett, for many years a Methodist choir leader in New Brunswick, Barnegat and Long Branch, is dying of paralysis at his home, while his companion of sixty years lies cold in death in an adjoining room.

Mrs. Dennett, who was eighty-one years old, dislocated her hip seven weeks ago. When the aged husband, who is five years his wife's senior, learned that his companion could not live he prayed that he, too, might die at the same time. Mrs. Dennett was a native of Yonkers, N. Y., while her husband is from Maine. Mr. Dennett for years has been a leader in the Simpson Memorial Methodist church of this city.

John J. Lovell Dead.

Elizabeth, Nov. 13.—Union county lost one of its oldest and most esteemed residents in the death Monday of John J. Lovell at Roselle Park. Mr. Lovell was a veteran of the Civil war. He enlisted with the 107th New York Volunteer Infantry and served under General Sherman in the "march to the sea." Mr. Lovell is survived by a wife and three children—Mrs. W. B. Jones, of Bloomington, Ill.; William L. Lovell, of Roselle, and Charles F. Lovell, with whom he made his home.

TO DISCUSS TUBERCULOSIS.

Three Cash Prizes to Be Awarded at Session in Washington Next Year.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 13.—The Governors of twenty-three States and a throng of distinguished scientists from all over the world will gather in Washington next fall to aid in the extermination of tuberculosis. An international congress on tuberculosis has been called to meet on September 21, 1908, and remain in session until October 12.

During the meetings papers will be read and plans discussed for the world-wide eradication of the great white plague. The congress has established an office in Washington nearly a year in advance of the convention, from which literature bearing on the subject is being issued and information may be obtained by those interested.

Three cash prizes of $1,000 each will be offered by the congress for the best exhibits of work done along the lines of prevention and extermination of tuberculosis.

FIRE IN RAILROAD STATION.

Boy Awakens Stirling Agent and Saves Him from Being Burned When Lamp Starts Blaze.

Stirling, Nov. 13.—Charles Lewis, ticket agent at the local station of the Lackawanna Railroad, had a narrow escape from being burned yesterday, when a lamp set fire to the station in which he was asleep. The fourteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Grumler, who live opposite the station, discovered the flames and aroused the agent, who extinguished the flames with several buckets of water.

The fire was started by a lamp melting the solder of the support by which it hung, causing the lamp to fall to the floor and set fire to the woodwork. The damage was slight.

Facing Three Wives, Pleads Guilty.

When Charles S. Walker was arraigned in the Essex county court, in Newark, yesterday for trial on an indictment charging him with bigamy three women were present to testify against him. Each had been married to him and each styled herself his wife. They are Estelle M. Bailey, of Port Murray, N. Y., who was married to him on May 12, 1900, and divorced December 26, 1896; Miss Katherine Sofield, of No. 84 Springfield avenue, Newark, married to him on February 10, 1906, and Miss Selma Eller, of No. 39 Littleton avenue, Newark, married to him January 13 last. It was through the efforts of the latter that he was arrested and indicted. When the case was called he suddenly decided to plead non vult, and November 25 was set as his sentence day.

Forced from Business; Ends Life.

Freehold, Nov. 13.—Because he could no longer make a decent living, on account of the arbitrary advance in the price of milk by the producers, William L. Dey, a milkman, yesterday hanged himself in his hay mow. His body was found dangling from the end of a rope by his wife yesterday morning. Dey was about fifty years old. Recently the price was advanced to such an extent that he could no longer make enough to live upon. This preyed on his mind and he became ill.

CHAPTER XI.

"Beware the Path Ahead of You!"

The American paces the deck more buoyantly; reflection shows him what a prodigious aid Marina's knowledge of her native island, its proud, vengeful race and curious customs, will be to him in his search for his lost bride.

The mists of the morning are slowly rising from the bluff headlands of Cape Rosso; before the vessel's bow rises the old Genoese watch tower that guards the little harbor of Porto, from which is shipped the pine timber of the great Valdoniello forest.

The alert Graham, who has gazed from the stern astounded at the sudden appearance of Mrs. Anstruther on board his craft, leaving the wheel to a jack tar, now comes forward and touching his hat to the lady, says: "Pleased to see you on board, ma'am, though I'm afraid, Mr. Barnes, you'll not think we kept a very good watch on deck. Our eyes were always on the sea, trying to catch sight of the damned pirates." A moment later, he remarks: "With this wind, we can make the coast a wee bit farther to the sou'."

"Then do so!" commands Marina. "Make a landing, if you can, nearly 15 miles below here at Sagone."

"Why?" asked Barnes, some surprise in his tone.

"Sagone by its mountain path is the nearest port to Bocognano. They dare never convey your wife through Ajaccio. By the wild mountain paths they can take Enid to Bocognano unobserved and unquestioned by the wood cutters of the forest glens or the shepherds of the steep pastures of Del Oro."

"You think the Seagull will be at Sagone?"

"I hope so," answers the girl. "That will be proof that they are taking her to Bocognano."

By Barnes' direction Graham immediately alters the course of the vessel further to the south, and they dash down the picturesque coast of the island, whose forest clad mountains run to the very waters of the sea, till they weather the point of Cargese and open the beautiful Gulf of Sagone, now calm as a summer lake.

Here, to the east, in the far recesses of the bay, is a sail gleaming white under the sun that has just risen over the wooded headlands.

Barnes puts his field glasses upon it and for a moment thinks it some fishing craft, but the Scotch mate leaving the wheel to a seaman's hands, springs forward, takes a long look at it; then borrows the American's glasses and runs nimbly up the rigging to the top of the mast.

From his eerie post he calls excitedly: "By St. Andrew, it's the Seagull!"

"Can Enid be on board of her?" is heard in Marina's anxious voice.

"I can ne'er believe it," answers Graham, as he descends to the deck, "for the vessel is anchored."

"For God's sake, get us to the yacht!" commands the American.

But despite every exertion, for the breeze has died with the rising sun, it is another hour before they fan their way near the Seagull. Upon its deck is a solitary man, who frantically screams to them: "A moi, mes amis! Rescue me! Sacre bleu, ze pirate cochons have left me. I am Leboeuf, ze cook!"

"Take heart; we'll board ye, braw Leboeuf!" shouts Graham, and carefully conned by the Scotch mate, the fishing vessel is run alongside of the Seagull. The light swell permits them to spring from one little craft to the other, and in a moment Barnes has assisted Marina onto the yacht's deck.

Here they are met by volatile exclamations and explanations, from Monsieur Leboeuf. "Monsieur Barnes," he cries sympathetically, "ze pirates have carried your bride away. Zey boarded me at ze moment I was placing your supper on ze cabin table last evening. Zen zey gagged me till I could not speak. One—two—three minutes and she came on board in ze blackness. Expecting to meet you, Madame Barnes ran down into ze cabin, and zen—"

"Then?" Barnes' face is set like that of a statue.

"Zen zey locked ze cabin door upon Madame, and though she cry out, pay no more attention to her till zey had got under way. Zen—zen—"

"What next?" Burton's voice is hoarse.

"Aftain zat, zey come to me and say: 'No harm to you. Cook us a good meal,' and one young man, handsome-faced, bright-eyed, well-dressed gallant, he gave me a louis and said: 'Feed us well but feed us on deck. We are gentlemen; we do not intrude upon a lady.' Zen I give zem, mon Dieu, ze beautiful meal I have prepared for you. Ah, how ze pirates ate it!"

"How many were there?" interjects Barnes hurriedly.

"About four, Monsieur. Only one know how to sail ze ship. But ze night is fine and aftaire bringing me to make ze breakfast during ze darkness, ze one who knew ze coast steered us here. Zen zey drop ze anchor and cry to me: 'Cook, stay on board. You tell ze cursed Americano, Signore Barnes of New York to come to Bocognano if he would rescue his wife. We have greeting for him zere vitch he vill not forget!' Zay all take off zaire hats, as ze young cavalier bring upon deck your beautiful lady, who looked like a goddess, so haughty, so noble. To him as he bowed before her, she says: 'Monsieur Bernardo Salicetl, you who were vere un gentilhomme a few days ago and have now become a kidnapper, tell your savages to keep zaire hands off me and I vill go with you.'

"To me she command as she stepped into ze boat: 'Loboeuf, have a good meal for Mr. Barnes, who vill be coming soon;' Zen she look at me with her eyes. I know she means I am not to forget something. Ah, your mariee vas vaire brave. Only once in ze long night, as I listen with my ears, I hear from ze cabin a short, quick sob."

"My wife's eyes told you to remember something? What was it?" asks Barnes very eagerly, though his gaze is dim.

"Oh, voila! Vhen ze ruffians were preparing ze boat for her, Madame whispered in my ear: 'Tell my husband to look in ze third drawer of ze cabin locker.'"

Before the last words have left the Frenchman's lips, the American is down the companionway and has torn open the drawer indicated. He hurriedly tosses aside the contents and produces a note, the superscription of which, in the dear hand he knows, makes him falter. It is simply addressed: "Mr. Burton H. Barnes," and reads:

My Darling Husband: I have little time to write, for they are preparing to take me on shore in a boat. We are now anchored off Corsica somewhere.

Last evening, through some careless message of Thompson misinterpreted by my own eagerness, I came on board the yacht alone, thinking you had gone there before me to avoid some encounter with Danella that might delay our wedding trip. A boat was waiting for me at the landing place. In the darkness, during the short hundred yards to the yacht, I noticed nothing suspicious in the oarsmen, probably because my thoughts were so entirely of you.

Flying into the cabin, expecting to meet you, I heard the doors close upon me and a voice in Corsican French say: "She is ours!" Then the slipping of bolts outside told me I was a prisoner. No cries of mine or commands were heeded. The yacht got under way.

Ah, what a night I've passed here in this cabin that should have been our honeymoon home, thinking of your misery when you found you had lost me.

But knowing by your love that you will pursue and find me, I send you this warning, which is of great importance.

I have learned by some careless French conversation that has drifted in to me that I am to be made the lure to bring you to the death of the vendetta in Bocognano. To me Salicetl has boasted that they have notified you they take me to Corsica. They are sure your affection for me will make you follow me, rash and careless in your agony. There Salicetl means to assassinate you, thinking by that to gain the votes of his peculiar countrymen because he has nobly fulfilled his diabolical oath of the horrible vendetta that they worship. Therefore, by your love for me, my husband, I charge you not to risk your dear life unduly, and to bring with you enough friends to protect you from these assassins. I hear the splash of the boat put overboard; they will be coming for me, so kiss the letter where I sign and you'll meet the lips of, in life or death, always, YOUR WIFE.

Barnes reads this letter carefully twice. Once he gazes up; but the sight of the cabin decorated for his honeymoon, about which are scattered his wife's dainty belongings brought on board for a nuptial voyage, makes him close his misty eyes with a shudder.

Leboeuf is now calling down the companionway: "Monsieur, I have obeyed your wife's commands. A good meal is served on deck for you and Madame Anstruther."

He must eat to keep his strength up for the work that is ahead of him. The American steps alertly on deck and tries to show his appreciation of the French chef's art, but anguish is a bar to appetite.

After a moment Barnes passes Enid's letter over to Edwin's wife. When she has read it, he says: "I have been thinking if it wouldn't be better to sail to Ajaccio and get De Belloc and some of his troopers to go with us to Bocognano."

"With De Belloc and his troopers you would never find her," answers Marina. "The sight of their cavalry uniforms would be signalled up the Valley of the Gravona; Enid would not be in Bocognano. In the mountain fastnesses of Del Oro they would hide her where you would never find her."

"Then some honest countrymen, from this neighborhood; they can be hired?" suggests Barnes.

"But not by a foreigner to strike against a Corsican," replies Marina, almost proudly. "To have any hope of finding your wife we must go alone. I'll lead you by secret paths through the mountains; on the main road did they see you coming they would ambush and kill you." Her eyes look eagerly upon the shore, she rises and says, resolutely: "Come!"

Barnes, more eager than she, quickly dresses himself in the simple hunting suit he has brought with him.

"Oh, you must look more Corsican," cries the girl, and deftly puts a cock's feather plucked from one of his bride's bonnets in his hat. "Some soot, Felix," she commands the cook, "to make Monsieur's eyebrows darker and his moustache black."

"Yes, that's it!" she adds eagerly.

"And you?" asks Barnes placing his eyes on Marina's white Parisian fete dress.

"Oh, I've brought a Corsican peasant's costume with me," and the lady calls to Graham to bring on board a little bundle she had left upon the deck of the fishing smack.

Then Marina runs down the companionway and secludes herself in the salon while Barnes gives his directions to Graham. "You had better return that fishing boat to Villefranche by two of your crew."

"Yes, even a land lubber can sail her across in this fine weather without any trouble," answers the mate.

"I am sorry, my gallant fellow, I cannot take you with me," says the American; "only Marina and I must go."

"Hoot, man! not lone wi' that delicate lassie."

"We are safer alone than with a few," replies Barnes. "But have the yacht ready to sail and a sharp lookout kept for me. During the night have a boat ashore there with a couple of men in it, so that, if necessary, I may immediately come on board of you."

"Aye, aye! Night and day I'll look for you," answers the mate.

"Now, bring the boat alongside."

"Not yet, Monsieur," cries Leboeuf, issuing from the galley, "not without something to eat, to support you and Madame," and he produces a big haversack filled with provisions.

"You're right. By evening we shall be hungry, if not before," answers the American, "and it will be best to avoid as much as possible native inns." He calls: "Madame Anstruther, I am ready!"

"And so am I." And Marina trips to the deck, a peasant girl of her island—her dark brown tresses shaded by the graceful mandile and a faldetta of grey cloth draping her agile figure. Her short skirts disclose her delicate feet shod in strong country shoes fit for use over the stones of mountain paths.

Both are eager. Within five minutes they are in the boat, and pulled by two Scotch tars, soon land upon the rocky shore. As Marina's feet touch the soil, she looks at it passionately and murmurs bitterly: "To think that I come back to my native island with the hands of so many of the friends of my childhood against me, with so many hearts that once turned toward me turned away." Then she draws herself up and says desperately, yet proudly: "But I will show to them my hands are free of the blood of Tomasso Monaldi."

DO NOT KNOW WHAT CAUSES SICKNESS

Modern People Have Many Names for Same Diseases, According to New Belief.

Does human health depend on one organ alone? This question is becoming widely discussed since L. T. Cooper first advanced his theory that the stomach is the true seat of life and all health dependent upon it.

Mr. Cooper, who has met with remarkable success in the sale of his new medicine, believes that the stomach is responsible for most sickness, and that this organ is weak in the present generation. While discussing this theory recently, he said: "I am asked time and again to tell why my medicine has made such a record wherever I have introduced it. My answer always is, 'because it restores the stomach to a normal condition.' No one will deny that today there are more half-sick men and women than ever before. Nothing critical seems to be the matter with them. They are just half-sick most of the time. They don't know really what is the matter with them. I have talked with thousands during the past two years, and few knew indeed what their trouble was. One said nervousness, another said kidney trouble, another liver complaint, some constipation, or heart trouble, or lung trouble. Many had treated, as they called it, for most of these diseases at different times. A very common complaint is 'all run down,' or 'tired all the time,' or 'no appetite.'"

"I know positively that every bit of this chronic ill health is caused by stomach trouble, and nothing else. My New Discovery puts the stomach in sound condition in about six weeks. Mighty few people can be sick with a sound digestion. That is why my medicine is selling at such a tremendous rate. I have convinced many thousands of people that these things are so, and the number is growing by leaps and bounds."

Among more recent converts to Mr. Cooper's beliefs is Mr. Edgar L. Hinds, living at 6 Tappan Street, Everett, Mass. Mr. Hinds has this to say on the subject:

"I have suffered with stomach trouble for eight years. I was not sick enough to be in bed, but just felt bad all the time. My greatest trouble was that I always felt tired, would get up in the morning feeling as tired as when I went to bed.

"I had a very irregular appetite, and was troubled with dizzy spells. If I stood for any length of time, I would have a dull pain in the lower part of my back. I was nervous and felt all the time as though something terrible was going to happen. I tried many kinds of medicine, but nothing ever helped me.

"I had about given up all hope of ever being in good health again, when I heard so much of Cooper and decided to try his medicine. I took one bottle of his New Discovery and was greatly surprised at the result. I gained 12 pounds in a few weeks. I can now eat anything I wish, and feel like a new man. I cheerfully recommend this medicine to all sufferers from stomach trouble."

It is worth anyone's time, who is not enjoying good health, to learn of Mr. Cooper's wonderful preparations. We are selling them in large quantities. —T. S. Armstrong.

TO PROVIDE A REFUGE FOR BIRDS IN NEW JERSEY.

At the recent annual meeting of the National Association of Audubon Societies in New York, William Dutcher, the president, emphasized the need, now that the country was growing more thickly settled, of setting aside tracts of land as bird refuges. The Federal Government has established six such reservations within a year, through the influence of the society. The plan of bird and animal refuges is destined to be a great factor in the future in the preservation of the wild life of the country. The reservations secured are the beginning of the plan of refuges, but the Federal Government owns no land in any of the thirteen original States, nor in Texas. In these fourteen States the roposed system of refuges can only be secured by purchase, or by a legislative act.

The La Rue Homer Nature Lover's League has raised a considerable sum of money for the purpose of buying a large tract of suitable marsh land in New Jersey, which is to be dedicated as a bird refuge.

Addresses, of the series on "Birds," were given during the last week at the Carleton Academy, Summit, and the Dearborn Morgan School, Orange. The subject of study in League Chapters for November is the Audubon Leaflet, representing the "Scarlet Tanager."

NO LIGHT ON MALONEY CASE.

Exhaustive Search by Notaries Fails to Discover Record of Marriage in Montreal.

Montreal, Que., Nov. 13.—The question as to the marriage of Miss Maloney and Clarkson in Montreal is still as great a mystery as ever, despite recent announcement that the ceremony took place.

O'Hara Baynes, one of the shrewdest notaries in Montreal, was engaged by the family to discover if possible whether or not the marriage had taken place. He is authority for the statement that so far he can find no record of it.

One rather interesting feature of the issue of the license is that the bond was signed by two utterly irresponsible youths, but it is not likely that any action will be taken against them, even though they made statements which were not in accordance with fact.

Send Out $1,000,000 Gold.

Philadelphia, Nov. 13—The United States Mint in this city yesterday delivered $1,000,000 in gold double eagles to the Sub-Treasury in this city. It is stated that within the next three months the mint will coin $52,000,000 in double eagles.

This enormous amount of gold will be distributed among the various Sub-Treasuries and will be employed to relieve the money stingency. The distribution of so much gold is but one of the several important moves that Secretary Cortelyou is making to provide enough currency to meet the enormous needs of the country.

Rewards of Virtue.

"The persistency with which children see some other moral in a fable than the one it is intended they shall see is often distressing," says the principal of an institution for the young in Washington. "A kindergarten teacher had recited to a pupil the story of the wolf and the lamb and had followed it up with the remark:

"'And now, you you see, Tommy, that the lamb would not have been eaten by the wolf if he had been good and sensible.'

"'Yes, I understand,' responded the youngster gravely. 'If the lamb had been good and sensible we should have had him to eat!'"—Harper's Weekly.

FRIENDS IN CONFERENCE

Dr. Janney, President of American Purity Alliance, Makes an Address.

MANY DELEGATES ARE PRESENT

J. Edward Borden Chosen Clerk of Meeting—To Close With Service Tomorrow Morning.

The half-yearly meeting of the Religious Society of Friends convened at the meeting house on Watchung avenue, this morning, and was continued throughout the day and evening. It will close tomorrow morning with a religious service. The meeting today is quite largely attended by members of the Shrewsbury and Plainfield societies.

This morning's session was largely devoted to reports from the sub-ordinate meetings, from the yearly meeting speaking of the several changes in discipline, and suggestions for work from the Philanthropic Committee, all of which were approved. During the meeting earnest remarks were made by John Stringham, of New York, who said that what is needed today is men of righteousness, the kind who live conscientious and correct lives. He said that every righteous man was a power for good in the community and his influence is sure to count for that which is best.

Other remarks were made by Dr. O. Edward Janney, of Baltimore, who succeeded the late Aaron M. Powell as president of the American Purity Alliance, and through whose influence he became interested in the work. He paid tribute to the memory of Mr. Powell.

Among those attending the meeting are Phoebe C. Wright, of Sea Girt; Walter Reynolds, of Manasquan; W. H. Borden, of Eatontown; Anne Rice Powell and Frances E. Baright, of Philadelphia.

There was a short discussion before the close of the morning session as to the advisability of changing the place of holding the half-yearly meeting from Shrewsbury to Manasquan, because of the fact that there are so few Friends at the former place. The matter was referred to a committee and will be reported on later.

Adjournment was taken at 1 o'clock for lunch and this afternoon at 3 o'clock there was a conference on the work of the First-Day School; its usefulness and plans whereby greater things can be accomplished. This will be continued this evening, after which there will be a social time under the auspices of the Young Friends' Association.

UNION COURT CASES.

One Conviction and an Acquittal in Two Assault Trials.

In the Union County Court on Tuesday Charles A. Frederichs, a saloon-keeper, doing business at Fifth and South Park streets, Elizabethport, was convicted of assaulting Detective Patrick Brogan on the night of Sunday, July 7, last. The detective tried to force an entrance to Frederich's place, as he had reason to believe the saloon-keeper was doing business in violation of the law. Brogan was severely hurt in the struggle that ensued. The jury was out four hours. Frederichs will be sentenced next Wednesday.

James Caszik was also tried Tuesday afternoon on an indictment charging him with engaging in a fight in a saloon at Elizabethport, and assaulting with a beer glass and blackjack John Polattis. Both men are members of a Polish society, and the trouble was caused by Polattis charging his assailant with being ashamed to wear the society's badge. After hearing all the testimony the jury acquitted the defendant in ten minutes.

DECLINES TO BECOME AN OPERATIC STAR

Miss Etta Raybert, of East Second street, who has been prominent here and elsewhere in musical circles for some time, has just declined a flatterin goffer of $150 a week from a well-known theatrical firm of New York to appear in operatic productions. The reason given for her refusal to accept the offer is the objections offered by her father, Charles M. Raybert. He refuses to allow his daughter to enter upon a stage career.

Miss Raybert was formerly soprano soloist in the Reformed church, of New Brunswick, and the First Presbyterian church, this city, and at present is the soloist at Trinity Reformed church. She has also sung in John D. Rockefeller's church at Tarrytown, N. Y., and in other prominent churches, as well as at concerts in New York. She possesses a voice of exceptional strength and sweetness which has attracted the attention of musical critics.

TROLLEY CARS COLLIDE.

Impact Badly Damaged the Offending Vehicle.

Proceeding along West Front street at a high rate of speed yesterday morning, trolley car No. 53, bound for the Dewey Park car barns, crashed into a main line car that had stopped at DeKalb avenue. The rear car was badly damaged and almost thrown from the tracks, the impact was so severe. It carried no passengers and the one ahead had only a few aboard. The accident was due to the inexperience of a green motorman and he managed to escape injury. His name is no longer on the pay roll and the officials claim to have forgotten it.

This is the third accident that has occurred on the West Front street line this week but none of them have resuted seriously.

King's Daughters' Luncheon.

The Loyal Daughters' Circle, King's Daughters, gave a successful luncheon and sale of candy at the Park Club, yesterday afternoon. Covers were laid for seventy members and friends, and after the luncheon, many remained to enjoy a game of bridge whist. The sale of candy netted $25, and the table was in charge of Mrs. W. W. Coriell, Mrs. W. L. Lockwood, Mrs. A. B. Davies and Mrs. E. E. Iremonger. There was also a percentage from the luncheon, all of which will be used for the King's Daughters' work. Mrs. J. A. Peterkin is the president of the circle and Mrs. H. H. Williams was the chairman of the luncheon committee.

Will Try to Finish This Week.

The Union County Grand Jury is making every effort to conclude its labors this week. A member in speaking of the duties of that body said that they could be completed in one-half the ordinary time if the officials in all parts of the county were as efficient and prompt as those in Plainfield. All local cases for consideration by the Grand Jury are properly prepared on time, he said, and it greatly facilitates matters.

Theodore H. Harding Dead.

Mrs. Helen E. Miles, of Somerset street, was summoned to Washington last week by the critical illness of her brother, Theodore A. Harding, whose death occurred on Thursday last. He was born in Binghamtown, N. Y., April 17, 1844. He was educated in the public schools and Binghamton Academy. He went to Albany, N. Y., in 1789 and remained there about two years. Afterward he went to Washington, where he became secretary of the Y. M. C. A. He was prominent in Masonic circles.

BILDSTEEN GETS ADVICE

Regrets He Didn't Kill Himself and Police Give Him a Few Pointers.

PREYED UPON SISTER'S WAGES.

Bluecoats Were So Sympathetic They Tipped Him Off On the Best Way to Die.

Miss Hilda Bildsteen, an attractive young Swedish girl who is employed by an East Front street family, appeared at police headquarters this morning and asked Chief Kiely that she be given protection against her brother, Otto Bildsteen, of New York. She informed the head sleuth that he had demanded $20 from her in a note sent to the house last night with the added threat that if it wasn't sent to him by mail at a North avenue hotel he would kill her and then shoot himself. The girl stated that she had repeatedly given him various sums and that she had gotten tired of his continued grafting.

The chief sent Patrolman John Kelley to the hotel and Bildsteen was pounced upon as he was pacing up and down in the office with the expectation of the letter carrier's arrival. When taken to headquarters he admitted his sister's charge and ended up by remarking that he was sorry he hadn't committed suicide last night.

"It certainly is too bad that you didn't," was the comforting reply from the chief who recognized in Bildsteen a prisoner in the city court last year. "I guess all hands could get along without a loafer who preys upon his hard-working sister's wages but the truth of the matter is you haven't got the nerve to do it."

Bildsteen protested that he could could make way with himself if he wanted to and there was a possibility that he might decide upon it later on.

"Well, in that case," the police head retorted, "you take yourself back to New York and do it over there. We don't want you here dead or alive and if you dare show your face in Plainfield again or write your sister for money I'll make you wish you had done most anything except remain on earth."

The would-be sucide was without the necessary funds to pay his hotel bill or buy a railroad ticket and the complaining sister generously handed up a five dollar note to start him on his way. Patrolman Kelley saw to it that he paid what he owed and then put him on a New York train. It was afterward reported that Kelley had whispered to Bildsteen that he couldn't do anything better than to shuffle off the mortal coil and gave him a quiet tip that five cents worth of prussic acid would do the job quick.

TO DEDICATE NEW ORGAN.

Special Services at Hope Chapel Next Sunday Will Mark the Event.

Hope chapel's new pipe organ, which has just been installed as a memorial to the late superintendent, Henry C. Squires, will be dedicated next Sunday. Mrs. L. R. Howard has been appointed organist and she has prepared a special musical program for both morning and evening services. An augmented choir will assist.

The new organ is a handsome instrument and was built by a western house of established reputation. The cost has practically been fully met by the congregation which has been striving for that result for a long time.

In connection with the Sunday evening program, communion service will be held. The customary preparatory service will be held this evening.

Sauerackers In Court.

Charles Saueracker and his wife, Julia, who were arrested on Somerset street, Tuesday night, for fighting, were arrigned before Recorder Dolliver in the borough court, last night. The former was fined $3 and paid up but as Julia has been before the court several times recently she was sent to jail for twenty days.

LOCAL HUNTER'S TALE WAS A NATURE FAKE

The hunting season is on. Gunners of all sizes, shapes and ability are banging away in the fields and woods and the tales of game captured by returning Nimrods are as hard to believe as the famous fish stories that float in every year.

Some of the tales related do not entirely deal with the number of rabbits laid low or how many were "just barely missed." For instance:

A party of six Plainfielders started out Monday for a three days' cottontail quest in Hunterdon county. They returned unexpectedly Tuesday and when friends asked why, they were informed at first that one of the sextette had met with an accident. "Stepped in a hole and broke his leg" was the first version handed out and it was generally believed until a newspaperman discovered that hunters could tell tales to their best friends as well as fishermen. The unfortunate member of the party had not broken a leg, but both these memb ersand parts of his body had been filled with shot.

When the other hunters were asked to explain they admitted that there had been a shooting accident and that their friend had been laid low by a careless hunter who fired at a rabbit directly in front of him. They agreed among themselves, they said, to hand out the broken leg story for reasons not made known. A stranger did the shooting, they said, and in the excitement he got away before they could take his name. The tale sounded plausible enough until a Hunterdon county man dropped in town today with another version.

The man who did the shooting didn't get away. In fact, he not only started out with the party but came home with them. He was one of the original six, but of course, you see, for the reputation of Plainfield's gunners it would never, never do to say that he had been so careless as to nearly kill one of his comrades. He must be shielded by all means and so the broken leg tale and the strange gunned story were related.

The six wise ones can have the name of the reckless hunter if they want it by dropping into The Daily Press office.

Card Party for Prospective Brides.

COIN MOTTO DISAPPEARS

What Plainfield Ministers Think of Rocsevelt's Extraodinary Action.

"IN GOD WE TRUST" NO MORE.

Local Clergymen As a Rule Appear to Believe That a Mistake Has Been Made.

The omission of the motto, "In God We Trust," from the new $10 gold coin, minted from the St. Gaudens design and now in circulation, has stirred the clergy of the country, a majority of whom are opposed to the change sanctioned by President Roosevelt. While the President has offered an explanation for omitting the motto from the coin, holding that it has never been respected in its true spirit, the ministers almost to a man are in favor of its retention.

Here is what Plainfield ministers think of the radical change as ordered by the President:

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church—"It is a pity that the inscription 'In God We Trust' has been omitted from the coin. It would appear that we are yielding too much to the opinion of those who have no belief. It would be a very different thing if the inscription had not been in use on the United States coins for a great many years and represents the general belief of the country in God. I can see no reason why the inscription should have been omitted."

Rev. A. C. McCrea, of the First M. E. church—"I rarely ever see a $10 gold piece and I cannot say that I am stirred by the agitation. I couldn't say positively that the motto 'In God We Trust' is on the old $10 gold piece. However, I would be glad to have one with or without the motto. The gold coin is more of an aristocratic piece of money and so long as they allow the motto to remain on the five cent nickel piece of money I shall not protest. I think that a majority of the people trust in God, but our faith is oftentimes shaken in men."

Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church—"It is a good established custom and not a bad motto. I am not quite sure but that the omission of the motto brings the gold coin down to exactly what some people think of money. Unless there are good reasons for omitting the motto I would favor its retention on our currency."

Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross—"I have scarcely ever seen a $10 gold coin and I cannot say that I am interested in the subject."

Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church—"I am sorry to see the motto go off the gold coin and would have been glad to see it kept on the piece of money. I realize that it has been made a joke of, and the subject of considerable criticism, but as for myself I would favor its retention, showing some recognition of God as against the levity of a few people."

Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel—"I am inclined to believe that the motto should have been left on the coin. While President Roosevelt says that there is no law that warrants its retention, it seems to be an expression of the spirit of the times; a tendency to distrust in Divine Power. Especially in view of the present financial condition of the country it seems that we should trust in God more than ever. I believe the motto came from a time when there was perhaps more trust in God than at present."

Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel—"If it is appropriate to place the head of the sovereigns on the coins of Kingdoms, it is certainly not improper to leave the dignified assertion of trust in God on the coins of a Christian Republic. A coin is in itself a peculiar sign of sovereignty, and the seal stamped on our coins is most fittingly a representation of the fundamental ideals of the nation. The eagle is the symbol of national sovereignty, the stars indicate the ideal of statehood, the head stands for the ideal of liberty and the motto for the ideal of religious faith. The misuse of money and the forgetfulness of national ideals on the part of thousands of citizens does not in the least lessen the appropriateness and beauty of these time-honored symbols, and the removal from the coins of the one that indicates religious faith is unwarranted either by our history or by the firmest convictions of our people at present."

At the Episcopal diocesan convention at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York a resolution was introduced yesterday afternoon denouncing the action of the government in taking the motto from the coins and demanding its restoration. The resolution, which was introduced by the Rev. Dr. Grosvenor of the

POLICE PLACE BAN ON HUNTING IN CITY LIMITS

In their eagerness to bag the elusive bunny, many Plainfield hunters who have started out with dog and gun have failed to wait until the distant woods are reached and have been shooting in the city limits. As a result many complaints from residents in the outlying sections have been received at police headquarters and the matter has become a serious proposition.

Chief Kiely declared this morning that he had instructed his day men to be on the alert and that any violations of the city ordinance in this respect will result in arrest. The trouble has been especially prevalent in the extreme West End and one woman appeared before the chief with a story that the back of her home had been riddled with shot. She asserted that it was as much as any member of the family's life was worth to walk in the yard and similar experiences could be related by her neighbors.

So far no serious accidents have been reported and the police have undertaken the embargo in order to lessen the possibility.

STREET COMMITTEE GETS AFTER MEEKER

A meeting of the councilmanic street committee was held last night when street improvements now underway were generally discussed. Plans for hastening the trolley and brick pavement work on Front street and Watchung avenue were discussed and it is said that Contractor C. M. Meeker will be compelled to rush the work at last. It is realized that winter weather is likely to bring a sudden halt to the work, and for that reason it is necessary that all possible haste be employed.

Another matter discussed thoroughly was the West End avenue improvement, and it was decided that the work must be completed at once if Contractor C. M. Meeker is obliged to sub-let the job to accomplish it. Mr. Meeker secured this contract before he was awarded the one for brick pavement and aside from the dumping of some dirt on the avenue, which has not even been levelled off, nothing has been done to complete the job. In bad weather the thoroughfare, it is said, is in a disgraceful condition and hardly passable at certain points. No attempt has been made to fill in the large holes in front of the wing walls to the bridge and that spot being poorly lighted, it is said, a bad accident is likely to occur there at any time, especially at night. Walks have not been laid near the bridge on the city side, although on the borough side a fine concrete walk is to be found extending almost from the bridge to Rockview avenue.

LOCAL DENTAL ASSOCIATION BANQUET AT TRUELL HALL.

The Plainfield Dental Society, recently organized here, held its first meeting and banquet at Truell Hall, last night. The affair was planned purely as a social one, no arrangements having been made for a paper. In connection with the excellent dinner served by Mrs. Truell the dentists discussed informally some business matters.

Those present were Drs. Frank W. French, Frank T. Clawson, Guy H. Hillman, Cline M. Montfort, Raymond S. Stevens, Charles L. Moore, Charles R. Thiers, Otis B. Whitford, G. T. Moore, David G. Atwood, Charles G. Davis and Frank S. Wells.

Funeral of John George Stutz.

The funeral of John George Stutz, who died Tuesday at the residence of his son, William Stutz, of Samptown, will be held at the home tomorrow afternoon at 2:30. Burial will be in the family plot at the Samptown cemetery. Mr. Stutz was in his eighty-sixth year and had lived in Plainfield forty-seven years. He leaves a wife, three sons and two daughters. They are William, with whom he lived; Adam, of near New Brunswick; George, of West Third street; Mrs. John Hague, of West Front street, and Mrs. James Pine, of West Third street. There are also fifteen grandchildren and twelve great-grandchildren, all residing in Plainfield.

To Close Evangelistic Services.

The evangelistic services which have been carried on at the Christian church for the past three weeks will close tonight with a special illustrated service. Tomorrow evening the Ladies' Aid Society will give an entertainment for the benefit of Evangelist Waugh. Light refreshments will be served after the program.

TAX COLLECTOR RESIGNS

John W. Murray Jr., Quits the Office to Take Position in Mercantile Business.

TO APPOINT SUCCESSOR SOON.

Common Council Will Fill Unexpired Term On Monday Night—Townsend, Gloak Or Hanna Likely to Be Named.

Having taken a responsible position with the New York Sporting Goods Company, in which he is a stockholder, John W. Murray, Jr., has tendered his resignation as tax collector for the city of Plainfield to take effect as soon as the proper authorities will name his successor. Mr. Murray succeeded former Councilman Robert L. Lee, and his own successor will be either Councilman William L. Gloak or William R. Townsend, according to reliable reports. Thomas Hanna is also a candidate and the name of Councilmen Francis L. Montgomery has been mentioned in the same connection although it is not probable that he will make any fight for the appointment.

Mr. Murray's resignation was announced this morning by Mayor Charles J. Fisk, who stated that it is probable that the Common Council at its adjourned meeting on Monday night will discuss the subject of a successor to fill the unexpired term. Mr. Murray's term began January 1, 1907, and it expires January 1, 1910.

Mr. Murray's resignation follows:

"Hon. Charles J. Fisk,
"Mayor of Plainfield.
"Dear Sir:

"As I have been offered a position in a mercantile house in New York, which I feel I must accept, I hereby tender my resignation as tax collector of the city of Plainfield to take effect as soon as the audit of my books is completed. This will enable my successsor to become familiar with the work before the December rush begins and will not necessitate another audit.

"Very respectfully,
"JOHN W. MURRAY, JR."

William R. Townsend, who has already begun an active canvas for the position, is the present clerk of the Union County Board for the Equalization of Taxes and is also secretary of the local Republican city committee. He is said to have the support of Mayor Fisk and many of the organization leaders. Councilman William L. Gloak has also gotten in the race. He is said to have the promises of some of his colleagues already. Like Townsend he is a strong organization man and has many friends among the leaders. Thomas Hanna, formerly clerk of the Union County Tax Board, is also out for the place.

It is probable that the Common Council will elect Mr. Murray's successor on Monday night.

Moving Pictures In School Hall.

In St. Mary's school hall, yesterday afternoon and last night, a moving picture and stereopticon entertainment was given by the Fred Decker company under the church auspices. The hall was well filled on both occasions. Most of the views shown were of Biblical scenes, depicting the life of Moses and miracles, and scenes in Ireland, all of which were explained by Father Bogan.

Revival Growing In Interest.

The revival held at the Rescue Mission in the W. C. T. U. rooms still continues in power and interest. In the meeting last night seventeen raised their hands for consecration. Rev. Charles S. Dennis, the evangelist, will preach again tonight and there will be a solo sung. The meetings will continue every night this week. All welcome.

As merchants we must judge ourselves; not on what we think of ourselves, but by what the public think of us. It would be of little use to us to have big window displays that tickled our own fancy, if the public looked at it and passed on.

We have for several years done (as we are told and believe) the largest Clothing Business in this city. It means something, therefore, when our biggest previous figures have been beaten so far early this season.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

FOOTBALL.

Yale stock went booming after the easy victory on Saturday over Brown. The Blue gained at will and showed a great defense against the fast-scoring Providence eleven.

Dave Fultz and Fred Murphy, both former Brown University men, are having considerable success as football officials. Both have drawn frequent assignments in the big games.

Harvard outweighed the Indians on Saturday, but the speed of the redskins never gave the Crimson a chance to bring this advantage into play.

Yale will depend in a great measure on the kicking of Coy in the Princeton and Harvard games.

Cornell showed a surprising familiarity with the forward pass in the game against Army on Saturday. In the Princeton game Cornell played straight football. The quickness with which the team familiarized itself with the new formation promises a hard battle for Penn on Thanksgiving Day.

Capron, the Minnesota drop-kicker, has proved the star of the season in the West. He is a second Eckersall in this respect.

If Penn comes through the Michigan game in good condition it will be ready for a hard contest with Cornell on Thanksgiving Day.

Every college football team has a good kicker this season. In past seasons, when the kicking game did not figure so largely, the number of first-class punters was small. Hollenback, of Penn; Coy, of Yale; Harlan, of Princeton; Mount Pleasant, of Indians, and Burr, of Harvard, are a few of the best men.

Coach Yost may express the sentiment that Penn has a remarkably strong team, but he is not discounting the capabilities of his own eleven in the least.

The officiating in the game at Cambridge between Harvard and Indians on Saturday caused considerable wrangling.

Tom Shevlin and Frank Hinkey, greatest of Yale end rushers, yesterday took charge of the ends at New Haven, in the hope of developing four good men for the game with Princeton on Saturday.

Paige, Yale' tackle, returned to practise yesterday. He has completely recovered from his injured foot and will be able to play against Princeton.

GOLF.

Through the efforts of Leighton Calkins, chairman of the Green committee at the Plainfield Country Club, a hazard of exceptional interest has been placed at the ninth hole. A ditch fully eight feet deep has been dug and in front of it has been placed several railroad ties on ends. Of this particular hazard there are but three in this country, two at Garden City and the one here. It adds greatly to the excitement of competition and besides it attracts attention.

Programmes for the open tournament at the Country Club of Lakewood November 28, 29 and 30 announce an all day eighteen hole qualifying round and four sixteens to qualify for the Country Club, Carasaljo, Metedeconk and Lakewood cups. There will be cups for additional sixteene should they be needed. An eighteen hole handicap on November 30 will be open for entries until the night before, but entries for the tournament qualifying round should be made by November 27.

There are fifty-three signatures to date on the prospectus of the golf club to be started by players who use the public course at Pelham Bay Park. It is hoped to have a strong an organization effected by January as either the New York Golf Club, Brooklyn Golf Club or the Forest Park Golf Club, and to apply for allied membership in the United States Golf Association. Only the final between C. Floyd and J. Pepper for the Haffen cup remains to be played in the fall tournament, and an open tournament under broader conditions is planned to inaugurate the eighteen hole course in the spring.

W. Fellowes Morgan, president of the M. G. A. and secretary of the U. S. G. A., is at the Virginia Hot Springs. He has with him the suggestions received from all quarters regarding the revision of the rules and his spare moments will be passed in tabulating them. The American report to the St. Andrews rules committee will probably be sent before the holidays.

Moving pictures of golf matches have caught on in the London music halls. The putting is much quicker than in real life and the ball looks more like a white mouse as it runs on the green than a golf ball. In driving the club seems to come down very slowly on the ball, much more slowly than it goes up. Should instantaneous photographs of the sort be made in this county the study of the two speeds of the club in driving may create as great variation from preconceived types as those that show a running horse or trotter in motion. "Slow back" is the advice of all golfing teachers, yet to the naked eye many of the best players appear to go back as fast as they come down. It would be curious if the down stroke is proved after all to be the slowest movement.

It is probable that either Deal or Westward Ho! will be added to the British championship rotation in the spring. The circuit is now of but five clubs—St. Andrews, Hoylake, Sandwich, Preswick and Muirfield—and the players have long been clamoring for additions to the number. Inland courses are still to be left out of the round. The odd objection to Sunningdale and Walton Heath in American eyes is that they are so near London that the huge entry would make it impracticable to carry out the championships, at any rate under the present regulations. That it is unjust to deprive the many golfers about London of a near hand opportunity to take part in a championship meeting at least once in five or six years is a view that does not appeal to the committee, which is dominated by the Royal and Ancient of St. Andrews.

(Other sporting [illegible] on page eight).

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

It has come to be a matter of general belief that no theatrical season would be complete without "The Old Homestead." This season is to be no exception, for the old New England pastoral, with its quaint, rural types of character and domestic felicity, parental love and prodigality, is playing to crowded houses everywhere it is produced. It has long since come to be considered by many as the best New England drama ever written. The explanation of its peculiar fascination may be found, perhaps, in its simplicity and naturalness, its humor and pathos, which find personification in the character of old "Uncle Josh." "The Old Homestead" will be at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night.

There is a tenseness about the telling of the story of the life at one of the country's most popular colleges in Jules Murry's "At Yale," that holds the attention in spite of anything one can do. The bitter feud between Dave Burly and his mates is the strong undercurrent to the love story of Dick Seeley and the sister of his roommate, Dorothy Randal. The songs, the best examples of college songs now on the road, are full of melody, and the fun extracted from the telegraph boy, "Jimsey," is genuine and deserved. "At Yale" will be at the New Plainfield theatre next Tuesday night.

Church of the Incarnation, after the President's letter had been made public, was received with an outburst of applause. An effort to have it laid on the table was defeated by an almost unanimous vote. It was then agreed that after Dr. Greer's address, the resolution would be taken up.

When the time came the resolution was again brought forward and finally passed by a vote of 131 to 81, after a debate of nearly two hours, during which several attempts were made to dodge it, as one clergyman, the Rev. Dr. Townsend, put it. Friends of President Roosevelt fought bitterly against its passage.

A coterie of laymen was prominent in supporting the antagonism to the resolution. A motion, in fact two motions, to lay on the table were defeated with a vote so close that a count was needed. Then an attempt was made to have the consideration indefinitely postponed, and then as a last resource it was tried to have the vote of the resolution itself put off until tomorrow. All attempts failed, however, and the resolution was ultimately carried after one of the hottest debates remembered by the oldest members of the synod.

UNEXPECTED TURN IN ASBURY'S COLOR QUESTION

Asbury Park, Nov. 14.—The color question in the Asbury Park fire department reached an unexpected and sensational phase yesterday, when Wesley B. Stout appeared with a writ of certiorari obtained from Supreme Court Justice Charles E. Hendrickson, which certioraries the new fire ordinance eliminating the Eureka colored company from the Asbury Park department, and thus opens up a litigation which bids fair to interest the colored race in every part of the country and may ultimately find its way into the Supreme Court of the United States for final interpretation of the fourteenth amendment to the Constitutions.

The Afro-American Council is behind the proceeding with ample funds to back up its contention that the enforced disbandment of the Eureka Company is contrary to equality and that the property rights of its members in a $30,000 fund of the Firemen's Relief Association, have been invaded by the action of the Asbury Park City Council. Alan H. Strong is associated with Mr. Stout for the colored people and the Afro-American Council, it is said, will be represented by an eminent New York law firm.

Mr. Stout said that the new ordinance unquestionably deprives the Eurekas of property rights, but in order that the color question could be definitely settled by appeal, if necessary, it was pleaded as one of the main contentions in his application. It is also claimed that the Eurekas own and use the only chemical apparatus in the city and that its disbandment will leave a section of the annexed territory entirely unprotected from fire. The action has caused no little excitement among the white firemen who are bitterly opposed to the colored company, and who recently threatened to retire from active service unless the colored company was officially dropped from the rolls.

The question of enforcing the ordinance is now under consideration by the Fire and Water Committee of the City Council, which is negotiating with a white firemen's committee in the hope the Eurekas might be permitted to retain their apparatus. The present suit, it is believed, will change the aspect of affairs and precipitate a new crisis in the controversy.

TEN YEARS IN PRISON FOR BLACK HAND LEADER

Gaetano Petenelli, leader of a "Black Hand" gang, in Paterson, was convicted in a few minutes of conspiracy and attempted robbery, and sentenced to ten years at hard labor in State prison yesterday afternoon. He attempted to prove an alibi, but his two companions arrested with him turned State's evidence. The jury deliberated ten minutes.

"In this case the court regrets," said Judge Scott, addressing the convicted man, "that it is permitted to impose only three years' punishment for the crime of attempted robbery and only seven years for conspiracy. However, I impose the full penalty on both convictions."

"Will the terms run consecutively or together?" asked Assistant Prosecurtor Ralph Shaw, who conducted the case for the State.

"Consecutively," of course; ten years all," asserted Judge Scott.

Former Judge John F. Kerr, counsel for Petenelli, interposed no objection, nor did he plead with the court to have the sentence reduced. The constables handcuffed Petenelli and removed him to the county jail. He will be taken to Trenton at as early a date as possible, the authorities seeking to make an example of him that shall serve notice to other members of the band which delights in terrorizing their unoffending countrymen that punishment will come swift to them in this county. Petenelli was leader of a gang of six men who threatened Frank Paterno, a barber, with death if he refused to pay over $200. Paterno sought police aid, and three arrests were made, including the convicted man. Petenelli's record is a bad one.

Although he claimed he shot in self-defense, the police believe he murdered Angelo Biondo on Beach street in 1906, and then shot himself in the leg to establish his claim of self-defense.

SCHOOL GIRL IS FOUND HALF DEAD IN WOODS

Half dead from exposure to cold and her mind shaken by the error of a night spent wandering in the woods, near Bogota, Helen Schroeder, a school girl, who had been missing since Monday afternoon, was found yesterday by a searching party and carried to her parents' home in the Westview section of Ridgefield Park. The girl is now under the care of two physicians, and it is feared her experience will have a serious effect upon her mentally and physically.

The family recently moved from New York to Ridgefield Park, and Helen was sent to school No. 1. She was placed in a grade corresponding to the one she had been in when attending the Manhattan public school. She was unable to keep up with the class, and on Monday was put into a lower one. This setback worried the girl, and she feared to go home. Wandering away through a country that was unknown to her, she became lost, and darkness overtook her. She wandered about the woods until found.

THE FORUM.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Can it be true that the taxes of Plainfield are being used to pay the trolley car fare of school teachers and that it costs the city no less than $600 to defray this private expense of city employes? Can it be true that school board notices sent out by the clerk of the Board of Education are highly engraved cards, the work of New York firms, and that this expense is borne by the taxpayers? ANTI-EXTRAVAGANCE.

Ticket Buyers Scare Depositors.

A long line of persons that had formed to secure seats for a series of Damarosch concerts in Morristown stood in front of a building adjacent to the Montclair Trust Company's bank, in Bloomfield avenue, and nearly caused a run on that institution. Some one started a report that depositors were lined up to take their money out of the bank, and the rumor spread. Prompt action on the part of cooler heads prevented any serious outcome of the unfounded rumor.

Bishop Exonerates Rector.

Beverley, Nov. 14—The Rev. W. T. Snead, rector of St. Stephen's church, who was recently the subject of inquisition by the standing committee of the church on charges of infractions of church rules and displays of ill temper, has been completely exonerated of the committee's work was received today by the rector. Mr. Snead is delighted over the result of a contest that has lasted for four months. "I am entirely vindicated," he declared.

Rector Declines a Call.

The Rev. Charles Fiske, rector of St. John's Protestant Episcopal church, Somerville, yesterday announced that he had declined a call to the rectorship of the Church of the Holy Comforter at Poughkeepsie. The parish is the one of which Bishop Scarborough was rector before his election to the bishopric.

A FITZ RANDOLPH MILLENNIUM.

Ex-President Randolph, of the Consolidated Exchange and Atlantic Trust companies, Manhattan, and for many years, of the good old times, treasurer of the Illinois Central Railroad, publishes, under the auspices of the New Jersey Historical Society, of which he is a life member, "Fitz Randolph Traditions," the story for a thousand years of an illustrious family. Mr. Randolph frankly concedes in his foreword that genealogy, like poetry, in which he has also made a successful excursion or two, is a mild madness, but his saving common sense, his accurate habit of mind, that of years of exact business, have enabled him to make the volume artistic and unpretentious in appearance, but of substantial and historical value and general interest. Half way to the beginning of the Christian era is in itself no small achievement in a country where descendants of the Mayflower, members of the Society of Colonial Wars and Sons of the Revolution are regarded as most honorable antiques, and Mr. Randolph has succeeded, with infinite care and patience, in a much more remote field than any American genealogist has yet essayed. The family tree, transplanted from Norse origin, signifying either "hero" or "big wolf," and coming through many etymological changes, overshadows Normandy, Brittany and England and has, among its branches royalty and nobility; and somewhere, even that greater than either, George Washington; so that while in one sense but the story of a family, Mr. Randolph has written a running history of England for a millennium. Incidentally, he gives the much-abused King Richard III a certificate of reasonable doubt, in which he corroborates the exhaustive research of Sir Clements Markham, and scattered all through the book are notes and observations of general risteric interest, while a series of full-page illustrations of castles, churches, coats-of-arms and other appropriate subjects add much to its value. A modest chart of the line of descent, with a still more modest portrait of the author, concludes the volume, which might well be a model for those interested in similar studies. Mr. Randolph will sail next week for a prolonged stay in Europe.—Brooklyn Standard Union.

First Skating Accident, Broken Leg.

Montclair, Nov. 14.—The first skating accident of the season is reported from near Singac. Ten-year-old Harry Surden found a shallow pool frozen over near his home yesterday morning, and with a loud whoop he made a dash to take a slide over the frozen surface. The ice was not strong enough, however, to bear the weight of the lad and his foot went through. This caused him to trip and fall. His right leg was broken.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN.

Local pastors have practically completed arrangements for the union Thanksgiving services, which will be held in the Seventh-Day Baptist church at 7:45 in the evening. The pastors of the New Market churches have been asked to co-operate with the local clergy. Rev. E. C. Dutchier, pastor of the Methodist church, will preach a sermon suitable to the day and there will be special Thanksgiving music. In past years the service has been held in the morning, but those on the committee this year feel that as the sports of the holiday will take much of the interest by day, a large number would be likely to attend if the hour of services were changed.

Peace has been declared in the borough council. The snow and ice ordinance, the cause of so much disturbance, was amended and passed at the last council meeting and there is now no instigator of wordy strife. At its second regular reading, it was decided that the words "and gutters" and "or gutters" be struck out of the ordinance, wherever they appeared. Councilman Starker moved this amendment, stating that he thought that much of the opposition to the measure was due to this hardship to the property owners in shovelling out their gutters. The ordinance was then passed, and the borough fathers smiled grimly over "past performances."

Rev. W. W. Casselberry met the Sunday-school teachers of the First Presbyterian church in the weekly study meeting at the conclusion of the evening service last night. This is the first time the teachers have met for this weekly instruction of a Wednesday night, as these classes were formerly held Monday night.

The social committee of the First Baptist Christian Endeavor Society will give a birthday entertainment in Friendship hall Tuesday night. The evening's program is unique as well as interesting and the novelty of the affair is a cause of a large advance sale of tickets.

S. D. Stites has just completed the erection of a barn on his Jefferson avenue property.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

County Superintendent Savitz has arranged a course of lectures for the teachers of Fanwood Township, Roselle, Cranford and Westfield. Lectures covering the entire school curriculum will be given by professors of Columbia University, thus bringing the university to the teachers. The first lecture is to be held Thursday afternoon at four o'clock in the Westfield high school. Dr. Edward Thorndike, of the Teachers' College, will lecture on the subject, "The Child as a Learner."

James Hunt, who has been agent at the Fanwood station for a number of years, has been transferred to Greenville. The change took place today. During Mr. Hunt's stay here he has made many friends, not only among the patrons of the company, but with the resident as well. The transfer is in line of promotion.

Miss Caroline Lent, the supervisor of drawing in the local school, has on exhibition in the school some fine specimens of work done under her supervision. Miss Lent is a graduate of Oneonta Normal and has made a specialty of art work in schools.

Tax Collector John Z. Hatfield is sending out the annual tax bill. The rate is several points lower this year than last.

Frank Hollingsworth, of Cranford, has been visiting his father, Loftus Hollingsworth, of Prospect avenue.

The members of the Bible Study class held its weekly meeting for reading and study last night.

NO "STONE TRUST" IS BOOSTING ROAD COSTS

The commission to investigate the increasing cost of stone roads, which commission came into existence by resolution of Senator Robbins, of Burlington, held its first session at the State House, at Trenton for taking testimony yesterday.

Most of the day was devoted to hearing the statements of quarrymen, who were a unit in declaring that there was no "stone trust" or other combination to boost prices. They declared that the increasing costof stone roads was due to the care with which the State built roads, higher wages paid to men, the increasing vigilance of road jobs and to the demand for crushed stone from roalroads, for concrete work and from municipalities for repairing.

They further declared that contractors were making less money now than they were a few years ago, when the prices were lower. As an illustration, the quarrymen, declared that in 1902 men could be secured for road work at $1.25 a day, now they command $1.75 and $2.

Before the committee makes up its report it will take testimony relating to alleged discrimination on the part of railroads in the shipment of crushed stone to builders. The new State Railroad Commission may be asked to help in this work.

State Roard Commissioner Elijah C. Hutchinson, who is the chairman of this commission, is of the opinion that convict labor will solve the high cost of stone road construction. The county will be getting something for the work of the convicts, instead of maintaining them in comparative idleness at the county farms.

Besides the State road commissioner, the members of the commission the Winton E. Scarritt, of East Orange; John E. Darnell, of Masonville; John J. Albertson, of Camden, and D. D. Denise, of Freehold.

CHECKS REFUSED BY REVENUE COLLECTOR.

Paterson Banks Will Not Take His Deposits Except in Currency or Gold.

Paterson, Nov. 14.—A flurry was caused here yesterday when Deputy Internal Revenue Collector James M. Fortune announced that no checks would hereafter be accepted in payment for revenue tax or revenue stamps.

The receipts at the office of the internal revenue official in the post-office building range from $500 to $800 daily, all of which is generally paid by checks, which heretofore have been deposited by Collector Fortune in the First National and Second National banks on alternate days.

When asked the cause for the new order Collector Fortune announced that he had been informed by the above banks yesterday morning that hereafter all of his deposits must be made in currency or gold, and it thus becomes necessary for him to refuse all checks from now on.

The local banks explained to Collector Fortune that they had been notified to make all their returns to the New York Sub-Treasury in either currency or gold, as the usual cashier's check would not be accepted there yesterday. It became known yesterday that withdrawals from local savings institutions and trust companies have been enormous. The Paterson Savings Institutions, which has nearly ten thousand accounts with foreigners, has been called upon for upward of five hundred thousand dollars during the past ten days.

LOSES 18 HORSES BY POISON.

Hoboken Truckman Offers $1,000 Reward for Conviction of Person Who Killed His Animals.

Three horses, owned by Samuel Feinstein, of No. 110 Willow avenue, Hoboken, a truckman, doing business in New York, have died from poisoning since Sunday, bringing up to eighteen the number he has lost in the same manner since last March. Feinstein says he is the victim of some one who is determined to ruin him and he will pay $1,000 reward for the apprehension and conviction of the guilty person.

Feinstein has reported the loss of his eighteen horses to the police of New York and Hoboken and Inspector McCafferty, of New York, has detailed detectives to investigate the case.

Shat at Rabbit, Hit Companion.

Long Branch, Nov. 14.—While hunting rabbits at Colts' Neck on Monday Garret Bodine, a local architect, was shot and severely wounded by Edward Taylor. The latter lives at Colts Neck and joined Bodine and his party early on Monday. Bodine was on the bank when Taylor fired at a rabbit. He was in the gully at the time, not over twenty-five feet away. Taylor missed the rabbit, but hit Bodine. Five shots entered his left foot and eighteen penetrated his right leg. Bodine was removed to his home. His attending physician thinks he will recover.

Hunter's Odd Mishap May Be Fatal.

Trenton, Nov. 14.—While looking for rabbits yesterday Abraham Worthington, seventy-eight years old, of Newtown, Pa., was so seriously injured that his death is momentarily expected. He is now at St. Francis' Hospital, this city. He slipped upon a stone, fracturing his jaw and driving a piece of the bone into his brain.

MURDER TRIAL STARTED.

Port Reading Man Accused of Shooting a Wedding Guest Faces Jury at New Brunswick.

New Brunswick, Nov. 14.—Before Supreme Court Justice Francis J. Swayze here yesterday, Imre Szake, of Port Reading, was placed in trial, charged with the murder of Michael Monari on August 12 last. This is the second murder trial that has come up here this term.

A coincidence lies in the fact that five members of the jury that recently convicted Pasquale Delisio of murder in the first degree were drawn on the panel that is trying Szake. They are Harry Van Cleef, Thomas Smith, Henry G. Garretson, Ernest L. Stults and James E. McDowell.

In opening for the State yesterday Prosecutor George Berdine said that the murder occurred at a wedding celebration, and that Monari, while standing in a crowd, was deliberately shot down, the slayer then making his escape.

Miss Dorothy Fleming, of Park avenue, who underwent an operation a few days ago, is steadily improving.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Nov. 17: "Personal evangelism." "The natural method."—John i, 40-42, 45, 46. "He findeth first His own brother."

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

Passages for reference—John iii, 1, etc.; iv, 7, etc.; ix, 35-38; Acts viii, 26, etc.; xx, 20; Eccl. xi, 4-6; Matt. v, 14-16.

Some people seem gifted far above the ordinary in the work of personal evangelism. They possess a power of persuasion, an attractive personality, a certain magnetism, which are powerful for influencing others. At least so it seems to those who have never had any particular success in this kind of endeavor.

Yet a close study of their gifts and methods will often surprise one, for in most cases these most successful ones are not specially gifted with eloquence, are frequently not highly educated and lack many qualities they would naturally be supposed to have.

Careful attention to the cases referred to in our Scripture passages will show the secret of success, which is exceedingly simple.

It is not enough to say these people were in earnest. Multitudes are in earnest who never accomplish what they desire and strive hard to effect.

But these people acted naturally. They were not playing a part. They never thought of doing otherwise. There was no posing, no striving for effect, no self consciousness and wondering what others would say. They sought no other end but just the simple one of influencing the person they were after. They had a single aim. That, however, was only a condition and not the real cause of their success. The real power lay in three items.

First, in each case living contact had been had with a thrilling truth. Andrew had not only been in touch with John Baptist; he had been touched by the personality of Jesus. As surely as the electric spark follows the closing of an electric circuit, so surely does personality act on personality. Whoever is touched by a true man or woman receives an impulse intellectual or moral. Power radiates from personality by look, tone, gesture. Jesus was ever filled beyond all measuring by the spirit of the Father, and all who came under His influence felt the gracious power of the divine personality. The supreme reality of existence in moral life touched each of these. This is the first prime necessity for all evangelism—yes, for all vigorous, healthy, natural religious development.

Secondly, this divine touch of truth awakened the real spirit life within them and made them active, alert, to impart what they had received. Anything electrically charged will communicate to any other body it touches under proper conditions the same electrical condition it has itself. So with men. When touched by a great truth we not only have an intellectual insight, but we have an impulse to action. We must act and be in accord with our knowledge. We become charged with force and crave to communicate that power to others.

Then comes the third fact. We impart of our spirit to others. So with Andrew and Peter. So with Jesus and the woman of Sychar, Philip and the eunuch. So with every one who has ever had an atom of evangelistic power.

If you have never lifted ony one, search and find the lack. Have you ever been touched by God? Have you thrilled under the divine power? Have you longed to touch others into life? This is life worth living.

True Enjoyment.

The best way for a man rightly to enjoy himself is to maintain a universal, ready and cheerful compliance with the divine and uncreated will in all things, as knowing that nothing can issue and flow forth from the fountain of goodness but that which is good, and therefore a good man is never offended with any piece of divine dispensation, nor hath he any reluctancy against that will that dictates and determines all things by an eternal rule of goodness; as knowing that there is an unbounded and almighty love that without any disdain or envy freely communicates itself to everything He made, that always infolds those in His everlasting arms who are made partakers of His own image, perpetually nourishing and cherishing them with the fresh and vital influences of His grace.—Dr. John Smith.

Is This to Be Your Symphony?

To live content with small means, to seek elegance rather than luxury and refinement rather than fashion; to be worthy, not respectable, and wealthy, not rich; to study hard, think quickly, talk gently, act frankly; to listen to stars and birds, to babes and songs, with open heart; to hear all cheerfully, do all bravely, await occasions, hurry never—in a word, to let the spiritual unbidden and unconscious grow up through the common—this is to be my symphony.—Channing.

Done For the Master.

One day to a humble dwelling
A weary traveler came,
And she who came out to meet him
Paused not to ask his name,
But brought a cup of cold water
And a crust that love made sweet
And bade him sit down at the threshold
And quench his thirst and eat.

Years after, the story runneth,
Death came to that humble door
And brought to the woman this message,
"Come home—thy work is o'er."
But she cried, "All empty handed
I must meet the Master kind
And say, 'One sheaf for harvest
I sought, but could not find.'"

But when she came to the Master
He smiled in her face and cried,
"Thou gavest a draft of water
To one who else had died,
And, lo, as to him thou gavest
The draft to me was giv'n."
And the heart of her who heard Him
Was the happiest one in heav'n!

—Eben E. Rexford in Forward.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 17, 1907.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Wanted—Men for Gideon's band. —Judg. vii, 2-7.

If we look over the advertising columns of our daily newspaper we will see some like this, "Wanted—Men"—men for various occupations in life. Our topic is such an appeal, "Wanted—Men"—men for Gideon's band. And in this appeal for men we may see the call of God. The men of Gideon's band were God's men, chosen by Him to do a special work for Him. Now do employers who advertise for men always find the kind of men they want. There are large numbers of men and many of them seeking for positions, but too many of them are unqualified to do any special kind of work and therefore are practically useless. God has the same difficulty. There are many men associated with His church and yet so few really qualified to do the important work which He has for them to do. An old philosopher once went through the streets of Athens with a lantern seeking for a man, but we are not told that he was eminently successful in his search. God once commanded Jeremiah to run to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem to see if he could find a man—one who was honest and upright and such a one as God could approve. Nor are we told how successful the prophet was in his mission. It is therefore not such an easy thing to find the men God wants for His service.

The intimation of the topic is that God wants Gideon band men. This leads to the inquiry, What kind of men were members of Gideon's band? The story of Gideon's land is a most interesting and inspiring one. Gideon was the fifth of the judges of Israel. He was called upon to deliver Israel from the oppression of the Midianites. He sounded his trumpet, and 32,000 men rallied to his standard. This was a larger army than God wanted, lest the people might think they delivered themselves out of the hand of the enemy. The timid were allowed to withdraw, and 22,000 stepped out of the line. At the "well of testing" 9,700 more were eliminated, and only 300 of the 32,000 remained, but with this small band the Midianites were defeated and a glorious victory won. Gideon was their leader, and their battlecry was, "The sword of the Lord and Gideon!"

What kind of men, therefore, were the Gideon band men whom God wants today to do His work? (1) They were men who placed their dependence upon God rather than upon man. They were not afraid because 31,700 of their original number were left behind, for their dependence for victory was in God, as is shown by their cry, "The sword of the Lord and Gideon!" The Lord was placed before Gideon. First of all, their trust was in Him. They struck "for God and their native land." Such men God wants today in His service—spiritual men who depend upon spiritual agencies rather than upon temporal ones. Though numbers are never to be despised, yet they realized that "with God all things are possible." The tendency today is to trust too much in numbers and external ecclesiastical machinery. We need to get closer to God and to realize more fully and practically that "It is not by might nor by power, but by My spirit, saith the Lord." A few spirit filled men can accomplish for God far more than thousands who depend upon human strength and plans. Spiritual labor requires spiritual laborers. (2) They were tested men. God had tested their courage, and it was not found wanting. A coward cannot do God's work. He wants courageous men, men of convictions, who are not afraid to stand by their convictions even in the face of ridicule and opposition. God also put these men to a second test, which involved their earnestness and consecration. They were required to drink at a well, and only those who drank without kneeling were acceptable. The lapping of the water standing showed earnestness. They were to engage in battle and had no time to waste while drinking. It also proved that they were not accustomed to bowing to Baal, and thus their separation to God was made manifest. God today wants earnest, whole hearted and consecrated men. A lazy man can do nothing for Him. A man who is living a worldly life cannot fight His battles. Which are we? If we do not possess the qualifications for serving God, let us seek them through an earnest consecration of ourselves to Him in Jesus Christ.

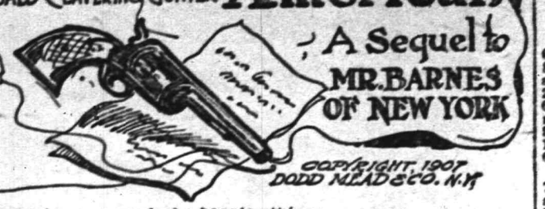
Many Sidedness of Christian Endeavor.

I marvel sometimes at the many sidedness of our Christian Endeavor work. Born in large part out of an idea that the best Christian development is brought about through exercise, Christian Endeavor has come to stand for much that may properly be termed unusual in our church life. In very many instances it has seen an unusual opportunity not strictly within its sphere and yet a task that needed doing. True to its best, it has put itself to doing the particular thing and by the power of its example has opened the eyes of those who ought to have seen the duty. Then it has been Christian Endeavor's good sense after having put the proper forces to work, to leave this duty in the hands where it rightfully belonged and itself pass on to other pioneer work for the good of humanity and the glory of the Christ.—John R. Clements in Christian Endeavor World.

Mr. Barnes, American

By ARCHIBALD CLAVERING GUNTER

Author of MR. BARNES OF NEW YORK, MR. POTTER OF TEXAS, THAT FRENCHMAN, ETC.



A Sequel to MR. BARNES OF NEW YORK

COPYRIGHT, 1907, DODD MEAD & CO. N.Y.

Clambering over the sea-washed rocks, they reach the green woodland, and soon through its soft foliage of ilex, beech and wild citron, tread a romantic path that leads them to the more dusty highway which skirts the coast, slightly to the south of the little quay of Sagone. This Marina says is fortunate, that they need not excite curiosity by passing through the seaside village to reach the road to Vico, by which they will strike east to reach the vast glen between Monte Rotondo and Monte Del Oro.

A little while along this road, roasting beneath the hot sun and stifled by the dust of early summer, when Marina says, pointing to a farmer's house: "Stay here and I'll bargain for the use of two of the native ponies I see in his barnyard."

A few minutes of apparently excited gesticulation and talk with the peasant who is hoeing in his field, and she brings into the road two sturdy, shaggy brown ponies.

Mounting astride one of these, Corsican fashion, Marina says almost gaily: "We have the beasts for a week at 30 francs apiece. Now I feel at home again."

Upon the other Barnes would dash forward, but some very serious words from his companion stop him. "It was lucky I saw that farmer. He said: 'I would give you a more gentle beast, girl, had not four men three hours ago engaged my gentle Mandalina for a lady's use. Of course, my best was at Signore Saliceti's order. I had heard him speak up in the mountains at the polling booth great words on the glory of Corsica, which had given France a Bonaparte and one day would give her another.'"

Suddenly the girl calls: "But you cannot overtake Enid in a second," for the American's heels are beating a tattoo on the sides of his sturdy little cob, and he is hurrying forward muttering: "Three hours ahead of me. Perhaps we can overtake my darling before night!"

"Don't ride so fast," exclaims his companion, galloping her pony to him. Then her voice growing very solemn, she says warningly: "From some hilltop, should we get too near, they will see us coming, and in a vendetta ambush, some knife might reach not only your heart but—Enid's. When you have enemies in Corsica, beware the path ahead of you!"

CHAPTER XII.
The Mountain Chalet.

Forced to a more moderate pace, the two journey up the winding road between some cornfields made red by poppies. Soon after they pass into the wooded hill lands, their path bordered by myrtles and arbutus.

After a little, the way grows wilder, the hills much steeper, and climbing the lofty Colle di San Antonio they can look down upon hill vistas, beautifully wooded, that descend to the distant sea. In the sunlit gleam of the far-off water, Barnes, using his field glasses, sees the yacht lying alone at anchor. "Graham has sent back the fishing smack," he says.

"Then thank the Virgin," cries Marina, "another letter is going to my husband telling him his disobedient wife is trying to save his sister."

They descend sharply into the little valley of the Liamone, and enter the village of Vico, whose inn is now welcoming the first summer visitors from Ajaccio.

Here Marina says: "'Twould be wrong if I sent not a telegram to my anxious spouse." So they dismount at the little telegraph office peculiar to Corsican villages. As they slip in, a countryman slouches out and mounting a horse rides off up the main street. Her message dispatched, Marina coming from the office, says: "How hurriedly that fellow went away."

"You think he was looking for us?" asks Barnes, as he places her on her pony.

"Perhaps; Bernardo is astute. He may guess that his message to you brought you after him by water and that you would find the yacht."

"Then after him!" says Burton, and turning more to the east they follow a rapid stream, passing the Sulphur Baths of Guagno, where they can see the diligence depositing patients at its hospital for rheumatics.

They have not overtaken the man, but no one has passed them on the road, their pace has been so rapid. The peasants they have seen, so many of them carrying guns that Barnes thinks he is in the Rocky Mountains, have received the usual greetings in the patois of the country from Marina, her escort wisely keeping his sombrero pulled down over his eyes and saying nothing. But now a farmer, pausing, says: "Girl, you and your man had better not go beyond Guagno. Last night the two accursed bandits, Rochini and his mate, killed Nicolo, the sheep grower, up at his house by the lake, and carried off his daughter."

"Thank you for your advice," answers Marina politely. She glances at Barnes, but he scarcely heeds. He is urging his pony toward the mountain pass through which Enid must now be journeying.

"Who is this Rochini?" asks Barnes, to take Mrs. Anstruther's thoughts to happier things.

"He and his fellows are the only bandits of which Corsica is not proud," answers the girl, savagely. "This wretch with his underlings murders men for money. Other bandits only kill for hate or to escape capture by the gendarmes. Also this Rochini drags shrieking women to his lair, while other bandits doff their hats to ladies."

Then as they ride along the Corsican girl gives Mr. Barnes some curious information about bandits.

"This murderous Rochini is not of our commune; he has been driven from Rotondo by the farmers because of his outrages and came over to Del Oro," she remarks, excitedly. "Our own Bocognano bandits, the brave Bellacoscia," Marina's tone is proud, "whose family name is Bonelli, only fled to the mountains to escape pursuit from our cruel gendarmes, because, forsooth, the elder Antonio killed Marc' Angeli, who dared to marry the girl upon whom he had set his heart. The younger, Giacomo, because he would not endure the French conscription, so he slew the brigadier and his men who came to arrest him. Still Antonio Bonelli, when the Teutons overran France, offered to go over and fight the German Von Moltke with his 500 Bellacoscia—brothers, sons, grandsons and nephews—if they would give him safe conduct from arrest. At first Monsieur Gambetta accepted, then he refused, fearing there might be a new Bonaparte among these Corsicans to again save France and rule the country."

"Oh, we are devoted to the Bellacoscia," she continues fervidly. "Every boy by the wayside gives them warning of the gendarmes; every child picking flowers in the mountains tells them of the coming of the brigadiers who would capture or slay them. Though many men and women, some of gentle blood, are placed in prison for aiding them, the authorities never receive information from their lips. But these wretches, Rochini and Romano, are abhorred by all, and blessings would be showered on any who might bring their bodies into Bocognano."

All this has been said as they hurried through the dust and sun for three more miles. They enter the village of Guagno. There is no way of avoiding the hamlet; it stands almost at the entrance of the deep gorge between the two great mountains—besides, the ponies need rest.

"It would be better if we were not seen here," suggests Marina, "though the inn looks comfortable."

"And you must both rest and eat," remarks Barnes, who has noticed that his fragile companion, unaccustomed to the severe exercise of horseback travel in the hot sun and stifling dust, is somewhat fatigued.

They ride up to the auberge, dismount and give their ponies to the care of a Corsican boy, who leads them away.

Entering, they are met by the loquacious landlord, who tells them, as they demand a hurried meal, that business is not very brisk, the season being too early for many invalids at the baths, besides all travellers are kept from the mountains beyond by fear of Rochini and Romano.

"May the curse of God rest on them—they spoil my business even down here," says the hotel man savagely as he goes to bring the food.

"I do not think you had better go with me farther," remarks Barnes seriously.

"What, stand back because a murderer threatens the way to Enid?" cries Marina. "Besides, you can shoot your pistol."

"Then may God curse me if I let harm come to you for your devotion to my wife," returns the American with grateful eyes.

"Then I'm safe," says the Corsican girl simply, who has supreme faith in the deadly marksmanship of her escort.

From the little garden outside, the conversation of two rustics drifts in to them. One is apparently a local wool buyer, the other a shepherd from the neighboring mountain, who is bargaining with him for his shearing.

A moment later their host places the dinner in front of them. "Here are trout from our Liamone, a filch of mouffion killed on Rotondo and some chianti made from the vines outside. Real mouffion, real chianti, besides chestnuts from my own grove!" he remarks proudly, as he arranges their knives and forks.

"You have also a few visitors, I presume, to eat them?" queries Marina, sympathetically.

"Oh, none to-day; there are not enough invalids at the baths; the season is too early. Besides, young Saliceti didn't stop here with his party, but hurried on three hours ago. Does that young statesman expect to get the vote of Vincenzo, the landlord? Not even a drink of wine did he buy. But the reprobate has an eye for beauty if not for political influence. A yellow-haired girl was with him, though his followers kept so close about her I could not see her face. But I give you additional warning. To-night you must stay in my inn. Toward the mountains there is another bandit, an extra one."

"An extra bandit!" Barnes opens his eyes.

"How do you know that?" asks Marina.

"How? Why, even the accursed Rochini and his fellow, who murder men and seize women, never steal from me, who fearing their knives give them wine and warning of the gendarmes; but this new fellow sneaks down at night and eats my chickens. May Satan take him, he has the appetite of a table d'hote!"

"Nevertheless, we must risk the unprofessional chicken thief and go to the mountains," says Marina determinedly, as she goes away, attended by mine host, to make preparations for her departure.

Barnes, having five minutes for a whiff, produces his cigar case, but some words entering from the two rustics amid the vines of the garden outside, cause him to forget even his last cigar.

Their trade being closed, they are now discussing local news. "Diavolo," remarks the wool trader, "did you meet young Saliceti on the road?"

"Aye, that I did, three miles above, near the waterfall. To me he said: 'Good Luigi, shall I have your vote for deputy?' 'That you will,' said I, 'great Saliceti, when you perform your oath of vendetta against the Americano who came to Bocognano and by De Belloc's soldiers killed the man who would have been your father-in-law.' 'Then I shall have it,' he cried. 'Just wait here for a couple of hours, and you'll see it done.' But I had to meet you to sell my wool, besides I remembered Rochini and his murderous gun, and so I came along."

"Cospetto, if Saliceti does it, he has my vote also!" cries the wool trader. "The crafty politician must have the Americano trapped somehow. It was rumored that the devil fled with the Englishman whom Mademoiselle Paoli wedded, though he had slain her brother. Santos, may death come to a girl who for lust betrays her race."

To this Barnes listens impatiently but seriously.

"This political hustler wants to sacrifice me on their altar of vengeance, so as to draw their votes," cogitates Barnes savagely. "By the Eternal, he shall have an ox at his barbecue who will disagree with his stomach!"

There is a peculiar glint in the American's eyes as, five minutes later, he places Marina carefully upon her pony, and they leave the inn. He now asks almost lightly: "By the bye, Madame Anstruther, do you know a waterfall some three miles up this path?" For all traces of a wagon road have ended at Guagno, leaving only a little bridle path that runs up the foaming Liamone, which, contracted in its banks, has become a torrent.

Marina thinks a moment; then says: "Oh, yes; I remember a mountain trail often travelled as a girl. But it is very steep."

"Would you kindly show it to me when we come to it?"

They dash up the gorge for half a mile and she says sharply, "It is here," pointing to a steep ascent that, cumbered by ferns and wild flowers, makes a most unpromising roadway. Then she catches her breath and whispers: "You expect an ambush?" for the American has now his rifle on the saddle in front of him, western fashion, and his pistols ready in his belt.

"I do," answered Barnes and relates the words of the shepherd.

"Quick!" cries the girl. "This trail will take you right up Del Oro, where you can look down on Bocognano. By it, you will get between your enemies and your destination."

"My destination is my wife. She is in this valley with those men."

"Oh, I think not. Saliceti is too crafty. He is still conveying Enid to Bocognano and has left only some of his followers to slay you. Come on."

Barnes follows his guide up the steep little path, that covered with vines and wild flowers is difficult to discern, but after they had gone a few hundred yards, the rocks growing larger, the trail more precipitous, Marina says: "Here we must leave our ponies and climb on foot." So they pasture the two hardy little brutes in a vale full of soft grasses and leave them munching contentedly, Barnes, slinging his haversack over his shoulder, Marina having nothing to carry with her.

We are constantly and consistently striving to make this a superior store. No detail is too trivial or no project too large for us to consider when the betterment of our store service is concerned. The big Bamberger organization, New Jersey's most popular trading place, offers greater advantages today than ever before, and those who make a practise of selecting Holiday presents before the real rush sets in will find it vastly to their advantage to spend at least a portion of the day in roaming from one department to the other and investigating the many rich and beautiful things which we have already prepared for the Christmas trade.

TRACK ATHLETES ACTIVE

Y. M. C. A. Gymnasts Have Begun Regular Practise for Winter Season.

WILL COMPETE FOR RECORDS.

Season Opens Next Month with a Dual Indoor Meet with Orange Y. M. C. A.—Contests to Break Records.

As the cold weather comes on, much interest is being shown in indoor track athletics at the Y. M. C. A. and a good sized squad of members is holding regular practise in the various events after the weekly Thursday evening classes.

The track season for the association athletes starts early next month and on Saturday evening, December 7, the Y. M. C. A. gym team will go to Orange to participate in a dual track meet with the association team there. The events on that occasion will be the running high jump, standing broad jump, 220-yard potato race, 15-yard dash, three standing broad jumps, fence vault, and 12-pound shot put. There are several promising candidates among the new material and it is believed that a good percentage of last year's team will compete in the various events. George H. Listman, physical director of the association, is planning to arrange similar duel track meets to be held with the association teams of nearby cities, but has not yet announced no other dates.

There is a well developed spirit among the present members of the physical department to make some new indoor records and Physical Director Listman has arranged a schedule for evenings during the winter where opportunity will be given such prospective record smashers to make good. Several of the men are practising regulary in the special events, and in some instances the present record holders will attempt to better their own figures. The association record of 6 feet 5½ inches in the fence vault, held by E. N. Marclay, has stood since the winter of 1898, and figures for the running high jump, the running high dive, the 12-pound shot put, the running high kick and the 440-yard potato race have not been bettered since 1904. New records for the standing broad jump, three standing broad jumps, the running long dive, the running and standing high jump, the standing hop, skip and jump, and the running broad jump were made last winter, but the holders are in several cases out to do better this year.

Opportunity to better the association records will be given on the following dates through the winter:

December 12—Standing broad jump. Record, 10 feet 1¼ inches, made by R. J. Lawrence, 1907.

December 9—Two standing broad jumps. Record, 18 feet 8 inches, made by W. P. Banks, 1906.

January 3—Running hop, step and jump. Record, 35 feet 3 inches, made by C. T. Burgess, 1906.

January 9—Fence vault. Record, 6 feet 5½ inches, made by E. N. Marclay, 1898.

January 16—Three standing broad jumps. Record, 30 feet 11 inches, made by R. J. Lawrence, 1907.

January 23—Running high jump. Record, 5 feet 3½ inches, made by W. L. McNaughton, 1904.

January 30—Running high dive. Record, 5 feet 11 inches, made by W. L. McNaughton, 1904.

February 6—Shot put (12-pound). Record, 40 feet 3½ inches, made by O. H. Munger, 1904.

February 13—Running long dive. Record, 11 feet 3 inches, made by H. Douglass, 1907.

February 20—Running high kick. Record, 8 feet 4 inches, made by W. L. McNaughton, 1904.

February 27—Potato race (440 yards). Record, 1:43 3-5, made by R. M. Smith, 1904.

March 5—Standing high jump. Record, 4 feet 5½ inches, made by W. Luder, 1907.

March 12—Running broad jump. Record, 17 feet 9¼ inches, made by C. D. Burges, 1907.

March 19—Standing hop, skip and jump. Record, 27 feet 11 inches, made by R. J. Lawrence, 1907.

March 26—Running high jump (with spring board). Record, 6 feet 6 inches, made by C. D. Burgess, 1907.

P. H. S. BOYS TROUNCED

Lawrenceville Second Team Finds Local Eleven An Easy Thing.

SEVENTEEN TO NOTHING SCORE.

At End of First Half 10 to 0—Local Team Outweighed—Good Wory By Locals In Second Half.

Outweighed by their opponents about twelve pounds to the man, the city high school football eleven was defeated by a score of 17-0 by the Lawrenceville second team on Hope Common yesterday afternoon. The visitors seemed a bunch of giants when lined up against the local team, but the high school players fought for every yard, and their playing on the whole showed a big improvement. There was a marked absence of fumbling by the local boys and only once did the ball slip. They held their husky opponents for downs several times and the ends held well. The playing of Doolin, the left-half-back for the visitors, was a feature of the game. Though he weighs but about 130 pounds and was dwarfed by the other backs, he is captain of the team and played fast football behind the line, being especially good in finding holes when running with the ball.

The high school were never within striking distance of the Lawrenceville goal. They made their best gains by trick plays and the use of the forward pass and end runs. Only occasionally could they gain ground through the heavy line. The playing of the ends showed especial improvement. Captain Loizeaux, whose place was taken by Riffert in the second half, showed good headwork in running off his plays and Murphey's punting put the high school goal out of danger time after time.

The visitors scored twice in the first half, using formation plays which massed their weight and made the power of their attack too great for the lighter high school defense. Doolin scored the first touchdown and kicked the goal and Foster scored later in the half on a quarterback run. The score at the end of the half stood 11-0.

In the second half, the visitors tried new and less successful formations and were, on the whole, unsuccessful in their use of the forward pass. The high school got wise to their plays and massed their defense to meet them. There was a good deal of punting, Murphey on several occasions booting the ball into safe territory for the local eleven. Though this was the longer of the halves, tre visitors scored but once, Doolin crossing the line and kicking the goal. The summaries:

N. P. H. S. BOYS DEFEAT WESTFIELD HIGH 10-0

The North Plainfield High School football eleven continued its good work yesterday by defeating the team from the Westfield high school by the score of 10 to 0. The teams were very evenly matched in regard to weight, but the borough boys played a snappy and fast game which their opponents could not seem to overcome.

George Parsons made a break in Westfield's forward pass, for a fifty yard run, and a touchdown. McClintock kicked the goal. Day gave an exhibition of two fine tackles and held his position against all odds. Fred Becker was credited with several pretty steals and regains of fumbled ball. An exciting feature of the contest was the kicking of a goal by Overton from a drop kick. Neither team scored in the first half, the borough lads playing their best and strongest game in the second half. They are much elated over the victory and feel sure that they will be able to defeat P. H. S. on Saturday. Yesterday's lineup follows:

N. P. H. S.—F. McClintock, right-end; Will Day, right-tackle; C. Steiner, right-guard; L. Powlison, and C. Lee, center; F. Becker, left-guard; H. Smith, left-tackle; W. Hermann, left-end; G. Parsons, right-half-back; B. McClintock, full-back; T. Overton, left-half-back; R. Conroy, quarter-back.

REED SENTENCED TO 8 YEARS.

Newark Man Shot and Killed Thomas J. Barrett, of Roebling.

Mount Holly, Nov. 14.—Having been convicted for shooting Thomas J. Barrett, of Roebling, George R. Reed, of Newark, was yesterday afternoon sentenced to eight years in the State prison. The prisoner almost fainted when the words fell from Judge Horner's lips. To another charge for attempting to break jail he pleaded guilty. Deputy Sheriff Fleetwood says there is a warrant here for the arrest of Reed.

While president of a labor union of Brooklyn, it is charged he stole $2,000 of the funds of that organization and went to California. Reed is the sole support of his family, consisting of his mother, crippled sister and his little son, who is almost blind.

It Still Stands, But Not In Its Original Location—It Was in the Spring of 1780 That This Incident Took Place.

One of Morristown's most interesting old houses is the Dr. Jabez Campfield residence, which, though antedating the Revolution, still stands, though not in its original location. If the walls of this old dwelling could speak what tales of love it could tell and what sweet phrases of courtship it might whisper, for in this house Alexander Hamilton wooed and won for his wife pretty Elizabeth Schuyler.

It was in the spring of 1780, when Washington's army was encamped about Morristown, that this pretty incident took place. This house was at that time the quarters of the Surgeon-General of the American forces, Dr. John Cochran. Mrs. Cochran was the only sister of General Philip Schuyler, whose daughter, Elizabeth, a charming young woman of 22 years, spent several months of that year as a visitor at her aunt's home.

Colonel Alexander Hamilton, who was one of General Washington's aides, was a frequent visitor to the quarters of the Surgeon-General while Miss Schuyler was there. In fact, Miss Schuyler was the principal reason for the Colone'l visits, and the courtship which resulted in the subsequent marriage of the couple was conducted almost entirely in this old residence.

Tradition has it that one night Hamilton was returning from a visit to Miss Schuyler when he was ordered to halt and give the countersign by one of his own men. It seems that a young lad of the neighborhood, by permission of the commander-in-chief, was given the countersign that he might go to the village every night. This lad was a great favorite with Hamilton, and on this occasion the youth had just passed through the lines on his return from the village when he heard Hamilton's voice. He stopped and waited, with the intention of walking with him.

When asked for the word Hamilton was embarrassed, for he could not think of it. The sentinel was stern in the performance of his duty, and Hamilton pressed his hands upon his forehead and tried in vain to summon the necessary word to his mind. Just then he spied the boy and, stepping aside, called to him, and Hamilton, stepping again in the path, gave it to the sentinel.

The sentinel, however, had seen the tactics of his superior, and, believing that he was being tested, kept his bayonnet unmoved. "I have given you the countersign; why do you not shoulder your musket?" said Colonel Hamilton.

"Will that do, Colonel?" asked the soldier, in reply.

"It will do for this time," said Hamilton, "Let me pass!" The soldier reluctantly obeyed the illegal command, and Colonel Hamilton and his young friend were allowed to proceed to their destination.

Sold Impure Milk—Fined $200.

Long Branch, Nov. 14.—Before Justice Henry Schoenlein yesterday four State Board of Health milk cases were tried, and fines aggregating $350 were imposed. There were three cases against the Slawson-Decker & Sheffield Farms Company for selling adulterated cream. Judgment for $50 and costs was rendered in each case in favor of the State Board of Health. William D. Van Schaick, of Asbury Park, three times convicted of selling impure milk, was fined $200 and costs. State Inspectors D. C. Bowen and Jerome Graves were the plaintiffs in each case.

SWIFT-WINGED JUSTICE.

Murder Trial Ends in Sentence in Less Than 12 Hours.

New Brunswick, Nov. 14.—Another example of the way in which murder trials are conducted with dispatch in New Jersey was shown here yesterday, when Imri Szoeke, an 18-year-old Hungarian, was tried for the murder of Micnael Monari at Port Reading on August 12.

The trial began at 10:30 a. m.; by 3 p. m. the jury had been drawn and the State had presented its case; at the end of the afternoon session all of the defense was in; last night Justice Swayze charged the jury, which in less than an hour found Szoeke guilty of manslaughter, and Justice Swayze sentenced him to ten years.

Szoeke asked the court to assign him to a trade, and the justice said that he had nothing to do with that. Szoeke is happy at the jail today, not having expected to get off so easily.

Working For Bank For Negroes.

Mrs. Margaret L. Walker, the president of the St. Luke's Saving Bank, of Richmond, Va., has been spending several days in Newark trying to arouse interest among the negroes in that city and vicinity by the proposed establishment there of a branch bank of the Richmond institution and the opening of a department store. Mrs. Walker is the right worthy grand secretary of the Order of St. Luke and the bank of Richmond is the repository of its funds. She was the first woman to be elected as president of a bank in the United States, and has been making a tour of the various councils of the order in the State. She was for many years a teacher in the public schools of Richmond, and is an eloquent speaker. She is also managing editor of "The St. Luke's Herald," the official organ of the order.

Fined for Beating Horse with Shovel.

Summit, Nov. 14.—Before Justice of the Peace Albert P. Cain, in Springfield, Tuesday, George Mines, a teamster of this city, was convicted on a charge preferred by Colonel Edwards, of the S. P. C. A., of having beaten with a shovel a horse which Mines was driving and which was owned by Edward Parsil, of this city. John Collins, of Springfield, testified that he had seen Mines strike the animal about twenty blows with the shovel, but did not feel as though he should ipterfere. Dr. McIntosh, a veterinarian of this city, testified that the animal died from heart trouble. 'Squire Cain imposed a fine of $15, which, with costs, amounted to $20.80, which was paid.

MUSICIANS WIN APPLAUSE

First Recital in the Series of Chamber Music Concerts Pleases Large Audience.

THE THIRD SEASON BEGINS.

Under the Direction of Joseph McIntyre—Artists of a High Order Presented to Plainfield Public.

Joseph McIntyre opened his third season of Chamber Music Concerts at the Casino, last night, before an appreciative throng of music-loving people. The well selected program together with the famous artists awakened an enthusiasm seldom witnessed at similar affairs. Mr. McIntyre as pianist, was assisted by Vladimer Dubinsky, 'cellist, who has already won much favor with Plainfield people; Maurice Kaufman, violinist, while the assisting artist was Mme. Shanna Cumming, of Brooklyn, soprano. They combined to afford an evening of great enjoyment to all present.

The program opened with the charming trio in A minor by Gade, which consists of five short movements, the first being an Allegro scherzando, followed by the Andantino in E. major. The third movement gives a glimpse of some peasant festival, followed by the song-like Larghetto. The finale is a merry movement and is a good example of the best effort of the famous composer. The rendition of these numbers left nothing to be desired and won hearty applause.

Mme. Cumming gave the next two numbers, Handel (1685-1759), "Oh Sleep, Why Dost Thou Leave Me?" (from Semele,) and "Qual Farfalletta" (from "Partenope,") and singing at once aroused the audience to enthusiastic applause. The unusual sweetness of her voice, together with its high range were marked features. In three numbers given later, together with "Darby and Joan," as an encore, the soprano completely won her audience. The three selections were "I'm Wearing Awa', Jean," Foote; "I Mind the Day, Achray," Willeby, and "O Come With Me in the Summer Night," Van der Stucken. Mme. Cumming showed complete mastery and especially noticeable was her clear articulation.

Not the least enjoyable of the numbers was the work of Mr. Kaufman, violinist. Although a stranger to a majority of those present he left an impression that will insure for him a cordial reception should he return to Plainfield again. Aside from his delightful rendition in the trio number and in the final numbers with 'cello and piano, his selections, Grieg (1843-1907), Sonata op. 45. Allegro molto ed appassionate, Allegretto espressive al la Romanza and Allegro animato, gave him ample opportunity to display his ability. His notes were true and the intrepretation delightful.

The final numbers, by request, were "Daybreak," and "Anitra's Dance," from Peer Gynt Suite, and they proved a fitting close to the program. While the audience was not favored with any solo work by Mr. Dubinsky, his part in the various numbers was greatly appreciated. As an accompanist Mr. McIntyre was as enjoyable as ever, and gave a finish to the rendition of the program. At the next concert Carl Dufft, the well-known basso, will be heard. This will be on December 19.

Percy S. Dayton, of East Front street, and Miss Ida May Mills, of Elizabeth, were quietly married last night at the Methodist church, Elizabeth. Dunbar, of Craig place, acted as best man, and Mrs. Dunbar was matron of honor. The newly married couple will reside in this city, after a short honeymoon.

DISSATISFIED BOROUGHITES BEFORE COUNTY TAX BOARD

Today is "Kickers' Day" in the borough. The property owners who are dissatisfied with their tax assessments as made up by local Assessor Justus H. Cooley can register their complaints before the Somerset County Board for the Equalization of Taxes. This Board went into session in the North Plainfield Council chamber this morning at 10 o'clock, and received "kicks" from the boroughites all the morning, adjourning for lunch at 1 o'clock to meet again in the afternoon. P. V. D. Van Dorn, of Somerville, president of the Board, was in the chair, and both the others members, S. A. Kenney, of Somervile, and Mayor N. B. Smalley, of the borough, were present. T. G. Windsor, of Somerville, acted as secretary of the Board.

In comparison with last year, there seem to be fewer complaints for adjustment of taxes imposed. There were about twenty-five boroughites who believe Assessor Cooley didn't figure just right in their particular case at the Council chamber during the morning, and many of these were women. The claims were based on proportionate valuations as secured from some neighbor's tax bill, and the local assessor had his books there to state his reasons for the values imposed. It is reported tht there were very few changes in the budget as made up and sent out on the various tax bills.

NAB A HORSE THIEF 'WAY FROM KALAMAZOO

George Remanter, a negro, happened into Elizabeth yesterday morning on a freight train, all the way from Kalamazoo, Mich., and seeing a horse and buggy in front of the Central Railroad office, in that city, untied the horse, jumped in and drove off. He had gone a few hundred yards when the owner of the rig, George R. Townley, a veteran of the Civil war and the local freight collector, came out of the office. A clerk in a nearby store told him that he had seen the rig going at a lively gait up Broad street. Townley ran up the street and hailed an automobile, said to belong to Senator Kean, and told the driver of the theft. Mr. Townley was asked to jump in, and the machine sped up the street at lively clip.

The negro had secured a good start, and a few miles were passed before the auto got near enough for its occupants to get a glimpse at the missing rig. Then a few extra notches were thrown out, and at Newark and Fairmont avenues the machine swerved directly in front of the horse, frightening it so that it reared on its hind legs and almost threw the driver out.

Remanter didn't realize what was up before Townley, who is 70 years old, leaped to the ground, seized the whip from its socket and, flourishing it, warned the negro not to make a suspicious move. Remanter was inclined to fight but thought better of it, and, with the big auto behind as a rear guard, drove back to the freight office.

Arrived there Remanter made a dash for liberty, and another chase followed, this time on foot. It didn't last long, for Constable Henry Carroll happened along and into his arms the negro ran, and was handcuffed in a twinkling. He will be given a hearing.

Senator Kean, when asked last night if it was his auto that took part in the capture of the negro, said that all that he knew about it was what he had seen in the afternoon papers, and that he had no part in or knowledge of the affair.

MR. AND MRS. KELLER CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY.

Yesterday was the fifteenth wedding anniversary of Marshal Charles Keller, of the North Plainfield police force, and he and his wife were pleasantly surprised at their home on Harrison street, last night, when twenty-five of their friend and neighbors called at the home to extend their congratulations to the couple.

The affair was a complete surprise, and the couple received many gifts of cut glass, for it was a crystal wedding anniversary. The evening was pleasantly passed with music, games and felicitations, and at a late hour refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Keller were married in Denver, Colorado, and shortly afterwards moved to the borough. Marshal Keller has been on the North Plainfield police force for about a year.

WORK AMONG FOREIGNERS

Endeavorers to Conduct Evangelistic Campaign Among Local Italians.

THEY INVITE MISSIONARY'S AID.

C. E. Congress to Invite Rev. Antonio Arrighi, of Newark, to Assist In Their Efforts.

The congress meeting of the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union held in the Congregational church last night was well attended. A supper was served for the members by the Girls' Union Club, under the direction of Miss Alice Morgan. After the supper a question box and informal discussion of lookout committees work was led by Fred Lounsbury, Jr., chairman of the lookout committee of the local union. Members of the lookout committees of the various societies of the union were present and participated in the discission. The other members of the lookout committee are Christopher Myers, of Faith chapel; Charles Wardner, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church; Mrs. Lowry, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, and Philip Suffern, of the Congregational church.

Clarence B. La Rue, president of the local union, called the congress meeting to order, and outlined the work of the union for the coming year. He said that the local union should aim to accomplish four results; first, to make each society more effective in its own church; second, to increase the number of societies; third, to promote the fellowship of the members; fourth, to advance any righteous cause properly coming within the scope of the union as an interdominational organization. Acting on a suggestion of Joel D. De Groff, vice-president of the union, the congress decided to ask each society to prepare a pennant to be used at the coming mass meeting and at the State conventions.

Plans were made for the next congress meeting and for the next mass meeting to be held in January. At the congress the work of the missionary committee will be discussed and the missionary committee of the various societies of the union will be asked to be present. The union is contemplating the evangelization of the foreigners of Plainfield and vicinity and will invite Rev. Antonio Arrighi of the Italian Mission in New York to speak at the congress meeting on the work among the Italians. The mass meeting will be in charge of the missionary committee and will propably be devoted to home missions. Afted discussing the formation of new societies the meeting adjourned.

Miss Nellie K. Foote and Miss Valentine, district secretaries of the State Christian Endeavor Union, were present as special guests of the evening, and contributed valuable suggestions for advancing the work.

MILLIONAIRE SUICIDE OWNED LOCAL PROPERTY

Hopelessly involved financially and facing domestic bankruptcy, Charles Tracy Barney, formerly president of the Knickerbocker Trust Company, millionaire promoter, social leader, clubman and one of the best known men in New York city, shot himself in his mansion at Thirty-eighth street and Park avenue, New York city, yesterday morning. The end of his spectacular career came four hours later.

Barney at one time owned the Elkwood building in West Second street. Soon after its erection, he foreclosed a mortgage on the structure given by Charles Hunter, who then lived in West Seventh street. Barney transferred it to a New York man and later it became the property of another man who met a sudden end, William Marsh Rice, for whose death Lawyer Patrick is awaiting the death penalty at Sing Sing. The Elkwood building is now known as the New Plainfield theatre.

Barney was largely interested in real estate at Nutley, N. J.

Efficient Officers Re-elected.

At the monthly meeting of the consistory of Trinity Reformed church, last night, the retiring clerk, Edgar F. Shephard, was re-elected, as was treasurer, H. E. Gayle, and assistant treasurer, P. A. Vroom. Their past services were gratefully appreciated and the hearty thanks of the consistory were extended to each one. The clerk was instructed to convey to George Gayle, the retiring treasurer of the church for nearly nineteen years, their grateful appreciation of his many years of service.

AUTO ROAD TEST BEGINS

Twenty One Machines Started on Long Grind from Newark this Afternoon.

A PLAINFIELD CAR ENTERED.

Route Lies Through This City and Autos Will Pass On Front Street Five Times.

Starting from Newark at 2 o'clock this afternoon, twenty-one automobiles began a twenty-four-hour endurance contest over State roads that promises to be one of the most important motor events of the past year. It is being conducted by the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club and according to the route to be followed out, the cars will pass through Plainfield five times, on the first lap at about 5:45. They are supposed to proceed straight along Front street from Dunellen to Scotch Plains and every attempt is being made to get the block between Park and Watchung avenues in passable shape. If it cannot be used an official will turn them into Second street from Madison avenue to Richmond street.

The entries include three Mitchell cars, one of them coming from the Frank L. C. Martin Company, of this city. It will be driven the entire twenty-four hours by Frank Mazzachio, foreman of the garage, who has had a wide experience in long runs. The car is similar to the ones handled by the company and will have no special equipment added in the effort to win a prize.

Only one woman has announced that she will compete, Mrs. M. H. Rickey, of East Orange, who will drive a 40-H. P. Marmon car. Mrs. Rickey's husband was the East Orange agent for the Marmon cars, but lost his life in an automobile accident near Lake Hopatcong about a year ago. Mrs. Rickey, who understands automobiling as well as any man, has since continued the business. Another prominent driver will be Ray Owen, who will pilot the same 30 horse-power Oldsmobile which he drove last winter from New York to Ormond, Florida, the car earning the name of "Mudlark" in view of its arduous trip and the muddy roads through which it passed.

The idea of holding a twenty-four-hour run over the public roads is evidently original with the New Jersey Club. Secretary H. A. Bonnell said yesterday that the club has been trying for some time to devise an arduous test that would be a clear object lesson of the reliability and endurance of the American car. The event was not limited to American cars, but no foreign machines are entered, and the twenty-one entries represent fourteen different makes, ranging from single cylinder to six-cylinder machines.

The contest started promptly at 2 o'clock from the Auto clubhouse, and the cars were sent away at one-minute intervals. A carefully worked out plan for the running of the test has been so arranged that the running schedule calls for reasonable driving within the legal limits. It will not be possible for a car to finish the five rounds before the expiration of the twenty-four hours, as the finish of the event has been made a control, the only one in the run, and a penalty of 2 points will be inflicted upon any car arriving at the clubhouse more than three minutes before or after the scheduled time. Other penalties will be inflicted, as for stopping the motor without making repairs, 3 points; stopping the motor to make replacements, 4 points; making repairs with the motor running, 2 points.

A silver cup will be awarded to the car finishing with a perfect score, or if no car secures a perfect score, the trophy will go to the car losing the least points, and certificates will be given to each car completing the trip within the stipulated twenty-four hours.

In making the circuit of ninety-four miles, the cars will proceed as follows: From Newark to Bloomfield, Montclair, Verona, Caldwell, Pine Brook, Parsippany, Fox Hills, Denville, Rockaway, Mine Hill, Kenville, Succasunna, Mt. Freedom, Morristown, Bernardsville, Far Hills, Bedminster, Pluckemin, Somerville, Bound Brook, Dunellen, Plainfield, Scotch Plains, Springfield, Hilton, Irvington and back to Newark.

—For Sale—Very desirable 20 H. P. Columbia touring car, double opposed engine in front, 3 speed forward and reverse, selective type sliding gear, transmission shaft drive, new tires, extra tire and tube, fine black cape top, 5 lamps, etc. This car has just been thoroughly overhauled, and repainted; very reliable and strong car, practically equal to new; cost $1,850; need money, will sacrifice for $475 if taken this week. This car is a bargain at $850. Thompson, 413 Park avenue.

STATE FARMERS INSTITUTE

Middlesex County Dairymen Hear Talks on Practical Farming.

AT NEW MARKET YESTERDAY.

Morning, Afternoon and Evening Sessions Well Attended By Farmers Who Came From All Parts of the State.

Farmers from all parts of the State, with an especially large delegation from Middlesex county, met in convention yesterday at New Market, where sessions were held in the morning were at the barn of Herman Unger, between New Market and Bound Brook, and in the afternoon and evening at Friendship hall. The good weather brought the farmers of the vicinity early and in large parties. They came in farm wagons with their families and spent the day at the convention, which was under the auspices of the State Board of Agriculture. H. E. Cook, of Denmark, N. Y., was the speaker of the morning. He gave his address at the barn, using the cattle to illustrate his topic, "Dairy Types in Cow Conformation. He is one of the leading dairymen of his section of the State, and spoke at length on practical dairy farming, giving a description of model dairies and discussing the diseases of cattle, their treatment and their cure.

The morning session concluded at about noon, and there was an opportunity for luncheon given the visiting farmers. Many of them collected their families at a basket lunch, served in their wagons, and others found food in the adjoining houses, where special provision had been made to accommodate them. The afternoon session was held in Friendship hall, where various speakers prominent in farming throughout the State, gave practical talks on farming and the keeping of farm cattle.

Mrs. Mollie MacClaughly Allen gave a talk on "A Woman's Experience in Poultry;" J. G. Curtis discussed "Soil Fertility at Short Range;" C. C. Hulsart talked on "Growing Asparagus for Market," and Dr. C. D. Smead spoke on "Diseases of Farm Animals."

After a temporary adjournment for supper, the farmers again convened in the hall in the evening. Mrs. M. M. Allen spoke at length on "The Sanitary Home," and "Organization and Home Influence" was discussed by H. E. Cook and Franklin Dye, secretary of the executive committee of the association.

In connection with the evening session, Miss Iva Dayton and Miss Fanny Giles rendered several vocal duetts.

MERCHANTS WANT NEWARK BAY BRIDGE CONDEMNED

The abandonment of the Central Railroad bridge over Newark Bay and the erection of an up-to-date structure is being advocated as an urgently needed improvements by merchants of Newark, with the cooperation, it is understood, of some in Elizabeth. A resolution adopted by the Newark Board of Trade Wednesday night privodes for an application upon any car arriving at the clubhouse more than three minutes before or after the scheduled time. Other penalties will be inflicted, as for stopping the motor without making repairs, 3 points; stopping the motor to make replacements, 4 points; making repairs with the motor running, 2 points.

George W. Tomkins, who presented the resolution, told how the bridge had been erected back in the sixties. There was much opposition and the president of the company at that time declared the structure was to be merely a temporary affair.

He declared that the railroad company had violated the law by filling in beyond the Government bulkhead last winter, when the structure was thought to be in danger.

The aid of Elizabeth merchants will be enlisted in the effort to have the bridge condemned.

It is proposed to compel the railroad to build a new bridge of sufficient clearance to permit the free passage of ice in winter.

Not as a Candidate.

Miss Etta Raybert, who sang at the First Reformed (Dr. Bishop's) church, at East Orange, Wednesday night, did not sing there as a candidate. Miss Raybert was invited to sing at the "welcoming" services tendered the new pastor, Rev. Mr. Giles, and with her usual generosity, she sang for them, being the leading soprano with a chorus of fifty voices.

MOTHER'S CARELESSNESS COSTS CHILD AN EYE

Margaret Miles, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Miles, of upper Plainfield avenue, near South Plainfield, who was accidently shot in the eye by a blank cartridge from a pistol in the hands of her mother, had the optic removed yesterday. It was apparent almost from the time the accident occurred that the sight was destroyed but Dr. P. B. Cregar had her removed to Muhlenberg Hospital and with other physicians made every attempt to save it. The staff found it impossible, however, and complications that followed demanded the optic's removal in order to save the other one.

The father objected to this being done until a New York specialist had made an examination and the child was taken to the city for this purpose. There the verdict was the same and the eye was taken out yesterday. The child is recovering rapidly and will return home in a few days.

This is the second accident of this nature that has occurred in the family. A few years ago an older brother of Margaret injuered an eye while celebrating the Fourth of July and the sight was evidently destroyed. The parents formerly resided in the West End and the father is employed at the Pond Tool Works.

MISS EDNA MOORE IS NOW MRS. HENRY K. M'INTYRE

At Holy Cross church, which was handsomely decorated for the occasion with autumn leaves, palms and white chrysanthemums, Miss Edna Moore, daughter of Mrs. John Berry Moore, of Kensington avenue, became the wife of Henry Knox McIntyre, of New York city, yesterday afternoon. Only the relatives and most intimate friends of the couple were present at the ceremony, at which Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the church, officiated.

The bride was gowned in white messaline, trimmed with lace inserts. Her bridal veil was caught up with orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of white sweet peas. She was attended by her sister, Miss Iola Moore, as maid of honor. Miss Moore was gowned in white, over pink silk. She wore a large white hat, with a single pink rose, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Wilbur McIntyre, brother of the groom, was best man, and the bride was given in marriage by her brother, Alden Ellis Moore. The ushers were John G. McIntyre, Linden W. Bridgeman and Henry C. Carpenter, of New York, and Oliver Smith, of Easton, Maryland. H. Raymond Loder, of New York, was at the organ, and played the wedding march from Mendelssohn as the bridal party entered the church. The bride is a graduate of Wellesley College in the class of 1906, and a score of her classmates were present at the ceremony.

After the wedding, a reception was tendered to about one hundred of the guests at the bride's home on Kensington avenue. The house was elaborately decorated with autumn leaves, palms and chrysanthemums, and trailing vines were used with good effect. The newly married couple received their guests in a bower of palms and potted plants in the parlor, and after the collation was served, left for a month's wedding trip in the South. They will reside in New York city.

Mr. McIntyre is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Ewen McIntyre, of West Seventy-fourth street, New York. He graduated from Columbia in 1899, and is employed with the Grey National Telautograph Company, of New York. The wedding gifts were numerous, including silverware, china and cut glass.

HALF-MINUTE INTERVIEW.

MEET TOMORROW NIGHT TO CHOOSE COLLECTOR

B. F. Coriell Joins in Contest with Townsend and Gloak to Succeed Murray.

LEADERS ARE NON-COMMITTAL.

Each of the Trio Claims Strong Support—Council to Name Successor On Monday Night.

Another candidate for the unexpired term of the city tax collector, John W. Murray, Jr., which will be filled by the Common Council on Monday night was announced last night when the friends of former Sheriff B. Frank Coriell began an active canvas on his behalf. Thomas Hanna, former clerk to the Union County Board of Taxation, has withdrawn from the race and will leave next week for South America, where he will manage some mines for a company in which Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur is interested. The other two candidates are William R. Townsend and William L. Gloak.

An informal meeting of the city fathers will be held tomorrow night to discuss candidates for the position. It is said that an effort will be made to agree upon a candidate so that there will be no delay in filling the office on Monday night. Last night several members of the Council held a confab.

Mr. Townsend, who is secretary of the Republican City Committee and clerk to the Union County Board of Taxation, according to his friends, has the support of Mayor Charles L. Fisk. It is also said that City Treasurer William F. Arnold favors him for the position. Townsend, as well, claims the support of many organization leaders. His selection would leave a vacancy in the County Tax Board's office force.

William R. Townsend.

William L. Gloak, who was re-elected to the Common Council a week ago Tuesday, is being boomed by a number of influential organization men who claim that his work on behalf of the Republican party entitles him to recognition and that they intend to leave no stone unturned in booming him for the place. It is stated on reliable authority that at least three votes in the Common Council are already pledged to Mr. Gloak and that it is not unlikely that he can get the necessary six votes for election.

The claims made by Mr. Gloak's friends are disputed by those who are advocating the nomination of Mr. Coriell, one of the veteran party workers. They are quietly electioneering and appear to be sanguine that he will land the job.

As a rule the leaders are non-committal on the subject of Mr. Mur-

KITCHEN ARTICLES.

What an array of miniature articles we see while going through the household departments where they are sold. There are little triangle pans which fit them into a larger one, and the young housewife can cook four articles in one pan over one gas flame. Then there are miniature baking pans made with handles, good, long handles which can be grasped with a cloth and easily removed from the oven without the least danger of burning one's hands. The coffee percolator was an immense restaurant affair for many years, yet today we see tiny affairs which will draw about three cups of coffee, and how much purer and more delicious is coffee made in a percolator than by the old-fashioned method. A dozen pudding pans come nestled together in all sizes, and one can has a skillet just large enough to fry one egg or one chop, or large enough to make six buckwheat cakes at once. If a woman could only posses one of the best ranges, a good kitchen cabinet, a work table, and this handy little articles, kitchen work would be a pleasure and not drudgery.

Patented

The Vital Feature of

Boynton Furnaces

Nothing short of actual use can convince you fully of the pronounced superiorities of this construction over the old-fashioned round fire pot.

It does away with the clogging of ashes and cinders, because the sides are perpendicular, instead of slanting.

It brings, for the first time in furnace construction, a perfect and rapid combustion, getting more applied heat out of a given amount of fuel than any other fire pot.

It gives you the maximum of radiating surface.

It brings you an ash-pit that is square and roomy, making cleaning easy in extreme.

These are but a few of the many advantages of the patent Square Pot, a feature of Boynton Furnaces and none other. See your plumber, steam fitter or tin-smith about them.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for steam or hot water. Also ranges.

"A Value Always Better Than Elsewhere."

'Watson Made' and 'Best Value' Mean Exactly the Same Thing

When we say that Watson-made clothing is the best value in Newark we make no idle boast. For fifty years we have been submitting conclusive evidence on this point and have convinced thousands—not by arguments, but by the service given by the suits.

We know what kind of work goes into our suits. We know what goes into other suits. So we do not hesitate to state that ours positively WILL wear better, hold their shape better, and give better satisfaction.

As to style and fit, look for yourself. Our suits are fitted to LIVE models. They are made for men, not dummies. And they follow every line laid down by Fashion.

We repeat, positively the best suit values in Newark, at $10, $12, $15, $18, $20, $22, $25

Winter Overcoats Now Ready

They're here in orderly array—sober blacks and oxfords, cheerful grays, smart browns and swagger mixed effects in all the proper styles.

They're all Watson-made. And nothing we could say about them could do more to assure the buyer the service that he wants.

Collars cut right and FITTED right. Shoulders broad and well built. Sleeves roomy. Linings strong. Seams rip-proof. Every detail just right.

And we can say of the overcoats as we do of the suits, they positively ARE the best values in Newark.

$10, $12, $15, $18, $20, $22, $25 to $40

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

FOOTBALL.

All the members of the Park Golf Club who have clubs and other belongings at the clubhouse are requested to remove them by tomorrow for at that time the house will be boarded up and closed for the winter season.

While the Plainfield Country Club will close its active season on Thanksgiving Day it is proposed to keep the clubhouse open for the convenience of the members who wish to play late in the season.

Before the next series of matches between Metropolitan, Philadelphia and Boston golfers in the tri-city contest for the Lesley Cup are played the chances are that there will be some lively discussions as to the relative merits of the two styles of foursomes. Walter J. Travis, captain of the successful New York team, can see nothing else than the four-ball game, while Findlay C. Douglas continues to stand up for the old-fashioned two-ball foursome.

There is a tendency on the other side to do away with the rope nuisance when large galleries are in evidence. On more than one occasion it has been proved that a rope is dangerous. Officials carrying red flags are able to keep the crowds in check with comparatively little trouble.

The St. Andrew's ruling on an incident which happened to a prominent Eastern player during the Olympic cup competition at Euclid last July only serves as a further illustration of the need of a simpler set of rules. When it comes to splitting hairs, many opportunities are afforded for finding apparent weak spots.

Robert Hunter, the well-known Western player, recently established a new nine-hole record for the Mobile course. The young man went around in 36, finishing with threes at the last two holes.

There is no let-up in enthusiasm at the Atlanta Athletic Club, which now has 850 members, most of whom are golfers. Work is progressing rapidly on a new clubhouse, to be ready by spring.

GOLF.

Van Orman, of Cornell, who was injured in the game against West Point on Saturday, will be able to take his place in the line-up against Swarthmore tomorrow.

Cornell's performance against Swarthmore tomorrow should give a line on the relative strength of the Army and Navy teams. While the Ithacans defeated the Army team, 12 to 10, the Quaker team beat Navy 18 to 0.

Annapolis coaches are somewhat discouraged over the erratic showing of the Midshipmen this season, and secret practise will be continued until the Army game on November 23. Dashiel and Cates, coaches of the Navy team, watched the Cornell-West Point game on Saturday, and are drilling the men against the West Point style of play. In Douglass and Lange the Navy has two sterling players, but the other places are causing much worry.

Owing to two students at the University of Chicago being ill with smallpox, Health Commissioner Evans, of that city, yesterday issued an order that all members of the football team submit to vaccination. The edict has resulted in a big kick-up among the students, who fear that if it is enforced Chicago will not be able to meet Carlisle on November 23.

A dry field is wanted by the Princeton and Yale teams for their game tomorrow in New Haven. In order to bring about this condition the gridiron is covered with a heavy layer of straw, while watchmen are on duty nights on the lookout for the possibility of fires.

Cornell's victory over the Army inspires the confidence at Ithaca that now, having beaten the Tigers and West Point, it is Cornell's year to beat Penn.

The Phillips-Andover team enjoys a unique record. Although invariably outweighed, Andover during the last three years in the football field has used only one substitute in the games played.

Pennsylvania had a formation which scored a touchdown in five plays from Penn State's twenty-six-yard line last Saturday.

The Indians scored forty-nine points on Pennsylvania, Princeton and Harvard, and these teams scored only thirty-seven against them.

The Yale freshman victory over the Tiger youngsters, on Saturday, was decisive and inspires confidence in a win over the Crimson freshies at Cambridge this week.

Former stars are rallying to the aid of Yale. Frank Hinkey, Tom Shevlin and Jim Hogan are the latest trio to join the New Haven coaching squad. In addition to these three the following are coaches: Head Coach Knox, Walter Camp, Clint Roraback, Ralph Bloomer, Forest Rockwell, John Hall, Paul Veeder, Olcott and Carl Flanders.

Plainfield, N. J., November 15, 1907.

GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION FOR THANKSGIVING.

In accordance with the time-honored custom of our forefathers, a day is yearly set aside for special worship and thanksgiving and acknowledgment of the blessings we enjoy.

Many have been the trials and serious the dangers through which the nation has passed since our forefathers first gave praise. Today finds us a people who have successfully surmounted grave difficulties and who have grown in the graces of civilization, until we are an example and an inspiration to all mankind.

We are not unduly exalted by our material advancement, but are still mindful of the principles of morality and citizenship upon which the republic was founded. We have wealth without avarice; strength without tyranny; power without oppression.

We have sought to extend our blessings to others and have used the power that has been given to us to promote the brotherhood of man. In these privileges as a nation, in our material welfare as a people and in the spiritual comfort that have been vouchsafed by Almighty God, we have been bountifully favored.

Therefore, I, Edward C. Stokes, Governor of the State of New Jersey, do designate Thursday, the twenty-eighth day of November, as a day of praise and thanksgiving, and do recommend that the people gather in places of religious worship and render thanks to our Heavenly Father for the blessings of the past and present and ask for His continued guidance in the years to come. Given under my hand and seal at Trenton, this forteenth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and seven.

EDWARD C. STOKES.

ray's successor. Neither County Chairman Frank H. Smith nor Factory Inspector Andrew McCardell will say where they stand, both declaring that it is up to the Common Council and that they do not intend to endorse any particular candidate.

The successful candidate will only serve until next fall, although Mr. Murray's term does not expire until Panuary 1, 1901. A successor for a term of three years must be elected at the next election, which takes place in less than a year.

OBITUARY.

Y., at which place he died on Tuesday, following a long illness. He was afterward succeeded by Hallock & Davis, and later George Hallock continued the business for a number of years. Mr. Horton was cery well-known here and popular. After leaving Plainfield he went to Tarrytown, where he lived until his death.

Dorothy Rosemond Mumford.

Dorothy Rosemond Mumford, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stillman Mumford, of Arlington avenue, died last night. The funeral services will be private.

First-class Boarding-house.

TO TRAIN FOR STATE MEET

Y. M. C. A. Athletes Expect to do Well in Contest with Other State Associations.

MEET TO BE HELD AT ORANGE.

Physical Director Listman, Chairman of Committee for Big Meet, Has Arranged Dual Meets and Local Contests.

Physical Director George H. Listman, of the Y. M. C. A., who is chairman of the annual State athletic meet, to be held at the Orange association early in March, has announced the list of events to be participated in by the athletes from a dozen associations from all parts of the State. There will be a shot-put, with 12-pound shot, standing broad jump, three standing broad jumps, fifteen yard dash and running high jump, and half-mile potato race. In this last event, four men will compete on each team, each one running 220 yards.

This annual meet was held in Plainfield in 1904, when the local athletes carried off first honors. Last year the meet was held in Paterson, and the Paterson association boys won it, Newark finishing second, and the local gym team finishing third. Gym teams will be entered from the associations at Ridgewood, Summit, Orange, Rahway, Trenton, Passaic, Montclair, Elizabeth, Hudson City, and Madison. The other members of the committee in charge of the meet are W. H. Floyd, of the Hudson City Y. M. C. A., and W. E. Cann, of the Elizabeth association.

The local athletes should make a strong showing in the meet this year, for the meets to be held during the winter in an attempt to better the association records here will be an excellent means of picking likely candidates for the State meet team. The local association team will also hold about six dual meets with State Y. M. C. A. gym teams during the winter, and the results of these meets will determine what the members of the team can be depended on to do in the State meet. Physical Director Listman has already arranged a dual meet to be held at Orange December 7, and, aside from meets he expects to arrange with State associations, he is attempting to get dates for meets with the Twenty-sixth Ward Y. M. C. A. and the Twenty-third Street Y. M. C. A. of New York City.

BRYAN WILLING TO RUN IF PARTY CALLS HIM

W. J. Bryan will be a candidate for the Presidency in 1908 if the Democratic party will let him. He has been a candidate for the nomination for some time, but has just admitted it.

Under the caption "Mr. Bryan's Position," he says in the Commoner today that while he believes "the party should have all the light possible before attempting a selection," and that while "Mr. Bryan will not ask for or seek a namination," no Democrat would be justified in refusing one, and "if the members of the party believe that Mr. Bryan's nomination will help the party, its principles and its policies, he will accept the nomination, whether the indications point to defeat or victory."

Mr. Bryan declares that the next campaign will be "an appeal to the public conscience," and that "no one should favor Mr. Bryan's nomination unless the party is willing tho open its books and show where its contributions come from and for what the money is expended."

He sees expediency in an appeal to the public conscience because "the national conscience has already been aroused, and a large majority of the voters have been educated to the necessity for real reform—a reform that will make this government again a government of the people, by the people, and for the people."

He says Democratic principles have grown in popularity and Democratic policies are now praised by many who denounced them a few years ago.

He fortifies himself by the advance assurance that "if the choice falls upon another he will not be disappointed or dissatisfied."

On the whole, however, Mr. Bryan seems to think that Mr. Bryan stands a pretty good chance of becoming President Bryan.

Miss Pansy Luckey, of Kenoza Lake, N. Y., who has spent a month with her aunt, Mrs. W. H. Addis, of East Second street, left yesterday for Brooklyn, where she will remain indefinitely.

HALF-YEARLY MEETING OF FRIENDS CONCLUDED.

The half-yearly session of the Plainfield-Shrewsbury meeting of the Religious Society of Friends was concluded this morning at the meeting-house on Watchung avenue with a devotional service. Last night there was a continuation of the conference on First-Day schools, there being general discussion of plans to increase the usefulness and interest of the schools. Many helpful suggestions were offered and the conference proved to be an inspiring one. Afterward there was a social hour under the auspices of the Young Friends Association. The meeting was largely attended.

Following the devotional service this morning the meeting adjourned to convene six months later at Shrewsbury, unless the committee to whom was referred the matter report favorable to changing the place of meeting to Manasquan.

EDSON W. WESTCOTT LOST IN WOODS ALL NIGHT

The farmers along the Waterloo mountains and in the vicinity of Netcong will long remember Edson W. Westcott, as "the hunter who got lost up here on the Waterloo range," and in search of whom, a party of about a score of Netcongoes, with Fred Sandford and J. A. Staats, the other Plainfielders on the shooting trip, scoured the mountains all Monday night. Westcott, who came back with the party last night, was found after much hallooing and shooting, seated by a fire in the thick woods, picking the bones of the single partridge he had shot on the two days' trip. The forest outing did not agree with him, for he is now much stiffened with rheumatism, and the bird wasn't cooked exactly as "Tommy" Timbo might have done it.

The local hunters, out after partridges, had no luck at all, Westcott's "life saving" bird being the only fatality caused. The party started out from Netcong early Monday morning, to shoot the slopes of the Waterloo range. They separated, and arranged to meet at 5 o'clock in the afternoon at the Sussex Railroad junction. There wasn't much to tempt the hunters in the woods, and they met early at the place, arriving there shortly after noon. While waiting for the wagon to take them back to Netcong, Westcott went off to shot birds along the railroad and the other two went off in another direction. When the wagon came, Staats and Sandford were ready to go back, but Westcott was nowhere in sight. They drove back to Netcong, believing that he had gone on ahead. At Netcong, nobody had seen the man, and the two others, gathering a party of more than a dozen farmers, went out to scour the woods for the missing man. They hallooed and fired their guns, and about 4 o'clock in the morning, when they were about to give up and return to Netcong, they heard an answering shot, and following the direction, found Westcott, seated by the fire, eating. He said the bird had saved his life, and was devoutly thankful that he had been able to find a match in his pockets. He was chilled through, and still has twinges of rheumatic pains as a reminder of his lonely outing and meal.

LIFE'S JOURNEY ENDS FOR BOTH HUSBAND AND WIFE

Following an illness of nearly two years, William F. Randolph, one of the oldest and best known residents of the city, died last night at the home of his sister, Mrs. Buckalew, of Fifth street and Arlington avenue. His death was a great shock to his wife, Mrs. Elmira Stelle Randolph, who had been his faithful helpmate for over sixty years, and at 9:15 this morning she suddenly expired. She had previously been in fairly good health and only a few minutes before her death had been conversing with members of the household.

Mr. Randolph was eighty-six years old and lived for many years on Central avenue. He sold the premises some time ago and for awhile he and his wife made their home on the Edward Randolph farm back of Dunellen. They returned to Plainfield two years ago and since then have lived with Mrs. Buckalew. Mr. Randolph was one of the original family of that name that farmed in this vicinity until the cities and towns grew up. Both were members of the First Baptist churhch and attended regularly until infirmities prevented. Mrs. Randolph was eighty-four years old.

The husband leaves two brothers, Lewis Randolph, of Randolphville, and Edward, of Newark, and the one sister, Mrs. Isabelle Buckalew. Mrs. Randolph leaves one sister, Miss Julia Stelle, of this city.

STATE SENATOR COLBY IS SHARPLY CRITICISED

Before the Men's Club of Trinity Episcopal church, Elizabeth, in the parish-house Tuesday evening, Alden Freeman, of East Orange, said that he could see no hope in the political situation save in a third party, with a socialistic platform, the chief plank of which would be the Sermon on the Mount, and "Justice, Not Charity," for its motto. Selections from Mr. Freeman's circular, "The Trail of the Serpent," formed the thread of his argument, and he criticised in severe terms the abandonment by Senator Colby of the movement for reform.

He said that the chief fault with the Colby movement was that its efforts for reform were circumscribed by the boundaries of the Republican party.

"The spirit of partisanship," he declared, which seems to be the final controlling factor with Mr. Colby and his followers is the most powerful weapon, aside from campaign contributions, which the corporations are able to wield.

"Does not the swallowing up of the Colby movement by the Regulars confirm the warnings of Washington and Lee? Is not the corporation control of the Republican party stronger than ever? Was not the usual game of the bosses played in the choosing of a Governor, and will not the new Governor, as usual, name the various bosses (as the agents of the corporations are called) to the various fat offices within his gift?

"The one stronghold of the anti-corporation forces in the State, the City Hall of Jersey City under the administration of Mayor Fagan, had been lost to the people while Everett Colby swung around the circle in the train of a candidate for Governor who chose on his campaign committee from Hudson county Dickinson. I feel it my duty and my right to say on account of my own efforts in behalf of the Colby movement that the Moses who will lead our people from the bondage of modern taskmasters, the corporations, must be made of sterner than a Colby or a Jerome.

"I can see no hope save in a third party—a party which shall unite the independent men of all parties on the paramount control of the overthrow of the political control of the corporations. Mark Hanna, before his death, expressed the opinion that the coming third party would be the Socialistic party. I share this belief.

"The Socialistic party absolutely refuses to affiliate with any other party. Its cardinal principle is the overthrow of capitalistic control."

MIKE KELLY'S READY WIT.

Mike Kelly, king of all ball players, and no one can be found who will dispute the assertion, was a quick-witted Irishman. If there ever was one, and humor says there have been several from the Emerald Isle. But it is much doubted if there ever was another who could beat Mike Kelly when it came to rapid-fire repartee.

When the two American teams were forming for the great trip they took around the world in the 80's there was much talk among the players over the contemplated journey. In fact, this little projected jaunt was ever on the boys' minds, and conversation regarding it was always on tap.

Tom Brown, who is umpiring games in Washington now, was a star member then of the baseball troupe of globe-trotters, and he and Kelly used to be the thickest of friends. When it came down to buying the necessary clothing for the trio Mike and Tom repaired to the same store together.

During the trying-on process Mike, who was always talkative, no matter under what conditions, began to discuss his great qualities as a sailor, and Tom Brown, who is a native-born Englishman, and who had sailed over the Atlantic ocean on several occasions, began to poke fun at Kelly, who was a native of Ireland.

"Go on, Mike," laughed Brown, "I do not believe you were ever on the ocean."

"Is that so?" sneered Kelly, "and how do you think I came from Ireland, Mr. Brown, in a hack?"

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

It is foolish to save money for your funeral expenses, for while you will probably be present you won't feel that it is any of your funeral.

A woman is wise to keep a good supply on hand to use when her husband gets out of temper.

Some people are respectable in spite of all they can do.

Automobiling may be expensive, but it is ballooning that comes high.

Queer people are the sort that are most unlike us.

People who implore the boys to remain on the farm don't know anything about bugging taters.

His breach of promise suit is one that a young man would rather not have pressed.

We feel if we could get the world to practice all we preach there would not be any need of further reform.

Unless you want to engage in immediate activities don't criticise a woman's husband.

A dog in the manger isn't generous, but he is doubtless useful.

Your Doctor Will Tell You That You Need A Natural Tonic

The majority of so-called "Spring" tonics supply a false stimulation to the body—but this is not the natural and most beneficial way of helping the system to overcome lassitude.

DR. D. JAYNE'S TONIC VERMIFUGE

tones and builds up the body in the natural way—through the stomach. A run-down condition of health is almost invariably due to a disordered stomach and digestive organs. Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge tones the stomach and restores it to its normal healthy condition. Then the restored stomach does the building up and brings the body back to a state of perfect health. This is the natural way.

Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge is sold by all druggists.

Jayne's Expectorant is the oldest and most reliable Cough Cure known.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

It is remarkable how easily "The Old Homestead" has outdistanced every play of the kind on the American stage in its popularity. Season after season it continues just as successfully as it did during its first triumphs. There is the image of perpetual youth in its lines, together with an art of suggestion that is more than dramatic. The atmosphere that pervades the play is refreshing. It possesses a variety of emotions that are as natural as the country that it pictures. It takes our elders back across the gulf of years into the pastures of childhood, and awakens tender memories with its pathos and humor. To the young it is an excursion into the land of summertime. Whatever may be said of it critically, there is no doubt of the broad humanity of this classic. There are the underlying principles of the perennial popularity of "The Old Homestead." It appeals as no other American play does to the human heart, and it will continue to appeal just so long as grass grows and water runs, teaching forever a lesson of charity, of honest living and of simple, unalloyed righteousness. The production of "The Old Homestead" this season is promised to be complete in every detail, and the supporting company, including the famous double quartet, of exceptional merit. It will be presented at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night.

Jules Murry's big production, "At Yale," will be shown at the New Plainfield theatre next Tuesday night. It is the most welcome of all the welcome plays of the season, and is winning anew golden encomiums in this its second year on the road. Fresh and vibrant, it swings along through its three acts with a jollity, and a large, vigorous, expressive, whole-souled college spirit that inhabits none but a genuine play of college life. The college boys are real and their fun and their love and their intense striving for the goal they try so hard to reach are all real also. The play is a moral uplift from the common and the sordid everyday world. It is worth seeing when it comes here in the very near future.

The newly-elected officers of the Men's Club of the First Baptist church will soon hold a conference to plan for the season's activities. An announcement of the same will be made in the near future.

A Thanksgiving social will be held at the Park Avenue Baptist church Tuesday night, November 26, under the auspices of the Sunday-school classes taught by Miss Florence G. Hawkins and Mrs. W. S. Lowry.

Belinda Deals

By NELLIE CRAVY GILLMORE

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The quarrel had been brief but hot. Both had said bitter things they were going to regret, but neither would have acknowledged it just then—and neither would have conceded an inch to the other had they hung for their obstinacy.

But it was not until Warren had flung himself out of the house and banged the gate behind him that Belinda allowed her face to declare the consternation and disappointment she felt; and it was not till he had left the little green cottage in the distance that young Templeton began to be conscious of the void in his heart that ached like a physical hurt.

They had been married exactly 18 months, and with $10,000 to start with, Warren Templeton had done nothing more than collect the regular six per cent. interest, quarterly, and plod through the office work six days out of the week at $25! And Belinda was beginning to resent her husband's easy-going stupidity, as she phrased it. Why, there was Billy Creighton, her sister's husband, who had taken half the sum and trebled it in cotton in half the time! It was in vain that Templeton assured her of his inexperience in such matters; she would not listen to his theory of safe, modcrate investment and returns. He must work his way into the great financial centers and become a power there, like other men!

And so the battle had come about inevitably; she, from her unreasoning standpoint, he because of his wounded pride and affection.

When a full hour had elapsed and there was no sign of her husband's returning to "make it up," Belinda sat down by the window and gave herself up to tears. It was the first time in their wedded life he had ever ignored her this way, and it caused her far keener pangs than the cruel words he had spoken. But after a little, she dried her eyes with a swift resolution. She would pack her things and go home that very day to her parents in Boston, and let Warren smart a bit for all the vexation he was causing her. When he came home to luncheon at one he should realise that there was an equal amount of spunk on both sides.

The prospect of the separation, however brief, filled Belinda with wretchedness, but pride rallied quickly to her assistance and she put every thought out of her head except that it was going to be a lesson to Warren Templeton that would last him a lifetime! Of course he would either be coming after her in a week, or imploring her to return to him. But he could not treat her this way, and the sooner he came to his senses, the better it would be for him.

It required less than 30 minutes to make her arrangements and order a cab to take her to the depot. She had dressed herself hurriedly in a simple dark traveling suit, with a little brown turban resting on her gold curls. A thick veil was designed to effectually conceal her features. As she took up her grip and parasol and started down the stair steps, the maid, coming up with a note, intercepted her.

Belinda recognized her brother-in-law's handwriting at a glance and tore open the envelope with suddenly unsteady hands.

"Dear Belinda:—Warren is down here doing his level best to sink every red cent he's got in some tricky steel jump. I've done all I could to get him to quit and go home, but he acts just like a crazy man. Unless he turns loose pretty soon, he's gone to smash. If you could manage to get him a message that you are very ill, or something equally urgent, before he makes any more plunges, I think we might succeed in saving something from the ruins. Yours in haste, BILLY."

Belinda gasped and turned pale. She was the cause of all this—she! The letter fluttered from her nerveless fingers to the floor. For a dazed moment, she stood clinging to the banister rail for support while the world went round. Then abruptly she jerked herself together and ran downstairs to the telephone and rang up her brother-in-law at his broker's. He answered the summons himself.

"That Billy?"

"Yes—Belinda?" He cleared his throat. "I'm afraid it's too late now to do anything. He's staked every dollar on the thing, and if it doesn't take a marvelous rise, he's swamped."

"That means—?"

"Just so; steel was rushing up like fury; Warren got wild—he bought and bought and bought till he'd put every cent he owned in the stock. He couldn't be induced to sell and the thing's been literally crashing down in the past half-hour. If it goes another half-point lower—!"

"Yes, yes. But Billy!"

"Well?"

"That $2,000 you are holding in trust for me, until I'm 21. If you might—is there any way—"

"I'll do what I can. Goodby." He hung up the receiver sharply and Belinda stood pale and panting with her hand on the back of a chair. What if they should, as Billy hinted, lose everything they had! She'd have only herself to blame, and her life would be one long period of sacrifice and repentance. Why had she not trusted her husband's sounder judgment? Why had she stung him to desperation in this unpardonable way? She felt all at once as though he she'd never do anything but despise her—and that she deserved it!

While she was still anathematising herself, the 'phone rang shrilly at her elbow. She jerked up the receiver and applied it to her ear.

"That you, Belinda?"

"Me—yes. Is there anything—tell me quick!"

The colloquy which ensued caused Belinda to pale and redden with alternating fear and excitement, as she finally got at the truth of the matter by repeated questions and explanations from Billy.

The first thing she did was to hurry upstairs and exchange her gown for something light and pretty. It was long after train time; besides, there was no need of going now; the lesson had been learned in a much severer school—and not alone by him.

Promptly at one o'clock, the gate-latch clicked. Belinda ran down stairs to the front door and slid back the bolt.

"Warren!"

Young Templeton's face was ashen; his eyes were red and his hair, as he pulled off his hat and tossed it on the rack, showed damp and dishevelled. Belinda tried to put her arms about his neck in the old way, but he thrust her aside. "Don't touch me," he said hoarsely. "I'm not fit to be in your presence." He flung himself dejectedly into a chair and dropped his face in his shaking hands.

"Why—why, Warren—what is it?"

"We're ruined," he said dully. "I've been dealing in stocks."

Belinda leaned over his chair and with her own little warm fingers, drew his hands from his eyes. It was every bit her fault, yet he was valliantly shouldering the blame—not one word of reproach for herself!

"It doesn't matter, dear. We still have each other—and we shall manage."

"But, little girl," he protested in a drab voice, "surely you don't comprehend. Not even a roof over our heads. I—I not only sunk the whole ten thousand, but borrowed $1,500 besides—"

"There's that little sum Billy Creighton is holding in trust for me," she interposed tentatively.

"A small amount like that won't do much good here, Belinda. Besides, I want it to remain in trust for you. I couldn't touch it."

"Warren!"

Something in her voice made young Templeton look quickly into his wife's flushed, smiling face. Her eyes sparkled with a queer, joyous light.

"I—I've been dealing in stocks myself," she said demurely.

"You!"

"Exactly. In—in steel, you know."

"In steel! Good heavens, Belinda!" He sat up with a start, then collapsed limply in the depths of his chair.

"Yes," said she, perching herself like a little white butterfly on his knee; "the fact is, I—I sold. I made $5,000."

As merchants we must judge ourselves; not on what we think of ourselves, but by what the public think of us. It would be of little use to us to have big window displays that tickled our own fancy, if the public looked at it and passed on.

STOMACH IS SEAT OF HUMAN LIFE

New Theory Advanced by Young Man Is Spreading Over Entire Country.

L. T. Cooper's theory concerning the human stomach, which he claims to prove with his new medicine, is being given more respect and comment every day.

Cooper claims that 90 per cent. of all ill health is due to stomach trouble. When interviewed about his theory recently, he said: "Stomach trouble is the great curse of the 20th century so far as the civilized races are concerned. Practically all of the chronic ill health of this generation is caused by abnormal stomachic conditions. In earlier days, when the human race was closer to nature, and men and women worked all day out of doors, digging their frugal existence from the soil, the tired, droopy, half-sick people that are now so common, did not exist.

"To be sure, there was sickness in those days, but it was of a virulent character, and only temporary. There was none of this half-sick condition all the time with which so many are afflicted nowadays.

"I know positively that every bit of this chronic ill health is caused by stomach trouble. The human stomach in civilized people today is degenerate. It lacks tone and strength. This weakness has gradually come through a sedentary existence. I further know that few people can be sick with the digestive apparatus in perfect shape. The sole reason for my success is because my New Discovery medicine tones the stomach up to required strength in about six weeks' time. That is why I have had more people come and thank me wherever I have gone to introduce my medicine, than I have had time to talk with."

Among the immense numbers of people who are now strong believers in Cooper's theory and medicine is Mrs. M. E. Delano, a prominent resident of the suburb of Brookline, Boston, Mass. She says: "For several years I was broken in health, caused primarily by stomach and nerve troubles. I gradually became worse, until recently I was compelled to go without solid food for days at a time. I had sour stomach, palpitation of the nerves of stomach and heart, dyspepsia, and extreme nervousness. I suffered terribly with insomnia, and my liver, bowels and whole system gradually became deranged. I felt instant relief the first day I began this Cooper medicine. I now feel like a new being. Today I walked all over town, shopping-something I have not done for years

"I make this statement wholly from a sense of duty. I feel I owe it to anyone who might find relief and renewed happiness as I have done."

The record made by the Cooper medicines is astonishing. We will take pleasure in discussing it with anyone who wishes to know about them —T. S. Armstrong.

GAVE UP THE WITNESS.

Very Evidently There Was Nothing to Be Got Out of Him.

Two kinds of witnesses are often encountered in courts of justice—the unwilling witness and the too-willing witness. Here is one who doesn't seem to come under either category. The prosecuting counsel thus addressed him:

"Mr. Parks, state, if you please, whether the defendant, to your knowledge, has ever followed any profession."

"He has been a professor ever since I have known him."

"Ah! a professor of what?"

"A professor of religion."

"You don't understand me, Mr. Parks. What does he do?"

"Well, generally what he pleases."

"Mr. Parks, this kind of prevarication will not do here. Now state, sir, how the defendant supports himself."

"I saw him last night supporting himself against a lamp post."

"May it please your lordship, this witness shows an evident disposition to trifle with the court."

"Mr. Parks," says his lordship, "state, if you know anything about it, what the defendant's occupation is."

"Occupation, did you say, sir?"

"Yes, occupation," said the judge.

"Yes; what is his occupation?" echoed the counsel.

"If I am not mistaken, he occupies two rooms somewhere in Camden Town."

"That's all, Mr. Parks. Do I understand you to affirm that the defendant is a professor of religion?"

"He is."

"Does his practice correspond with his profession?"

"I never heard of any correspondence or letter of any kind."

"You said something about his propensity for drinking. Does he drink hard?"

"No, sir. I think he drinks as easy as any man I ever saw."

"One more question, Mr. Parks. You have known the defendant a long time. What are his habits—loose or otherwise?"

"I think the one he has on now is rather tight under the arms; it is certainly too short-waisted for the fashion."

"You can take your seat, Mr. Parks."—Tit-Bits.

TOURNEY BOWLERS ARRANGED IN TEAMS

The final step in preparing for the five-man bowling tourney at Campbel's alleys was taken last night when the executive committee met and picked the various teams. The captains were selected Monday and of the forty remaining bowlers entered, the acknowledged ten best were placed in a separate class. Each captain then picked two of them by taking the nmes out of a hat. After that the remaining entrants were divided in a similar way and the picking continued until the teams had been completed. They will line up for the contest under team names as follows:

The Bismarcks—Edward Britton, captain; Chauncey F. Stout, Thomas M. Muir, Charles W. Runyon and Frank McInerney.

The Napoleons—Frank Willett, captain; John Conklin, William Mullen, George Vanderbilt and Edward Toense.

The Washingtons—V. W. Nash, Jr., captain; William Skinner, George Ortleb, James O'Keefe and Rudolph Toense.

The Wellingtons — Francis J. Blatz, captain; Harry Montross, Harry Gilmore, Wiliam Pope and George E. Firstbrook.

The Brian Borus—Harry Radin, captain; Harry Ackor, Dr. F. C. Herbert Harry Keuhn and Edward McMahon.

The Garibaldis—John J. Campbtll, captain; Orrin Dodge, Elmer D. Cutting, Walter Crowley and John McLaughlin.

The Grants—Chief P. S. Kiely, captain; Edward A. Laing, William Kiely, Dr. E. A. Giddes and Thomas McInerney.

The Roderick Dhus—Charles F. Meyer, Jr., captain; Harry VanEmburgh, Charles Ortleb, Tunis Vail and Fred Koller.

The Lafayettes—Louis Skelly, captain; John Wirth, Tunis Hewitt, Fred Hillman and James Edwards.

The balancing up of the teams has met with general satisfaction and the games are sure to be well contested. The opening series will be rolled next Tuesday night and will continue after that three nights each week until February 20.

Y. M. C. A. ORCHESTRA FORMED.

At a meeting of those interested in the formation of an orchestra in the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., held last night, James Manning, Edward Wakefield, Oswald Love, B. M. Loughlin, Everett Banks and Harry Brandt were present with their instruments and will be violinists in the new orchestra.

Martin A. Korff, of the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, and Phillip Van Arsdale, who is to be leader of the boys' organization, were present at the meeting and outlined plans for the winter work. From the interest being shown by boy members of the association, it is probable that there will be about fifteen members in the orchestra. The members will furnish music at the boys' Sunday afternoon meetings, and will give several entertainments during the winter, and will compete next year for the State Orchestra at the convention to be held at Lakewood.

Linen Shower for Prospective Bride.

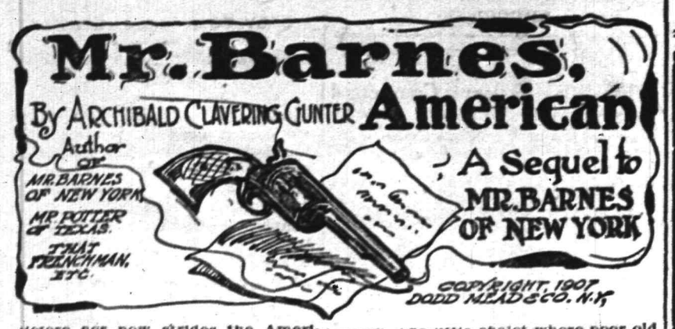
In honor of Miss Florence MacDonald, daughter of Richard MacDonald, of Watchung avenue, the borough, whose marriage to E. N. Norman, of New York, will take place in the near future, a linen shower was given last night by Mr. and Mrs. Clifford W. Brokaw at their home in the New Madison. There were about twenty friends present and Miss MacDonald received a large collection of handsome and useful gifts. Many social features were enjoyed during the evening and refreshments were served.

Mr. Barnes, American

By Archibald Clavering Gunter

Author of Mr. Barnes of New York, Mr. Potter of Texas, That Frenchman, Etc.

A Sequel to Mr. Barnes of New York



COPYRIGHT, 1907, DODD MEAD & CO. N.Y.

Before her now strides the American, his alert eyes always glancing down the steep declivities to their left, for the almost unused trail they are following is hundreds of feet above the travelled bridle path that keeps to the torrent, dashing through the bottom of the valley. After nearly an hour of this, the noise of a waterfall strikes their ears, gradually growing louder.

Concealed in the Big Rocks That Skirt the Stream Are Several Cronching Men.

Five minutes later, Barnes holds up his hand cautiously. Marina's glance follows his; far below them, concealed in the big rocks that skirt the stream at the little bridge near the waterfall, are several crouching, armed men. A little farther down the rapid, in the top of a big beech tree, is perched another, his hand shading his eyes from the rays of the declining sun that shines in his face as he looks down the pathway coming from the east.

"These gentlemen are waiting for me," remarks the American, in his face the supreme joy of a sportsman who will bag not only one head, but a battue. He puts his rifle on the ground, loosens both revolvers in his belt and asks: "The way to descend the precipice from here?"

"Why?" falters the girl.

"Why? Because I am now the hunter," answers Barnes. "Do you think I am going to spare the wretches who have stolen my wife? None of them! Quick, the path by which I can intercept them and cut them off to the last man!"

Marina looks at his fatal pistols and shudders! "Thank God, there is no path!"

"Ah, then I will have to be content with the sentry, that fellow in the beech tree there."

"My God, if you kill any of them," gasps Marina, "you will never get Enid out of the island alive. You came to save her, not to murder her." She puts a white imploring hand on Barnes, who is already preparing his rifle. Then she suddenly half cries: "Your wife! You want her!" and points far up to the top of the pass between the two great mountains, Rotondo and Del Oro, and Barnes' eyes following her hand, he sees figures silhouetted against the clear blue Alpine air. All are mounted, and one is surely a woman.

"You think that is my wife?"

"I am sure of it. Saliceti has only left some of his men behind to waylay you if you come on unguardedly."

Barnes doesn't even answer her. His quick steps are carrying him so rapidly in pursuit along the dizzy mountain path that Marina, though the poor girl half runs, can scarce keep up with him.

Their path leads along the precipices, now and again reaching some little mountain valley through which a stream trickles between stunted pines, and about whose rocks are growing the sweet forget-me-nots and violets of Corsica.

But as they near the summit of the mountain, darkness comes also and a blinding mist, cold with the chill of melting snow, descends upon them, and enveloping them with a fleecy sheen, the rocks and lichens about the path are shrouded from their gaze.

They are above the timber line and the great bare granite blocks bruise Marina's tender feet as they stumble among them.

The girl lays her hand upon her companion's arm. "We may reach the summit before darkness," she pants, out of breath, "but the dizzy descent on the other side is impossible without daylight."

"I remember," answers Burton. "I have passed down it hunting mouflon." Then he takes off his hunting coat and places it carefully over the delicate shoulders of his fragile companion, already shivering in her light summer garment under the icy mist about her. "I am thinking of some shelter for you, for we must pass the night upon the mountain," he says tenderly; then asks anxiously: "Do you know one?"

"Y-e-s," she replies, her teeth chattering, "if we can reach it in this storm. The little chalet where poor old Tomasso sometimes took me when he brought me here as a child to pluck the flowers of the mountain."

With this she turns abruptly to the left, and Barnes following her, they struggle up a couloir filled with massive boulders, but nearing the summit the mist becomes colder, the wind sharper and the gloom more deep. Surrounded, as they are, by frightful precipices, this is appalling.

"I've lost my way," mutters Marina, her voice low with faintness, but a moment after she cries: "Ah, see the granite cliff. Follow its wall! The cabin is beneath it. But beware! beyond the cabin there is a very deep crevice."

STATE LINES.

The output of Missouri's mines in 1906 was valued at over $26,500,000 according to the secretary of the State mining bureau. This does not include quarry products, which would raise the total to $30,000,000.

Connecticut still heads the procession as a manufacturer of needles and pins. The census bureau tells us that the State's 1905 output in that line came to $3,062,193, or 64.4 per cent. of the total for the United States that year.

Minnesota now furnishes two-thirds of the iron minded in the United States and surpasses in its product all the countries of the globe with the possible exception of Great Britain, whose figures for last year are not yet given out. This entire iron output comes from one county, St. Louis.

American Names.

If we have some growing sense of a desire to touch with poetry the terminology of our American towns, we have succeeded so far only in securing a slightly picnic grove atmosphere such as is given off by Lakewood or Riverside. The rich sentimentalism of the real estate dealer has done what it could, considering the hurry he is in. If we have a new manufacturing suburb, the chances are we shall be too lazily and flatly patriotic, call it Lincoln and be done with it, or too crudely romantic, in which case the secretary of the company will report to the directors that he has had the place incorporated as Ivanhoe. With the dash of poetry in his soul he might keep true to the strenuous character of the place, with all its prospective labor agitations, and at the same time give a tinge of beauty to the situation forever by calling it Fretley, or if it is a place where hammers are to ring from morning to night why not call it Stroke instead of naming it Smithville after the present chief stockholder in the concern?—Atlantic.

Woman's Work.

Marriage is woman's work in the world, not man's. From whatever point it is viewed, physical or spiritual, as a question of civic polity or a question of individual ethics, it is her specific share of the world's work—first, last, and always—allotted to her by laws far stronger than she is. And the woman who fails to recognize this and acknowledge it has the germ of divorce in her veins at the outset.—Anna A. Rogers in Atlantic.

ARTIST NOT BUSINESS MAN.

Whistler Had Big Bank Account and Didn't Know It.

The Dundee Advertiser tells a story illustrating Whistler's forgetfulness and utter lack of business instinct. Being hard pressed for a debt and having finally been informed he would be sued unless a check for the amount was sent by return of post, the artist mentioned the matter to one of his friends who lived near him. Explaining that he had a few pounds in the bank, the exact sum unknown, he requested his friend to stop at the bank on the way to business to ascertain what was required to make his account good for a check of slightly over $90, and to deposit that amount for him as a loan. The friend was quite willing, and in due time stood at the cashier's desk of Whistler's bank asking for the amount of that gentleman's balance, explaining his errand. The cashier was interested; went to the big book of balances, turned over a few pages, wrote down some figures, and in a moment placed them before the astonished friend. Whistler's balance was more than $30,000. The artist was delighted, but found it difficult to remember when he had deposited so much money or where he had got it.

MISLEADING THE YOUNG IDEA.

Eloquent Lecturer Nothing More Than a Nature Faker.

The eloquent lecturer was discoursing on the wonders of nature. "Digressing for a moment," he said, "did it ever occur to you that there is not a principle in mechanics, not a single ingenious device in the application of power, that has not been anticipated in the marvelous structure of the human body? Take the familiar instance of the cogwheel. The first cogwheels, so to speak, were the knuckles of the human mind. Double your fists, put them together in front of you, with the backs upward, placing each knuckle of one fist in the depression between two knuckles on the other fist. Holding them tightly together in this manner oscillate them back and forth, and you have the original geared machinery that suggested the cogwheel. When you go home, boys, place the knuckles of your fists together in this same way, put them under a heavy weight, and you will find that by imparting a cogwheel motion to them you can lift 250 pounds with perfect ease." When the boys went home, they tried it, and found it wasn't true. They had listened to another nature faker.

Yes, Why Not?

Not long ago a well-known playwright decided that he would like to have a theater of his own in which to produce his own plays. He didn't have money enough to build it, but he had a wealthy friend in Wall street. As soon as the idea set in on him, the playwright visited Wall street and laid the scheme before his friend. The Wall street man put his feet on his mahogany desk and listened attentively. He admitted that he had a few hundred thousand dollars lying around loose, yet wasn't particularly enthusiastic on the theater project. "Why write plays?" he demanded, at last. "Write checks."

Childhood's Frankness.

The grown folk, seated on the wide veranda, were having a discussion concerning heaven, and a little daughter was flitting breezily around the group. A sail-like bow of Alice-blue ribbon fluttered above her curls and her white frock stood airily against the wind. "I came from heaven," she announced in the pause of the conversation. "They put wings on me and sent me down here; and," she added reminiscently, "I haven't seen anybody from there since."

Newspapers in China.

Native Chinese papers state that the Chinese press will in future be controlled by the ministry of posts and communications. The following new laws are proposed: The press shall not be permitted to attack either the government or the administration. Nothing of the nature of a personal attack shall be published, nor shall any secret document of the government be inserted. These laws will be put in operation after the advice of the ministers has been secured.

A Beggar Woman's Trick.

A woman at Beaver Falls, Pa., it has just been discovered, has been going about regularly begging loaves of bread from residents on one side of a street, pleading that she had a sick husband and starving children at home. Then she packed the loaves nicely in a basket and passed along the other side and sold them at fancy prices, saying she was obliged to bake to support a large family.

Fictitious Impression.

"I cannot help thinking of the wonderful thought displayed in your daughter's commencement essay last June." "Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox, "judging from that essay, you would think she was as much interested in 'The Subservience of Individual Ambition to Eternal Destiny,' as she is in ice cream soda. But she isn't."

Wagner as a Curative Agent.

Vernon Lee has told somewhere the story of the marvelous effects of Wagner on a headache. One does, after a time, succumb to what is a kind of hypnotism; the sound seems almost to clear the air, or at least to lull one into a kind of dream in which only the sense of hearing exists.

EASY TO OVERCOME WORRY.

Simple Mental Treatment to Do Away With Evil Habit.

Being human, happily or unhappily, we cannot deny the comfort to be found in the reflection that misery never lacks the company it loves. We all have our troubles, and some of us derive much satisfaction from the contemplation of them. Indeed, there are those who are happy only when wretched; but these we believe to be as few in number as they are disagreeable in association; the vast majority of humans are normal, and disposed, therefore, in conformity with natural law, to smile when the skies are clear and to grieve under the portent of clouds. Hence the ease with which worry takes possession of the mind, colors the disposition and makes a cripple of effort. That causes abound we know and must admit, as we do almost unconsciously the certainty of death; but too little cognizance is taken of the fact that the effect of mere apprehension, which is all that worry really is, may be subjected to simple mental treatment and be overcome.—George Harvey in the North American Review.

HAD TO LIFT UP HIS VOICE.

Worshiper Furnished Good Reason for His Fervency.

The successful merchant invited his parents to visit him in New York city. They came gladly, and on the following sabbath were escorted to a fashionable church in Fifth avenue. Some of the hymns were familiar. In their rendition the visiting pair contributed heavily, with the credit for volume in favor of the father. Although not always in correct time, and sometimes in discord, yet the joy of this good couple leaped forth in joyous praise, and they did not see the glowering looks of nearby worshipers or the beet-like face of their devoted son. "Father," explained the merchant that afternoon, while his mother was taking her accustomed nap, "in our churches the congregation do very little singing; it is left entirely to the choir." "I know, my boy," said the old man as he lovingly placed a hand on his son's shoulder, "that it was very embarrassing to you this morning, but if I hadn't sung as loudly as I did, the people would have heard your mother."

Bootblacks in Livery.

There is a new office building in Wall street that is piling luxury on luxury in the way of fittings and general accessories to the point where it bids fair to be a close rival to the marble and plush palaces of hotels uptown. The latest outbreak in this direction is the uniforming of the official bootblack of the building in a page's livery, blue trousers with a gold piping on the seams, a page's short tunic with ever so many round gilt buttons down the front and a dark blue straight visored cap with the name of the company that owns the structure in gold letters on the front. Of course, this bootblack page is an Italian, and he looks extremely hot and uncomfortable in his padded coat.

What the Foolish Wife Does.

It is astonishing how many women allow the smallest trifles to break up the harmony of a home. A wife separated from her husband recently, after 20 years of happy married life, merely because he refused to give up smoking. He had enjoyed his pipe in peace all these years, but she took an unreasonable wifely whim against the weed. And now comes the Austrian archduke who threw away a large fortune and the chances of a throne to marry a wife for love. And she spoils the whole romance and happiness of both, and brings a beautiful love story to the divorce court because she insists that her husband shall lead the "simple life," including a dress of sacking, and vow never to shave or cut his hair.—Chicago Journal.

The Essence of Dullness.

It is true, no doubt, that many learned people are dull; but there is no indication whatever that they are dull because they are learned. True dullness is seldom acquired; it is a natural grace, the manifestations of which, however modified by education, remain in substance the same. Fill a dull man to the brim with knowledge, and he will not become less dull; as the enthusiasts for education vainly imagine; but neither will he become duller. He will remain in essence what he always has been and always must have been. But whereas his dullness would, if left to itself, have been merely vacuous, it may have become, under careful cultivation, pretentious and pedantic.—Balfour.

Quinine in Sunflower.

An eminent Spanish scientist has made the recent discovery that the sunflower yields a splendid febrifuge that can be used as a substitute for quinine. More than ten years ago Moncorvo reported to the Therapeutical Society of Paris with relation to the same subject. Accordingly the sunflower should not only by its growing exert great fever-dispelling effect, but also yield a product which is used advantageously in all fevers.

Sure Enough.

"Slick Pete seems to have got next to that young dude," said the first bunko man, "but I wonder what's the use." "Oh, there must be somethin' in it," replied the other, "for Pete don't waste his time." "Well, anyhow, it looks as if he was tryin' to do somethin' foolish."

UNION SUPPORTS MOXON

Senator Kean, County Chairman Smith and Others want to See Him Speaker.

"DORY" GIBBS HIS MANAGER.

Assemblymen W. W. Smalley, W. B. Martin and W. Prince Are Also in the Race for the Honor.

Union county's Republican leaders are actively supporting the candidacy of Assemblyman John R. Moxon for the House speakership, and the Elizabeth druggist declares that he has a fighting chance of landing the "plum." His campaign manager, "Uncle Dory" Gibbs, of Camden county, is leaving no stone unturned to get hold of votes for him and it is reliably stated that many of the older members of the House are favorably considering his claims. In fact, it is said that he has a number of pledges from the "hold-over" members.

United States Senator John Kean is held out by Mr. Moxon as his chief supporter. The fact is that all the Republican leaders in the county are behind him although they are much divided as to his chances for getting the position. County Chairman Smith is counted upon to aid his canvas and Mr. Smith says he will gladly do all he can for the Elizabethan or any other deserving Union county Republican.

"I personally consider that Assemblyman H. D. Thompson, of Mercer, would make an ideal choice," said Mr. Smith today, "but if Mr. Moxon is in the race I am heart and soul for him. He comes from my county and naturally I would like to see him honored. I understood that Senator Kean also takes the same stand. What Mr. Moxon's chances are I do not know, but from what I am told I believe that a number of the old members in the House are with him in the flight."

Assemblyman W. W. Smalley, of Somerset, is still in the race and it is believed that he will make a good showing when the election takes place. Assemblyman William B. Martin, of Essex county, and Assemblyman Prince, of Passaic, are two other candidates.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS TO HOLD A RECEPTION.

Plainfield Branch, United Commercial Travelers' Association, recently organized here, will hold its first reception and banquet at the Casino on Friday night, December 20, and plans are being perfected to make it one of the best of the kind ever held in the city. Elaborate preparations are being made for a program of exceptional merit, and there will be several speakers of prominence from New York, Brooklyn and other large cities.

The local branch, it is said, promises to be one of the most progressive of any in the grand council of New Jersey and Delaware and an active winter season is expected. The entertainment committee in charge of the details for the coming reception and banquet comprise Frank W. Weed, chairman; J. A. G. Pike, H. J. Percy, John M. Lewin, Charles A. Sturtevant and James C. Field.

Loomis and Fleming at the Casino.

George Fleming, the baritone, who will appear with Charles Battell Loomis at the Casino, Monday night, November 25, has one of those voices that makes friends. "His style is simple, his frame is mighty, and when he rises to his feet and removes his glasses, to save them from the resonant vibrations of his powerful tone production, one feels that here is a man who loves to sing, and when the song is ended there are always calls for more." Mr. Fleming will sing English and Irish folk songs, and Mr. Loomis will give some of his best original selections, including some of his experiences while in Ireland this season as a guest of Lady Gregory and William Butler Yeats.

Brooklyn Minister to Preach.

The second sermon on the series, "The Kingdom of God in the Life of Man," will be given at All Soul's Unitarian church tomorrow evening at 7:45. Rev. Caleb S. S. Dutton, of Brooklyn, will speak, taking for his topic, "A Man's Resources." Mr. Dutton is the successor to John White Chadwick, who was for forty years the widely known pastor of the Second Unitarian church, of Brooklyn. He is a young man, but has already shown much of the literary and sermonic power that characterized his predecessor.

CAR NO. 24 FOOLED THE AUTO DIRECTORS

Harry Dreier, the West Front street sporting goods man, got into the automobile endurance contest for a short time last night and incidentally had a lot of fun with a crowd of 100 or more people at Madison avenue and Front street, who took it upon themselves to direct the chug-chug drivers.

Mr. Dreier prepared a large identification card bearing the number 24, one not used in the test, and fastened it to his car. He got into the machine all bundled up and with a friend beside him heavily wrapped in furs, proceeded by a side route into Liberty street and then went sailing up West Front toward town. At Madison avenue the crowd spotted the number and thinking it was another one of the racing machines yelled for the driver not to continue on West Front street because of the car track excavations. Mr. Dreier was "wise" and swung into Madison avenue, thence down West Second street back to Liberty and around the same way again.

Once more the crowd yelled directions to turn and once more he swung back over the same route. The third time he came around No. 24 was still fresh in the minds of the directors and they took a sudden "tumble." Instead of being warned to turn Mr. Dreier was greeted with cries of "Get a horse," "Get the hook" and "Back up." They fell on deaf ears as he had his little joke and was ready to drop out and enjoy a good laugh.

PAYMASTER ROBBED OF $7,000 BY ARMED MEN

Surprised by a band of five armed men, who sprang from the side of the road and covered them with revolvers as they were driving along the River Drive near Passaic on their way to Delawanna, Paymaster Louis Knapp, of the Worthen and Aldrich Bleacheries, and his driver, George Cummings, were bound and tied to trees to the roadside yesterday afternoon, while the highwaymen rifled the wagon and took the suitcase containing $7,000 in bills and gold, which the men were taking to the Bleacheries to pay off the hands there today. Three Italian laborers, Frank Demarco, Gastano Cigno and Philip Deprimo, who gave New York addresses, have been arrested by the Passaic police, and are being held on suspicion. It is believed that the robbery was planned by an employe of the bleacheries.

The two men, who have made the trip by road time after time with the pay roll, had no suspicion of danger, and after drawing the money from the Hobart Trust Company at Passaic, started off in the wagon for the bleacheries. The hold-up came as a complete surprise, and the men found themselves looking into the muzzles of revolvers, with which they were covered by two of the band while the others cut loose the horse and made away with the money. The men's watches, and a revolver which Knapp carried, were also taken.

Mrs. Mary Hester, who witnessed the hold-up from the winddow of her home near the spot, telephoned to Chief of Police Hendry and then ran down the road and cut the two men loose from the trees where they were bound. Detective Sergeant Green and a squad of plain clothes men arrived in an automobile just as the two men were freed, and spread out in every direction after the highwaymen. They came upon the three arrested in a single party, and captured them after a hard chase. They denied all knowledge of the hold-up, and said that they were out hunting, but they were held by the Passaic police as suspects. One of them is believed to be an employe at the bleacheries.

BRAKEMAN NEAR DEATH.

Falls Under Moving Car Which Is Stopped Just in Time.

Thomas Cyphers, a brakeman on the drill train of the Central Railroad which works between Plainfield and Roselle, had a narrow escape from instant death Thursday while the locomotive was drilling cars into J. S. Irving Company's coal yards in Westfield.

Cyphers was turning on the brake at the top of a battleship gondola car, when the brakestaff broke, throwing him to the rails directly in front of the moving car. Conductor Colohan, of the drill crew, shouted to the engineer, who stopped the car just as it was about to run over Cyphers.

The injured man was picked up by comrades and carried to the Westfield freight station. After he recovered from fright Dr. Tubbs dressed a few bruises upon his face and body. He was not seriously hurt. Cyphers went to his home on Elizabeth avenue, Elizabeth.

CAR BURNED, LIFE SAVED

Paul F. Gillette's $7,000 Car Put Out of Endurance Run by a Fire

MECHANIC IS BADLY BURNED.

Peter LaGrue Runs When His Clothes Catch Fire from Gasoline Flames, and Man With Fur Coat Chases Him and Saves His Life.

Burned to the frame work, the 20-horsepower Pullman automobile entered by P. F. Gillette, formerly of this city, in the endurance run begun yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Automobile and Motor Club of New Jersey lies in front of the club's headquarters, at Chestnut and Broad streets, in Newark, where, through the carelessness of some bystander or employe, it was set on fire at 7 o'clock last night while taking on new fuel. The fire department, which was summoned as soon as it was seen that the flames were beyond control of those present, could do little to help except by keeping back the crowds and quieting the fears of the residents, alarmed by the repeated explosions and the roar of the flames.

Peter La Grue, the mechanic employed by Mr. Gillette, was badly burned about the hands in his endeavor to extinguish the flames which burst from his coat after the first explosion. That he did not lose his life was due to some unknown man who beat out the fire on his clothing.

Haste to get into and out of the control established at the headquarters was primarily responsible for the fire. The car, which bore the number 17, had been unfortunate ever since the start from the clubhouse early in the afternoon. Roads that did not seem to hamper others in the contest held it back, and by the time the first lap was finished and the machine rolled up to the house it was several minutes behind time and every one was on the alert to light the lamps, fill the gasoline tank and get it away again to catch up with its fellows.

The car had scarcely come to a stop when La Grue was on the ground beside it, ready to take the gasoline cans as they were handed and fill the tank under the front seat, which had been turned up by another member of the party, while a third lighted the lamps.

The only light for the men to work by came from the arc light on the corner. Whether it was because the tank leaked or, in his haste, some of the liquid was spilled down the sides of the car is not known, but a moment or two after the can had been set again on the sidewalk near the machine it was seen that the woodwork was glistening and wet. Two or three of those standing near stepped forward to warn the chauffeur, but before anything could be done the fire had started. The flames first broke out at the can on the flagstones, so several witnesses claim, but for effect it might as well have been in the car itself, so quickly did the blaze travel from the ground to the tank.

La Grue was leaning over the front seat peering into the half filled receptacle when the flames reached him and even before he could jump back the seat rose up as the gasoline ignited, scattering liquid fire over him and over the owner and Charles Parsons, who were sitting in the car. Both covered their faces with their hands for a second and did not see La Grue, who, with his coat, his cap and his hair a mass of flames, was running blindly down Chestnut street, beating himself with his bare hands. Everyone in the crowd was equally stupefied by the noise and glare, excepting one man, who snatched up a heavy fur overcoat and made after the mechanic, catching him and rolling the coat round and round him until the flames were smothered, burning his own hands painfully as he did. La Grue was too much dazed and the bystanders were too excited to note who it was who had saved the other and he is still unidentified.

In the meantime Mr. Gillette and his friend were doing what they could to extinguish the flames that had taken hold of the floor and seats in the tonneau, as well as of their own clothes. They had nothing but their hands to work with and though they managed to free themselves from the flames they soon saw that they could not hope to do anything more.

The explosion of the gas tank had been heard for blocks and almost before the two passengers were out of the car people were rushing from all directions. They soon realized that water was worse than useless and a few of the clearer headed began throwing what dirt they could gather in their hands on the fast disapeparing sides of the machine, but their supply was limited.

A fire alarm was turned in, but while the engines were on the way

SURROGATE'S OFFICE BEGINS ON SALARY BASIS

Surrogate George T. Parrot today began his new term of office under the new law which abolishes fees and fixes a salary of $5,000 for counties of the population of Union. He received his commission yesterday. The office of Surrogate is run on the steady lines of any business, and the beginning of a new term of course will bring no changes of any account in the method of transacting business.

The Surrogate's assistants, however, will have their duties increased because of the fact that all moneys paid into the office must be accounted for in detail to the County Collector, acting for the Board of Freeholders, which will entail a much more complex system of bookkeeping than has been necessary heretofore. The assistants have, under the old law been paid by the Surrogate. Under the new they will receive their compensation from the county through the County Collector. The salaries of the assistants have as yet not been fixed, but they will probably not differ materially from what they have been receiving.

It was possible for the Surrogate, under the old law, to work gratuitously, when the acceptance of fees would have eaten up a large share of an insignificant estate, and in a great number of cases this was done and no fee accepted. Hundreds of heirs of small estates were thus befriended. Under the new law, fees being abolished, there can, of course, be no discrimination, and no matter how small the estate the required amount will have to be paid for settling it.

Mr. Parrot took the oath of office for his new term on Tuesday, and at that time filed the required bond.

FIRST BAPTISTS HAVE A REAL INDIAN NIGHT

Under the auspices of the Sunday-school of the First Baptist church an entertaining program was given in the lecture room, last night, comprising tableaux, shadow pictures and stereopticon views, depicting the primitive Indian and progress made in his education. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Reuben Knox, chairman, assisted by Miss Marguerite McCutchen, Miss May Shreve, Miss May Serrell and James E. Church. They were assisted by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, the pastor, and George A. Chapman, who read the selections explaining the tableaux, and Mrs. J. Hervey Buchanan and Miss Marguerite Serrell at the piano.

The first part of the program was devoted to the illustration of Longfellow's beautiful story, "Hiawatha." Those presented the tableaux, representing the characters were as follows:

"Nokomis," Miss Henrietta Winn; "Hiawatha," Hervey Douglass; "Little Hiawatha," Grace Hunt; "Minnehaha," Miss Alice, Macniff; "Wenonah," Miss Helen Adams; mother of papoose, Miss Helen Guttridge; papoose, Lawrence French; "William Penn," James E. Church; "Wilted Grass," George H. Batchelor.

These tableaux were followed by two more representing a husking bee and wedding feast in which the following took part: The Misses Violet VanWinkle, Ethel Webster, Nellie Lake, Grace Williams, Carrie Williams and Lester Mellick, Charles Lee, Leland Manning, Harvey Douglass, Cory Adams and William Herrmann.

The latter part of the program was devoted to showing about twenty-five slides by A. V. Searing, Jr., giving those present an excellent idea of the primitive Indians, their mode of living. These included an Indian dog dance, an Indian doctor, an embryo Cheyenne warrior, a group of Commanche women, Cheyenne mother and papoose, Miss Mary J. Burdett, Miss Crawford, Miss McLean, Miss Marzetta J. Reeside, missionaries to the Indians; Senator Charles Curtis, of Kansas, whose blood is three-quarter Indian. These pictures were explained by Mr. Chapman.

A social hour was enjoyed after the entertainment and refreshments were served under the direction of the committee.

Miss Ruth Morgan Tenney, daughter of the late John Tenney, Sr., of Philadelphia, and Howard Augustus Colby, brother of State Senator Everett Colby, were married quietly this afternoon at the home of the bride's brother, John Tenney, 1405 Evergreen avenue. Rev. Dr. Richardson, the assistant to Rev. The bride was richly gowned in white crepe meteor, trimmed with lace. She carried a handsome bouquet of bride roses. The wedding march was played by an orchestra. The bride was given in marriage by her brother. After the ceremony a reception was held and the bride and groom received congratulations. The wedding repast followed. Later Mr. and Mrs. Colby left to enjoy an extended automobile trip. Upon their return they will reside at 1405 Evergreen avenue. The bride was the recipient of a large collection of choice wedding gifts, costly and handsome, one entire room being devoted to their display.

Mr. Colby is also well known throughout the State and in New York, and is a prominent figure in social circles.

AUTO RACE FURNISHES LOTS OF EXCITEMENT

Replete with spectacular features, the twenty-four-hour endurance contest conducted by the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club and started from Newark at 2 o'clock yesterday, furnished plenty of excitement for interested people all along the ninety-four-mile course. In this city crowds watched the passing of the machines until late last night and this morning newcomers took up the vigil. The fact that a Plainfield car is competing and a former Plainfielder was driving another entry gave a decidedly local coloring to the race.

It was announced at noon today that of the twenty-one machines starting, fourteen were still running with a perfect score. One of them is the Mitchell car entered by the Frank L. C. Martin Company and which has been driven continuously by Frank Mazzacho. The Pullman car entered by Paul Gillette, formerly of this city, in behalf of the company organized by himself, Lester B. and Leon Harris, was put out of business by the explosion and fire at Newark. Mrs. M. H. Hickey, the only woman driver in the contest, was still going at noon time but she had been penalized heavily because of the engine of her car stopping suddenly while she was in Newark.

The contest will be concluded at 2:31 this afternoon.

PRISONERS RODE TO JAIL IN MAYOR'S CARRIAGE

Despite the fact that they suffered the ignominy of arrest, George Muirhead and Thomas Stout, who work for a Southside man, can lay claim today to being carried to police headquarters in more style than has ever fallen to the lot of a local prisoner. They were picked up at Park avenue and Fifth street by Roundsman Higgins at 9 o'clock last night and because of their helpless condition from the effects of rum, were given a lift to the lock-up in no less an aristocratic vehicle than Mayor Fisk's own carriage. The city's executive happened along just at the time that the officer was having a hard tussle in getting the two men in shape so that he could ring up the patrol wagon, and he graciously stepped out of the carriage and placed it at the bluecoat's disposal. Muirhead and Stout were bundled inside on the soft cushion and they acknoldeged the compliment by shouting the donor's praises all the way to jail, only at the time they didn't know his identity.

The two men were sent out by their employer last night to get a cow at the freight house and they spent quite some time in downtown saloons before starting back home. The bovine was fastened behind a two-wheeled gig and when it objected to being pulled along as they were proceeding up Park avenue, the caretakers got into an argument as to the best way it should be handled. The argument waxed so warm that they forgot to watch the horse and it pranced upon the sidewalk, and then made a dive for Dr. Davis' lawn. The cow tried to go in another direction and the next moment everything was in a tangle, with Muirhead and Stout rolling on the ground and yelling with the full strength of their lungs. The racket aroused the neighborhood and a telephone call was sent for the police.

Roundsman Higgins secured the horse and cow before looking after the men, as both were hardly able to move, and Patrolman Meyers was afterward sent for the animals. He managed to get them both down to Front street on the way to headquarters, but as he was about to line them up in front of the building, the cow dropped into the car track excavation. "Nick" has had experience with milk givers so he let the horse go and yelled for help in order to keep it from stumbling over the ties and breaking a leg. Captain Fredericksen hurried out his reserve patrolmen and the cow was finally "jacked up" and moved to terra firma. Both it and the horse were later removed to Boice & Ball's livery.

When Muirhead and Stout were arraigned before Judge Runyon this morning, they pleaded guilty to drunkenness, but so much amusement was occasioned by the facts surrounding their arrest, the offense didn't seem so bad. They got off on suspension of sentence after promising to take the pledge for a year.

TYLER SUGGESTS TRACY

Third Ward Councilman Presents His Name for Tax Collectorship.

MAYOR FISK HOLD CONFERENCE

Councilman Daniel Favorable to Coriell—Councilman Mellick Inclined Towards Townsend.

The first Colbyite to be mentioned in connection with the tax collectorship vacancy is Howard Tracy, of the Second ward. He is the chairman of the New Idea Central Committee and has been one of the most active figures among the anti-organization leaders. As the regulars are in the majority in the Common Council, it is not considered that his chances would be bright should his name be placed in nomination on Monday night.

It transpires that Mayor Charles J. Fisk had a private conference with members of the Common Council representing the Second and Third wards. The pow-wow took place on Thursday night and the subject was the collectorship job. No strictly "organization" man was present, the idea being, it is said, to ascertain the feeling among those not particularly active as organization workers.

At that conference, it is reported Councilman William S. Tyler, of the Third ward, suggested the name of Mr. Tracy. Councilman George P. Mellick is said to have talked favorably on the candidacy of William R. Townsend, although he showed a desire to size up the merits of the other candidates, who are Councilman William L. Gloak and former Sheriff B. Frank Coriell. Councilman Leslie M. Daniel spoke a good work for Mr. Coriell. No decision was arrived at but it is said that the members felt amply repaid for the time spent in talking over the subject.

It is said today that while Thomas Hanna is making no fight for the appointment, he would accept the honor if it came his way. All the leaders still remain non-committal. County Chairman Smith refuses to take any part in the fight; in fact he won't discuss the subject, holding that it is up to the Common Council to solve the problem.

CLOTHES PIN SOCIAL.

Quotations Furnished Partners for the Affair.

A "clothes pin social," under the auspices of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church, held in Vincent chapel, last night, afforded lots of fun for the large number of young people present. During the first part of the evening quotations printed on slips of paper and cut in half, were distributed among the young people and they found their partners by comparing the quotations. Afterward needles, thread and clothes pins were passed and all engaged in making clothes pin dolls. It was decided that Miss Cory made the best doll.

The rest of the evening was spent playing all kinds of games after which refreshments were served. Miss Helen Whitney was chairman of the committee in charge and Miss Edna French planned the games, probably, on Friday night, December 6, Rev. Dr. Baldwin, pastor of Calvary M. E. church, East Orange, will give a humorous lecture before the league.

"HARD TIME SOCIAL" GIVEN BY GRACE M. E. LEAGUERS.

Epworth Leaguers of Grace M. E. church gave a "Hard Time Social" in the church parlors last night. The members of the committee came in costumes depicting hard times, and the affair proved a great success.

The evening was passed in playing progressive games and later there was a spelling match, when Mrs. Charles W. Parsons, wife of the pastor, gave out the words to be spelled. The prize was a small flag, awarded to Mr. Cochran, and Miss Nettie Bauersach and Charles Dooley won the prizes for the best scores in the progressive games. The committee in charge of the affair was composed of the Misses Florence Smalley, Reda Kline, Edith Mager, Marion Mager and Helen Parsons, and Raymond Hart, Frank Steiner, George Parsons and Harold Mager.

FATAL END TO PRAYER.

While on Her Knees Before Stove Woman's Dress Catches Fire.

While kneeling in prayer at her home, Rosehill place and South street, in Elizabeth, Thursday morning, Mrs. Thomas McCormick, 60 years old, was fatally burned by the falling of a spark from the stove upon her dress.

Mrs. McCormick was accustomed to saying her prayers in the kitchen. She had lighted the fire and was offering up her supplication when her dress was set afire, and in a moment she was a mass of flames.

Her husband, an aged man, rushed to her rescue and his hands badly burned. With the aid of several of his children he managed to wrap a blanket about her and smother the flames. The woman was taken to the General Hospital and died at noon. Nine children survive.

Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, of Central avenue, has returned from a few days' visit at Carlisle, Pa.

REACHING THE SPOT.

It Can Be Done, So Scores of Plainfield Citizens Say.

To cure an aching back.
The pains of rheumatism,
The tired-out feelings,
You must reach the spot—get at the cause.
In most cases 'tis the kidneys.
Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys.

Mrs. K. C. Philpott, of 126 Plainfield avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Two years ago I suffered from rheumatism and also a severe backache or pain in the loins. I suppose it was all caused by an excess of uric acid in the blood, but at any rate, the medicines I was taking did not stop the pains. I therefore resorted to the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, and must say, in gratitude, that they gave me complete relief from my rheumatism and backache. I had no occasion to use any medicine for my kidneys since that time, until July, 1905, when I was not feeling just right, and suffering sharp twinges of pain in my back. My daughter got me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's pharmacy, and on using them they relieved me as before. I have often recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to people suffering from backache and rheumatism, and shall continue to do so."

TROLLEY COMPANY GETS WRIT OF ERROR.

Corporation Attorney Carey, of Jersey City, was served yesterday with a writ of error, taken out by the Public Service Railway Company, attacking the "no seat no fare" trolley ordinance upheld by the Supreme Court in a decision handed down a few days ago. It was expected that the Public Service Company would appeal the case to the Court of Errors and Appeals.

The question that will now have to be determined is whether the writ of error acts as a stay, and a conference of the members of the Law Department will be held today or Monday to look into this question. Some lawyers seen by a reporter yesterday were of the opinion that the writ of error acted as a stay, but others were equally positive that it did not so act, while not a few frankly admitted that they did not know whether it did or not.

In the meantime Mr. Carey has been completing his plans for testing the ordinance early next week. If it should be found that the appel acts as a stay nothing will have have been lost by this plan, but if, on the other hand, the appeal does not act as a stay, the city will be prepared to proceed at once in bringing the trolley company to book.

If, by reason of an appeal, the city is enjoined from enforcing the ordinance, it will be several months at least before a final decision is obtained. Such delay, however, would be beneficial to the trolley company, for not only would the ordinance be sidetracked, but the company would be given time in which to prepare for the changes which would have to be made should the ordinance be upheld by the Court of Errors and Appeals.

The Public Service Company, it is asserted by those responsible for the ordinance, could not even make a pretence of living up to the provisions without making vast changes in its system of operating cars. To begin with, many more cars would have to be provided and these are not to be had in a day. The company now has in operation nearly every one of the cars it controls, excepting the open cars. The latter cannot be operated in the winter time, as the law prohibits their use between November 1 and April.

Accepts Call to Morristown.

Morristown, Nov. 16.—The Rev. Alexander McCall, of Briarcliff Manor, N. Y., who was called to the pastorate of the South Street Presbyterian church here, has accepted and will take up his labors here on January 1. He will resign his present charge tomorrow. Mr. McCall has occupied the Morristown pulpit and has made a good impression, preaching to large congregations. The pulpit has been without a regular occupant since last April, when the Rev. Dr. Albert Erdman relinquished the pastorate after thirty-seven years of service and was made pastor emeritus. The congregation is a large and wealthy one and the church edifice is one of the finest in architecture and best equipped in the State. The pastor's salary is $4,000 and the use of the parsonage and livery.

Acquitted of Excise Violations.

Freehold, Nov. 16.—William Applegate, proprietor of the Monmouth House, at Asbury Park, and George E. Williams, a druggist, of Second avenue, Asbury Park, yesterday were acquitted by juries before whom they were tried on indictments charging them with selling liquor illegally last summer. Two indictments against Mrs. Della Barrow, of the Hotel New England, Asbury Park, were quashed. The evidence in these cases was obtained by New York detectives hired by the Asbury Park Excise ommission at an expense of $400.

Two Farm Hands Burned to Death.

Woodbridge, Nov. 16.—Fire which destroyed a barn and contents, the property of William Huber, a milk dealer here, last night caused the death of two farm hands. Twelve cows, three horses and the farming utensils were also destroyed in the blaze. The origin of the fire is unknown. The men burned are thought to be brothers named Kelly. They did work at various farms in this vicinity this fall and lived where they could. They had helped Huber husk corn yesterday and had been allowed to sleep in the barn.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

FOOTBALL.

Coach Crane of Harvard is the target for a bombarding from the critics for not preparing a defense for the Indians' forward pass.

Michigan outweighs Pennsylvania ten pounds a man. While this is a handicap which only the hardest kind of play can overcome, it is one which the Quakers have successfully met before. In all games in which Pennsylvania beat Harvard the latter was the heavier by a big margin. In 1904, when Pennsylvania won, 11 to 0, the Crimson had an advantage of eighteen pounds per man.

From all accounts the Michigan players are well versed in the "new game," and with a coach like Yost they are sure to show some clever variations of the forward pass and on-side kick. The team that is the most proficient in these plays will probably be returned the winner.

Last year's scores of the teams that will meet today were: Yale, 6; Princeton, 0. Pennsylvania, 17; Michigan, 0. Indians, 17; Minnesota, 0. Harvard, 22; Dartmouth, 9.

West Point plays Tufts today. Then the cadets have the strong Syracuse eleven to meet before they play Annapolis. A year ago Syracuse beat West Point, 4 to 0.

Yale averages 189 pounds to Princeton's 182; Pennsylvania's average is 180, and Michigan's 190.

On form it would appear that West Point would be the favorite in the game with Annapolis, but form counts for little in the season's games.

After witnessing the Penn. State game Coach Yost said he thought the Michigan team would find it very difficult to win from the Red and Blue.

Brown, Princeton's right end, who proved a good mate to Wister in the Tigers-Indians game, is showing great speed in practise.

Minnesota expects Capron to score several field goals against the Carlisle Indians todoy. Capron's record entitles him to a deal of consideration in this respect.

When Yale and Princeton take the field against each othed today each will be a leader in one department. Princeton has done the most scoring; Yale's defense has produced the best results.

Every game has produced something sensational in the line of goal keeping. Last Saturday O'Brien of Swarthmore came to the front once more, rivalling the feat of Capron of Minnesota, in making three drop kicks in one game. O'Brien has kicked ten field goals this season, and his toe has counted for 40 out of 114 points scored by Swarthmore—more than one-third of the total.

The teams that have scored over 100 points this season are Princeton, Indians, Pennsylvania, Harvard, Yale, Cornell, Brown, Dartmouth, Lafayette, Syracuse, Penn. State, Williams, Swarthmore, Fordham, Lehigh, Michigan and Chicago, and teams that have scored more than 200 points are Princeton, Indians and Pennsylvania.

Secret practice at Annapolis has proved so successful that it will be continued during the remainder of the season. Members of the eleven have been excused until after the Army game.

GOLF.

On Monday next the stockholders of the Morris County Golf Club will hold their annual meeting in the clubhouse. The committee on nominations has named for directors J. O. H. Pitney, G. G. Frelinghuysen, C. W. Harkness, R. H. Thomas, Charles Scribner, H. McK. Twombly, J. I. Waterbury and L. A. Thebaud. The club members have nominated J. B. Dickson, G. C. Palmer, William Shippen, W. D. Vanderpool, A. H. Vernam, Ridley Watts and R. H. Williams. The committee appointed to nominate candidates for the offices to be filled at the annual meeting of the club in 1908 consists of Leland B. Garretson, D. H. McAlpin, 2d, and Grinnell Willis.

Foundation work is nearly finished on the new house of the Apawamis club to replace the one destroyed by fire last winter. The building is to be in the modern colonial style and larger than the former house. Pantry, kitchen and living rooms for the servants will be on the third floor and there will be twelve bedrooms for members on the second floor. The assembly room, office and dining rooms will occupy the entire first floor, while the locker, bath and dressing rooms for the men and junior members, with the women's lockers and resting room, will be on the ground and basement floors. The "nineteenth hole" will be in the basement, adjoining the professional's shop. Frank A. Moore, of the Apawamis club, is the architect, and it is expected to have the new building ready by May.

The committee desires it known that the annual meeting of the Metropolitan Golf Association on December 10 at Delmonico's is free to all members of clubs, whether they are voting delegates or not. There will be refreshments and all golfers who appear will be made welcome.

Members of the Eastern Professional Golfers' Association are to see Harry Lauder, the Scotch comedian, on Monday night, and he is to be their guest at a supper after the performance.

The Roseville Golf Club, which has held its land on an uncertain tenure for over a year, will soon give up the contention with the builders. A street is to be opened across the course and houses are to be built on several parts of the grounds. The club won the team championship this season of the East Jersey Golf League, and many of the members are very good players. It is understood that the Forest Hill Field Club and Arsdale Golf Club, which are both within a short journey of the Roseville course, will offer special inducements to gain the members of the old club.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Denman Thompson's production of "The Old Homestead" is the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight.

The story of Jules Murry's new college play, "At Yale," is that of the stroke, Dick Seeley, and his winning the 'varsity boat race. Incidentally the love story that weaves itself around Dick and his chum's sister is one of the prettiest idylls of the stage, and the tragic element, introduced by Dave Burly, gives just the right tinge to the rest of the play. The production is made by Jules Murry, of New York, and is to be seen here next Tuesday night.

"No Mother to Guide Her," with Miss Alma Hearn as the star, will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre next Thursday night. The play is a strong, well written story, and judging from the reports from other cities, and lovers of good melodrama, should find this play to their tastes. It requires four acts to interpret the plot, all of which are carried complete. A strong supporting company is promised.

R.R. TAXES $2,257,126.65

Total Assessment Against the 115 Companies Aggregate $200,192,173.

ON THE MAIN STEMS IN STATE.

Decrease in Tax, the State Getting $252,245 Less Than the Total Sum Last Year.

The schedule of assessments on railroad property and the amount of tax to be paid under the schedule has been filed with State Comptroller Morgan by the State Board of Assessors through its secretary, Irvine Maguire. The tax will be payable after February 1 next, as the assessments are for this year. The tax against the companies aggregates $2,257,126.65 and the total assessment amounts to $200,192,173.

The tax is levied against 115 companies. Last year 114 companies were assessed $194,856,819, and the tax then amounted to $3,509,371.25. The comparison shows that while this year is an increase of $5,335,354 in the assessments, the tax to be collected by the State is $252,244.60 less than last year. This situation is accounted for by the fact that the average State tax this year is less than last year. Under the Perkins act of 1906 the main stem and franchises of steam railroads are taxable at the average rate of the State, instead of at the flat rate of one-half of one per cent., as formerly. Last year the average State rate was $1,801 on each $100 worth of property. This year the average rate of the State has been computed by the State Board of Assessors at $1,627 on each $100.

The present valuation and taxation is exclusive of "second class" railroad property, which is now locally assessed and taxed under the provisions of chapter 280 of the laws of 1906.

The excess of the tax to be collected this year over the one-half of one per cent., which will go to the State for State purposes, will be devoted to the State school fund for distribution throughout the State. The amount of the tax to be paid by the railroads for State expenses is $1,000,960.86. Owing to the increased assessment this is $26,676.76 more than last year, when the State's share was $974,284.10. This will leave next year for the schools of the State $2,256,165.79, or $278,921.36 less than was assessed this year.

The payment by the railroads of this tax under the new assessment will be contingent upon a decision from the Court of Errors and Appeals upholding the Perkins act. The matter is still pending, and the tax for this year has not yet been paid.

HE'S DOWN ON CIGARETTES.

Navy Surgeon-General Wants Them Limited to Men.

Presley M. Rixey, surgeon-general of the navy, in his annual report for the fiscal year ending June 30 last, made public yesterday, recommends that an order be issued by the Navy Department forbidding the use of cigarettesby all persons in the navy under 21 years of age.

If an order of this sort were issued, General Rixey believes that the sick records would be smaller and the general efficiency of the service would be improved.

To give an idea of the amount of cigarette tobacco consumed in the navy, Dr. Rixey includes in his report a statement submitted to the department by Surgeon Norton, of the battleship Missouri, which shows that in three months the crew of that vessel —700 men—used 1,500 books of cigarette papers, 1,200 pounds of smoking tobacco and 37,000 cigarettes.

WALKS OUT OF JAIL.

Negro Accused of Theft Easily Gets Away.

Frank McGhee, a negro, who has been under arrest on a charge of robbery, escaped from the jail at Cranford Thursday. It is believed that the key of his cell was left near the cell door and that McGhee reached out through the bars, procured the key and unlocked the door.

The negro, after he had eaten his breakfast, was locked in his cell by Policeman William Jennings, who then went downtown. He was notified a short time later by Thomas Redrupt, who has a blacksmith shop in the rear of the jail, said that McGhee had run across lots and boarded an eastbound Central Railroad train. The negro was accused of stealing $350.

For several months past Mr. Ford has handled ship news at the battery for several Metropolitan journals, and his work attracted the attention of the company officials. Mr. Fort, his wife and daughter will reside in New York, while his office will be at Hoboken. The position secured by him pays about $2,000 a year.

Mr. Bryan says he will run for President again if the people want him. He need have no hesitation on that score. No one will object to his running from now until doomsday if he gets any satisfaction from the useless exercise.

THE FORUM.

Doesn't Blame Wife.

Editor, The Daily Press:

I wish you to correct a statement issued in yesterday evening's Press that my daughter lost her eye through her mother's carelessness which is untrue. The facts of the case are: My little boy Andrew, aged eight years, was playing in the tool house close to the cottage and found the pistol which he took to his mother. He gave her the pistol, but as the pistol on changing hands the shot was fired and unfortunately my little daughter being interested in the proceedings got into the line of fire which cost her an eye. This fact goes to show that the party or parties whoever left the postol there, not only left it fully loaded but left it full cocked. The pistol was but a toy pistol but a very dangerous pistol with full cartridge case of small shot. A family just moving into a new home is not prepared to meet a living arsenal. It is hard enogh to have your child crippled for life without having it pointed out that it was caused by her own mother's carelessness. In this case the blame lies at the door of the party or parties who with criminal neglect left this pistol on the premises. I think the former owner can be identified. Trusting you will correct your previous statement and oblige, yours truly,

JOHN MILES.

ALBERT KALISCH DIES IN NEWARK OF APOPLEXY.

Retired from the Jewelry Business to Engage in Real Estate and Insurance—Was High Mason.

Albert Kalisch, once a leading Newark manufacturer and retail dealer in Newark, but for the last few years engaged in the real estate business, died yesterday morning in his home, No. 23 Parkhurst street. He had been ill only a week, having suffered a stroke of apoplexy last Saturday. He was sixty-three years old, and died on the anniversary of the birth of his father, the late Rev. Dr. Isadore Kalisch. He was born in Posen, Prussia, and came to this country when he was four years old, with his parents, who left their native home because of political strife, which was then disrupting the country. The family settled in the West, and Albert Kalisch learned the jewelry trade in Chicago.

He went to Newark in 1864, and after two years of manufacturing opened a store in Market street, which he continued for twenty-five years. He then became business manager of the Newark Morning Times and later engaged in the real estate and insurance business. He is survived by a son and three daughters and by a sister and four brothers. The latter are Leonard, Samuel and Abner Kalisch, of Newark, all lawyers, and Burnham Kalisch, a member of the New York Bar.

Albert Kalisch was a member of the Masonic fraternity, in which he wore the jewel of a grand high priest of the Royal Arch Masons, and was a member of the Knights of Honor.

CHURCH WOMEN NETTED $200 BY FAIR AND BAZAAR

Under the auspices of the Pastor's Aid Society, a successful fair and bazaar was held in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church last night. The affair was well attended by the parishioners and their friends, and the various booths were thronged with buyers all the evening. The many dainty and useful articles made by the women of the church for sale at the booths were quickly disposed of, and more than $200 was netted as a result of the affair. The money will be used for the carpet fund, to purchase a carpet for the main church.

During the evening, refreshments, consisting of ice cream and cake, were served by a corps of waitresses, including the Misses Wilbur, Hill, Campbell, Kelly, Hazelton, Hammond, Korff, Fowler, Boice and Englehart. Martin A. Korff, leader of the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, and two others, rendered instrumental selections, which were well received. The booths, which were in charge of the various women of the society, were tastefully decorated, and the ideas were novel and created much admiring comment.

The flower booth, in charge of Mrs. J. B. Allen, was surrounded by a curtain of trailing vines, and artificial flowers. The flowers were sold by Mrs. John Brower, Mrs. Morris, Miss Lucy Pound, Miss Maud Hazeltine and Miss Jessie Hill. Banked with wisteria vines and peopled by the members of the committee in Japanese costume, the Japanese tea room was a miniature Oriental bower. Mrs. John R. Westervelt was in charge, and with her were Mrs. Harry Williams, Mrs. A. R. Bond, Mrs. L. H. Gates, Miss Sue Farland, Miss Julia Williams and Miss Ricker.

The shape of a mammoth basket, with lavish decorations of ribbons, the candy table proved a centre of popularity much of the evening. Here Miss Addie Dietrich was in charge, and with her as assistants were Mrs. Buckalew and the Misses Catherine Lounsbury, Beatrice Miner, Ella Lounsbury, Bessie Bond and Clara Van Fleet. At the fancy table, Mrs. D. K. Young, the chairman, was assisted by Mrs. C. L. Clark, Mrs. R. H. Radford, Mrs. J. F. Johnson, Mrs. Norman Currie, Mrs. A. E. Hoagland, and Mrs. Freeman Shotwell. At the children's table, where Mrs. W. W. Dunn was in charge, were Mrs. H. A. Pope, Mrs. A. D. Dinnan, Mrs. H. A. Shaffus, Mrs. Poinier and Miss Bull.

Aprons and bags, useful as well as ornamental, were sold at a prettily decorated booth in charge of Mrs. George B. Wean. With her were Mrs. Edgar George, Mrs. A. L. Cadmus, Mrs. Deforest, Mrs. C. McKillop and Mrs. R. B. Hill. Fancy cakes were sold out rapidly at the cake booth, where Mrs. John Hamilton was in charge, assisted by Mrs. Bodine, Mrs. Charles Hummer, Mrs. Martin A. Korff, Mrs. George Ballentyne, and Miss Helen Burroughs. Ice cream was served at a booth in charge of Mrs. A. V. Searing, Sr., assisted by Mrs. L. H. Hummer, Sr., Mrs. Dunning, Mrs. Staats, Mrs. Boice and Mrs. John Petrie.

The affair was arranged by the women of the Pastor's Aid Society and Mrs. Clarence E. Bond was chairman of the general committee in charge.

two more explosions occurred, one caused by the heating of the gas tank feeding the lights and the other by on averheated tire. The reports shook the nerves of the crowd, and few were taking a hand at killing the flames when the fire apparatus arrived. It was a camparatively simple matter for the firemen to get the chemicals on the blaze, and it was soon extinguished.

The total value of the car was about $7,500. The body was completely consumed, and one tire exploded. The damage to the engines is not yet known.

Eagle Didn't Know Eagle from Owl.

Montclair, Nov. 16.—Frank H. Morehead, of the Montclair aerie of Eagles and a well known hunter, has always been ambitious to shoot an eagle, so that he could present a stuffed specimen to his lodge. He went hunting Thursday and shot a large bird which he thought was a fine type of the American eagle. On his way home he visited a taxidermist to make arrangements for mounting the eagle. The taxidermist told Morehead the bird was an owl.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

A large audience was well entertained at the Presbyterian chapel last night when James A. Cruikshank, "the outdoor man," gave his talk on wolf hunting in the Canadian woods. The hunting trip described was one in which Mr. Cruikshank took part in last winter. He spoke in an informal way, exhibiting the snowshoes he wore while on the trip and the gun he used to get the wolves. Lantern slides of photographs he took while on the trip made the lecture most realistic, for the hunter is as good a shot with a camera as with a rifle.

The State automobile endurance contest is creating quite a little excitement in the borough today. The big cars, with their grimy drivers, passed through town at frequent intervals from yesterday at about 5 o'clock until after noon today, and were haled with cheers as they whirled by. Many seemed to be exceeding the speed limit, but though several narrow escapes were reported, no accidents to Dunellenites were reported. Each of the cars that finished the test run passed through town five times.

After being shut down for more than a week on account of the present stringency of the money market, the Aluminum Press Works started up again today. The announcement that the shop will run on a half time schedule was made to the men when they came back. The company claims to have a great many orders to fill, but it was said at the shop today that until the present tightness of the money market is relieved, the half time schedule will be continued.

Rev. W. W. Casselberry, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, who is a delegate to the Presbyterian Brotherhood Convention being held this week at Cincinnati, Ohio, has secured his brother, Rev. Harvey C. Casselberry, pastor of the Ocean City Presbyterian church, to preach in his stead tomorrow.

Tomorrow will be "Bible Day" at the First Baptist Sunday-school. Rev. George H. Gardner will make an address appropriate to the day at the session of Sunday-school in the morning, and the collection will be added to a general fund formed to aid in a free distribution of Bibles.

Rev. Henry N. Jordan, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, New Market, occupied his own pulpit again today for the first time since his return from his extended trip through the west.

The Misses Marguerite and Helen Day, daughters of Mrs. James Day, are confined to their home with scarlet fever.

Mrs. Charles Dodwell is sojourning at Atlantic City.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Services tomorrow at the Baptist church will be held at the usual hours, morning preaching 10:45; B. Y. P. U. meeting 7:15, followed at 8 o'clock by the evening sermon, Rev. T. Moore-Smith continuing his series of sermons upon "Principal Men of the Bible."

While no date has yet been set for the fair to be held under the auspices of the Public Library and Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company, the committee has about decided to postpone it until after the holidays.

Having an officer on duty at night has already had the desired effect. While no arrests have been made, the town has been quieter and but little disorder is heard on the street now at night.

James Hunt and family have removed from the borough to Greenville, Mr. Hunt having been transferred as agent from Fanwood to that station.

The local gunners report rabbits plentiful this season. Nearly all who have been out have had luck and brought in from one to ten.

"The Old Homestead," just as popular as ever, will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tonight.

Miss Jennie Devine, of Front street, has been entertaining friends from out of town.

Mrs. Adam Muff, of Front street, has been entertaining friends from New York.

TO ASK COURT TO PASS ON THE RIPPER BILL.

Fagan Officials Will Try to Have a Special Session of the Supreme Court on January 2.

With a view to having the constitutionality of the Ripper bill settled at the earliest possible moment, Fagan officials in Jersey City who are affected by the bill will make an effort to have the Supreme Court convened in special session January 2 next. The Ripper bill cannot be attacked until Mayor H. Otto Wittpenn, who will take office January 1 next, appoints successors to the Fagan officials.

Mayor Wittpenn will appoint on January 1 a complete set of officials and these will take possession of the various offices and settle down to business on the morning following. The Fagan officials may report each day, but they will, to all intents and purposes, be out of office. Should the Supreme Court decide that the Ripper bill is unconstitutional an appeal will be taken by the Wittpenn appointees to the Court of Errors and Appeals, but this appeal will not act as a stay. The Fagan hold over officials will be returned to office and they will act pending the appeal.

SAYS WE'LL EAT IN HEAVEN.

Dr. Torrey, Evangelist, Doesn't Believe in Ethereal Bodies Floating Around in Space Hereafter.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 16.—In the course of a "question meeting" conducted by the Rev. R. A. Torrey, an evangelist, in the Great Northern theatre, yesterday, Dr. Torrey declared that in the future life beings which have passed from this life will be endowed with actual bodies capable of absorbing and enjoying food, and that he did not believe in ethereal bodies "floating around in space."

This answer was based on a query on the statement in Acts x., 41.

"Why should Jesus need food after he arose again from the dead?" was the interrogation.

"Jesus did not need food," said Dr. Torrey, "but in his new body he was capable of enjoying it. So it will be with us all."

MILK GOES UP ONE CENT.

The price of milk is to go up on Staten Island next Monday, and the announcement of the fact has aroused the indignation of the islanders. The small dealers that formerly supplied the residents with milk have for the most part been driven out of business by the strict enforcement of the requirements of the Board of Health, and one company now has practically the whole milk trade on the island.

This company announces an advance of one cent a quart for milk and two cents a half pint for cream. The old prices were eight and ten cents, and these have been raised to nine and twelve cents. The consumers complain loudly, but there doesn't seem to be anything for them to do but pay the new prices.

WILLING TO SELL THEIR BLOOD.

Applicants for Carl E. Trulock's $50 Not Healthy Enough.

Several persons who are willing to have their blood transferred with that of Mrs. Carl E. Trulock, of No. 119 Chestnut street, Montclair, have made application to earn the $50 which Mr. Trulock has advertised that the will pay for the sacrifice. None of the applicants has been accepted, because none appears to be in the healthy condition specified in the advertisement.

Believe Brink Was Slain.

Belvidere, Nov. 16.—The body of Henry Brink, who had been missing from his home since the night after election, was found yesterday in the Delaware river at the mouth of Pequest creek by Mrs. William Walters. Brink's friends declare he was murdered for robbery. This theory seems to be borne out by the fact that there are three holes in his skull, which cannot be accounted for as occuring after death.

AS DEVOE PREDICTS IT

New Jersey's Weather Prophet Says Winter Will be Long But Not Severe

ANOTHER "COOL" SUMMER.

Hackensack Forecaster Has a Record For Guessing Right Times —A Weather Student.

"The coming winter, while it will not be as severe as last winter, will be more extended." Such is the statement of Andrew Jackson Devoe, the Hackensack weather prophet. Mr. Devoe has been telling the people the sort of weather to expect for a great many years, but rarely has anybody believed him. Once in a while he has hit the nail on the head. Mr. Devoe blames the moon for all our troubles and sudden changes of temperature and storms. He claims that if the astronomers would give him the changes and movements of the moon in conjunction with the earth for ten years ahead he could predict the weather ten years ahead.

Since he was 18 years old Mr. Devoe has been a student of weather conditions, and twenty-seven years ago made a public address in Cooper Union, Manhattan, advocating practically the same theories as he does today.

The prophet predicts heavy storms in the West around January 1, and says that the coming winter will be excessively sever around the Mississippi Valley. Another cool summer is predicted for next year, but the following June—1909—will be a scorcher. He described the air as being full of holes or pitfalls, which were the principal cause of storms. He said that this explained the sudden dropping of balloons at times.

Devoe predicted the Charleston earthquake of 1886, and the Galveston flood of 1900, each a year ahead. Of all his forecasts more than 80 per cent. have been fulfilled, he says. He has heard thunder sixty miles away, while the best the Government can do is thirty miles. Showers can be seen 150 miles away and tornadoes 500 miles. Mr. Devoe claims simplicity itself for his system, which is merely a following of the laws of nature. He forecasted weather by clouds, and said that his eyes never deceived him in this method.

THE YACHT RAIDED.

Trenton Police Hear Girl Guest Attemped Suicide.

The police of Trenton Thursday raided the sloop yacht Undine, at anchor in the Dalaware and Raritan Canal, and arrested Thomas Jackson Pratt, said to be a wealthy brewer, of New Haven, Conn., and Miss May Lewis, of the same city. The technical charge of disorderly conduct was lodged against the couple and they were discharged after a private hearing before Judge Rees.

The police raided the boat on the strength of a report that the Lewis girl had attepted suicide by jumping into the canal after a quarrel with Pratt. Pratt and the Lewis girl said they are en route for the South. After their release from custody they declined to say anything. Pratt, it is said, was divorced recently.

ASK SURRENDER OF BOND.

The East Newark Borough Council thriugh its auditor, Edward T. McKean, of Harrison, has discovered an alleged shortage in the accounts of ex-Borough Collector Robert M. Marshall of $2,703.22, and the borough clerk, William Carey, was instructed last night by the council to so advise Mr. Marshall's surety, the American Surety Company, of New York City. Terence O'Donnell was appointed to succeed Mr. Marshall two months ago, the latter resigning for reasons not given at the time. Mr. Marshall had held the office four years and is well known in athletic circles. Mr. Marshall is said to have lived an exemplary life.

FOR CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

The annual meeting of the New Jersey Civil Service Reform Association will be held next Monday, November 18, at 4 p. m., in Senator Colby's office, No. 738 Broad street, Newark. Matters of importance will be discussed and plans laid for an aggressive campaign before the incoming Legislature for the passage of a law which will eliminate the "spoils" system in the public service. Governor-elect Fort has expressed himself as strongly in favor of a Civil Service law, and the members of the association feel confident that with the Governor's aid a measure making all appointments under the merit system will be passed by the next Legislature.

Mad Bulldog Bites Horse.

Montclair, Nov. 16.—A mad bulldog belonging to Silas Marshall, of No. 139 Bloomfield avenue, spread terror here yesterday and caused panic among the children attending the Maple avenue school. Parker Jacobus was attacked and a horse was bitten. Patrolman Thomas Dockery killed the dog.

John Stringham, of Philadelphia, who has been visiting friends in this city and attending the half-yearly meeting of Friends, has returned home.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

As a general rule, girls of the poorer classes have far more beautiful hair than the children of the wealthy. So much is this the case that a Parisian doctor says that one can easily recognize, by the superior quality of their hair, those girls in society whose parents have risen from poverty to wealth.

One woman has an album which she calls her shadowgraph. In it are pasted the profiles in shadow of her friends. "My shadowgraph is a character book," said she. "There is a great deal to be learned in the study of profiles. You have no idea how much you can ascertain regarding a person's character just from the study of the side face."

It now develops that through all Mr. Sage's long life Mr. Sage was his second right hand. She had his business confidence. She counseled and advised with him and long before his death he drew up and laid before her the plans which are now being executed to help make the social and spiritual world better. Mrs. Sage is displaying business qualities in her conduct of the estate which the world never divined she possessed. Her marriage life was extremely happy. Mr. Rockefeller has given away to education, churches and other public institutions more than $100,000,000. It is well known that Mrs. Rockefeller is his strongest business adviser. There are few important transactions in which he may be engaged that she is not consulted about. Vice President Fairbanks will not make a move that may affect his public future without consultation with his wife. The affairs of the national Republican convention of 1900 were halted until he could consult her as to whether he should withdraw from the race for the Vice Presidential nomination or not and it was her advice that made him President McKinley's choice for the Presidency in 1904, a choice which probably would have been ratified if the Canton man had lived. Masterful and impetus in many things as President Roosevelt is, Mrs. Roosevelt is his partner in that which most concerns his life. He goes to her for guidance, as she looks to him for strength.

Did you know that there is a correct and an incorrect way to hold the saucer in which your teacup rests? The correctness consists in whether or not it is held gracefully. Watch the woman at an afternoon tea and you will see that not all, indeed few, handle the cup and saucer in the most engaging way. Here is the secret: Instead of holding the saucer with the four fingers placed beneath it and the thumb above the rim—as nearly every woman does—form a half circle with the thumb and first finger, clasping the saucer in it, and giving a slight support from below with the third and fourth fingers. A woman who does this may have the largest hands in the room, but they will appear the most graceful and charmingly managed.

Wild Pigeons Coming Back.

The announcement that a flock of wild pigeons, estimated at 1,000 birds, are nesting in Sullivan County, New York, proves that this bird, once so numerous, is not extinct, as has been popularly supposed. Thirty years ago, wild pigeons were to be seen by the million in Potter, Elk, Warren, McKean, and Cameron counties, New York. In Potter and McKean counties was one of the largest nesting grounds in North America. The roosts were from four to five miles long and from one to three miles wide, and their numbers no man could count. No other birds were ever known to migrate in such numbers. The pigeons swept across the sky in such masses that it is not exaggeration to say that they often obscured the sun. Hunters were permitted to shoot them and net them on their nesting grounds, so that the slaughter was terrific. In one day in 1851 the American Express Company carried from the northern tier of Pennsylvania and the southern tier of New York, over the Erie Railroad, seven tons of pigeons to the city market, and in one season the total aggregated fifty-six tons. Hundreds shot them by the barrel on their nesting grounds, until they got tired of picking up the game. Pigeon potpie, a great native delicacy, palled on the taste. After the pigeons were practically exterminated, the law stepped in to protect them, and now that the birds are coming back again, it is thought, if the laws are properly enforced, there may soon be great flocks again.—Washington Herald.

State Stops Crowding of Schools.

Phillipsburg, Nov. 16.—The State inspector of high schools has called the attention to the crowded condition of the high school here, and has intimated to the local Board of Education that unless present conditions are corrected the State school appropriations will be cut off. This has put it up to the School Board to build a new high school.

Dr. Morris Pleads Not Guilty.

Dr. Walter H. Morris, of Newark, who in his automobile is alleged to have run down and killed Marcus J. Jacobs, a theatrical manager, in Broad street, that city, on September 26 last, pleaded not guilty yesterday to a charge of manslaughter. His father furnished $15,000 bail. The trial was set for December 3.

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring having about recovered from a severe attack of throat trouble, expects to occupy his pulpit at the First Presbyterian church tomorrow.

Mr. Barnes, of New York

By Archibald Clavering Gunter

Author of Mr. Barnes of New York, Mr. Potter of Texas, That Frenchman, Etc.

A Sequel to Mr. Barnes of New York

COPYRIGHT, 1907, DODD MEAD & CO. N.Y.

The wind howls about them. The night is even blacker, but keeping the sheen of the cliff close at his left, Barnes stumbles over the granite slopes almost carrying the exhausted girl. Finally, compelled by the howling of the wind, he calls into her ear: "Courage! I see the hut. Thank God, someone has a fire inside it."

"Perhaps it is made by the awful bandits, the Rochini and Romano who murder so many poor travellers," shudders Marina.

But undeterred by this, using the light as a beacon, her escort rapidly approaches the open door of the little cabin, from which issues a cheerful gleam.

Suddenly they pause, for a deep tone issues threateningly from its interior: "Hola, if you are gendarmes, beware of me!"

"Madre mia," gasps Marina, with a low scream, "that voice."

"Bandit or no bandit, you shall give us warmth and shelter!" calls Barnes in answer. Then he too, stands astounded, as from the rough door strides a man, and outlined by the flickering blazes and surrounded by the mists of the mountains is a face that makes Marina tremble and shrink: "Holy Mother of God, a ghost!"

For it is the countenance of her foster father, old Tomasso Monaldi, whom everyone had thought dead from the night of her wedding.

But now the goblin recognizes her; it cries: "Marina! daughter of my heart! you have come to succor your poor old hunted down Tomasso," and sinking on his knees, it catches the half fainting girl's hand, and kisses it reverently.

"You, alive, dear old Tomasso? Impossible!" half shudders, half sobs the girl, sinking down beside the spirit and looking into his deep, dark eyes that gleam so lovingly upon her.

"Two weeks ago, on the morning of the tragedy, De Belloc's soldiers reported to that officer in my presence that they'd killed you," says Barnes impressively.

"Bah!" sneers the ghost; "the sergeant, I suppose, told his officer they shot me. The soldiers fired. It was easier for me to fall down behind a granite boulder than stand up and let them shoot again, though it was the darkness of the early morning. Then I came up on the mountain here, and fearing the soldiers would again pursue me, I have been a hermit, descending at night to the lower valleys to garner chickens and steal sheep."

"Holy smoke," grins the American, "here's the fellow for whose death they have vendettaed me, alive and talking!"

CHAPTER XIII.
"Glorious Bandits."

The storm fairly howls about them, but Marina forgets it as Tomasso half sobs: "Your coming here, dear mistress, shows you forgive me for the killing of the Englishman, your husband, the one who murdered Antonio in the duel," and the flickering light revealing Barnes' face, he exclaims: "The American who saw your brother slain. Ah, now you agree with me this accursed Anstruther's death was just."

"Thank God, you didn't murder him!" cries the girl. "Your stiletto entered the heart of Musso Danella, who deserved death for his lies."

"I killed poor Musso Danella?" stammers the old Corsican. Then he mutters as if he can't believe: "No, no, I heard his groan as I struck through the curtains."

"'Twas the groan of Musso Danella," answers Marina. "That you killed the right man proves my husband innocent. 'Twas the hand of God directed you." The girl's voice is very reverent.

"Then if it was the hand of God, Danella's death is sure proof your husband killed not Antonio," says Tomasso solemnly, making the sign of the cross; but again breaks forth: "No, no—the proofs Musso gave to both you and me made us believe this Anstruther, your spouse, shot your brother. The things he held up to our very eyes——"

"Were the property of another English officer—one killed in action on a British warship under the Egyptian guns at Alexandria! Do you think I'd live in the arms of a man with my brother's blood upon him?" cries the young wife fervidly.

"No, that is not possible, also," agrees old Monaldi.

"But," interjects Barnes, "while you jabber here, your darling mistress dies of cold."

"Oh, my heart is warm enough with joy at seeing Tomasso live to make me forget the icy wind," and the enthusiastic girl kisses the rugged face of her old servitor.

"Nevertheless, I have not forgotten supper," suggests the common-sense American, and half drags Marina into the cabin. "Eating first and affection afterward."

Here, as they warm themselves before the fire, Tomasso remarks: "I have little to offer you, dear mistress, but some dried sheep's flesh."

"Pish! hunger is nothing. You are alive, dear old Tomasso," re[illegible] mumbles her hand. Still the young lady's eyes seem happier when Barnes, opening his haversack, throws out cans of preserved meats, potted chicken and tinned biscuits; also tea and coffee and tin cups and plates. These being followed by a box of cigars, the American emits a snor of joy, and remarks: "Little Leboet is a genius."

Immediately all together they go to work to make a mountain supper. Soon after, as they eat, Barnes remarks: "This is a mighty curious coincidence. Do you know, old Tomasso, that Saliceti, the young politician here, the one who is to marry your daughter, Etheria, has sworn a vendetta against me for putting the troops on your track and getting you shot to death?"

"A vendetta against you? Well, it was his duty, seeing he is to marry my daughter, had your soldiers killed me," returns the old Corsican, in his simple way.

A moment after, however, he chuckles to himself: "Per Dio, that was what Rochini and Romano wanted me to do to-day—I was to kill you."

"Those awful monsters," shudders Marina.

"What makes you think that, Monaldi?" asks Barnes, surprise upon his face.

"Well, this Rochini, and his mate, have been run out of Rotondo, the farmers there having got tired of their sheep disappearing too rapidly, and have come over to this mountain. To-day these two approached me some four hours ago and said: 'Brother bandit out of a job, join us. A messenger has been sent ahead and we are going down to help Saliceti make votes for himself by killing the Americano down in the vale toward Guagno.'"

"Hum! then you did not accept," remarks Barnes, lighting his cigar.

"I am not quite bandit enough to shoot a man I have never heard of before," answers old Monaldi proudly, "so I said: 'No.' 'Ah, but he will have gold with him,' cried Rochini. 'Foreigners always have gold,' said Romano, and the two went on their way. They are down the valley now."

"That is not all of it," says Barnes earnestly. "Your loved mistress—her life is in danger, too."

"Not by those or any other men while I, Tomasso, am alive," answers the old man savagely.

"No, but by Cipriano Danella, Musso's brother, and the scar-eyed young man, Musso's nephew."

"Oh, yes; I know them both. They—they threaten her?" The old Corsican gazes with love and reverence upon the being he adores. "Threaten her—these people?" he exclaims vindictively.

"Yes, because your stiletto killed Musso, they say she plotted with you for his murder, so as to save her husband," remarks Barnes, puffing his cigar.

"What, when she shrieked to me not to strike through the curtain. Ah, but I have something to say to Musso's relatives. And my friend, Saliceti, whom I once voted for, who is to marry my Etheria—if he is with them, I will have a word with Saliceti, and should he not prove pliable Etheria must get another for husband. Girls should not marry corpses, and Saliceti will be dead." As if the matter is ended, old Monaldi fills a battered cherrywood pipe with the strong, bitter, native tobacco of the island, lights it and goes to puffing contentedly.

Certainly I Am Refreshed, Another Cup of Tea and I Will Go with You.

"Neither of the Danellas is in Corsica," remarks Barnes. "The danger will come to your mistress when she returns to her husband on the French mainland. But Saliceti has abducted my wife and brought her here—so that I, following him, shall come to my death in Bocognano."

"Pah, nothing will come to your wife to-night," says old Monaldi. "Girls picking wild strawberries were talking that the day after to-morrow the people vote. They have a meeting this evening in Bocognano. I listened from behind a rock [illegible] heard them."

But Barnes is not so easy about his captured bride; he steps out of the cabin and finds the wind has died away, the mist has cleared with the rapidity usual to mountain storms.

He steps in and says anxiously to Marina: "The evening is very clear. You know my anguish—do you think you have strength to venture down the heights, assisted by Tomasso and me, and enter your own village?"

"Certainly, I am refreshed. Another cup of tea and I will go with you," cries the girl so eagerly that Barnes puts grateful eyes upon her, for he knows it is her spirit more than her strength that produces her assent to further journey.

They are making hurried preparations to leave the cabin. Barnes is bending over the fire, brewing Marina's tea—their guns, and even the American's revolvers are lying in their belt on the pile of boughs near the entrance. Tomasso is saying: "Will I not astonish the men who swore a vendetta against you for my death! I who am alive and—and—" when suddenly Tomasso stops. There is a rattle in his throat that causes Barnes to look hurriedly up. Marina has retreated to the corner of the cabin and Monaldi's eyes are full of horror.

Just across the fire from him stand two dark mountaineers. Rough, undressed sheepskins cover their brawny shoulders; long guns are in their hands and stilettos in their belts. One is a big, powerful looking ruffian; the other slighter, but his brown limbs lithe and sinewy. The eyes of both are shining malevolently in the blaze.

"Corp di diavolo, this is a rare catch you have made, hermit bandit, whose name we do not know," chuckles the bigger of the two men; "this Americano whose pockets Saliceti declared were lined with gold, he whom we waited for and missed in the vale below."

"Ah, you are Rochini and Romano, I believe from your speech, gentlemen," says Barnes quietly.

"Aye, that we are. And who is this woman of the beautiful eyes? Hand thy captives over to us, hermit bandit. Divide your spoils with us and we will save you the trouble of cutting the man's throat," jeers the slighter miscreant.

"As for the woman, the fire tells me she is very lovely both as to limbs and face, and I have a better use for her," guffaws the bigger man.

And never was Marina more beautiful. She confronts the ruffians with undaunted mien, and says commandingly: "Fellows, dare to lay your hands on me and the whole of Bocognano will hunt you down. The Bellacoscia will destroy you. I am Marina Paoli."

"Oh, she is merry with us, this girl who runs after foreign gentlemen. Now we will show her that Corsican kisses are as good as those of this Americano."

Brutally they draw near to her. As the girl draws back from the contaminating clasp of the monsters, Tomasso, with a savage cry, and uplifted stiletto, stands between.

In a second the old man will be dead under their knives and the brave girl their prey. Marina's undaunted eyes, turning in appeal to the American, see with astonishment that he makes no move to aid her, but is abjectly squirming toward the cabin door. Suddenly she utters a gasp of despair and a sigh of contempt; this great pistol shot is running timidly away, flying out of the cabin, though as he passes the pile of boughs he seizes the belt holding his two revolvers.

"He has the gold! After him!" cries Rochini.

"We'll knife him in a minute!" yells Romano, and the two, cocking their guns, fly after the dastard American.

But as they reach the door, the moment their athletic forms are outlined by the blaze of the fire, two quick, sharp pistol reports come from the outside, and Rochini and Romano, without even a cry, fall to the earth, inert and dead.

The smoke of Barnes' revolvers issues from them as he quietly re-enters and says apologetically: "I knew I wouldn't have time to grab my guns and shoot before they'd knife me, so I imitated the trick of Jerry, the Denver barkeeper, and ran away till I could get my weapons ready."

A moment later he says: "Come!" and taking Marina carefully in his arms, whispers: "Turn your face from them," and steps over the dead men lying in the entrance of the cabin.

Behind him, Tomasso, following, carrying the American's rifle, is saying: "Oh, you will be worshiped in this commune for this. So many poor men have been butchered, so many poor women have been carried away to the mountains by these dead devils."

But the reports have drawn others to the spot. As Barnes steps over the dead men lying in the entrance of the cabin, he suddenly says: "By heaven, here are more of them!" puts Marina down and would draw his revolvers were he not seized by three athletic young fellows who rise silently from the shadows about them.

A clear, commanding voice remarks: "No more of Rochini and his fellows. You have saved us the trouble of their killing. We are the Bellacoscia. Your pistols, stranger, have relieved us of the execution of these ruffians we were pursuing, who have brought discredit on the honored name of bandit."

And Tomasso is crying, "Antonio Bonelli," to a man of noble bearing, who, carbine in hand, comes into the cabin followed by eight stalwart young men, all armed as he is.

But the young men fear the supernatural and stand back, their eyes gleaming, and one shudders: "'Tis the ghost of old Monaldi, killed by De Belloc's troopers two weeks ago." For a moment they would retreat, but their leader laughs at them: "'Tis flesh and blood that is kissing my hand."

And old Tomasso says: "You know how well the troopers shoot. Do you think they'd hit a man at 200 yards hiding behind a rock in the gloom of the morning?"

But the flashing-eyed man orders: "Stand back, while I question this stranger who has done Bocognano a service to-night."

Marina has risen, murmuring: "Antonio Bonelli!"

"Gran Dio! Mademoiselle Paoli," says the man, and gallantly sinks upon his knee and kisses devotedly the fair hand the girl extends to him. After a moment he continues most emphatically: "It was with sorrow that Corsica heard that you had forgotten the oath of the vendetta in the arms of the English officer who killed your brother."

"That was not so," cries Marina. "The English officer who shot Antonio fell under the Egyptian guns by the hand of God. The man I love is free of any blood stain."

"Ah, the murderer of your brother fell by the hand of God. It is well. And this cavalier, is he your husband?"

"Oh, no; he is an American against whom foul wrong has been done by Saliceti," and introducing Barnes she says: "Tell this great bandit your story and he will give you justice. He has done so often in Bocognano."

Briefly the American relates the kidnaping of his wife, and listening to this, the Corsican says: "No outrage against woman was ever perpetrated in Bocognano without my avenging her, and this crime against a strange lady—ah, the hospitality of the island forbids it. Descend with me to the village, Americano, who has done such a great service in the slaying of these miscreants, who have dishonored our noble calling, and we, the Bellacoscia, will give your bride back to you and right your wrong."

"Dio mio," cries Marina excitedly. "Now that our glorious bandits love you, Burton, your wrongs will be righted!"

DOUBTS NAVY MARRIAGE RULE.

Fiancee of Ensign Metcalf Doesn't Think He'll Have to Get Father's Official Consent to Wed.

San Francisco, Nov. 16.—Miss Marie Butters, of Oakland, who is to become the wife of Ensign Victor H. Metcalf, Jr., son of the Secretary of the Navy, does not believe the report from Washington that the rule of the Navy Department forbidding officers to marry without first obtaining consent of the Secretary of the Navy will be strictly enforced in the case of Ensign Metcalf, nor that if Mr. Metcalf weds before he attains the rank of lieutenant he will be court martialled and dismissed from the service.

Miss Butters said yesterday: "I have not received any such word and I don't believe it. Mr. Metcalf and I are engaged, but no date has yet been set for our wedding."

Mrs. C. H. Nicholson, grandmother of the engaged Ensign, is also of the opinion that Secretary Metcalf would not be so cruel as to stand in the way of a love match.

SCHOLASTIC BASKETBALL

City and Borough Schools and Leal's School to Compete for Local Title.

SILVER CUP FOR CHAMPIONS.

Schedule Arranged Yesterday at Y. M. C. A. and Games Will Be Played at the Association Gymnasium.

With the football season nearly over, local school boys are showing great interest in the basketball outlook and representatives from the city and borough high schools and Leal's school met with George L. Listman, physical director of the Y. M. C. A., at the association yesterday afternoon, when a scholastic basketball league was formed of the three school fives. The first game is to be played Tuesday, December 10, and each team will play three games with each of the other teams.

League organization as effected at the meeting yesterday afternoon, makes Mr. Listman chairman, and D. L. Browan, manager of the Leal's school five, secretary. The games will be played in the association Tuesday or Wednesday afternoons at 3:30 o'clock. Mr. Listman will act as referee, and twenty minute halves wil be played. The winning team will receive a handsome silver cup to be presented by the Y. M. C. A. and each member of the championship five will be awarded silver medals, appropriately engraved. The schedule follows:

Tuesday, December 10, N. P. H. S. vs. Leal's; Tuesday, December 17, P. H. S. vs. N. P. H. S.; Wednesday, January 8, Leal's vs. P. H. S.; Tuesday, January 21, N. P. H. S. vs. Leal's; Wednesday, January 29, P. H. S. vs. N. P. H. S.; Wednesday, February 5, P. H. S. vs. Leal's; Tuesday, February 18, N. P. H. S. vs. Leal's; Tuesday, March 10, N. P. H. S. vs. P. H. S.; Wednesday, March 18, P. H. S. vs. Leal's.

Of the three teams entered in the league, the Leal's School five is the only one which is already organized. Captain Duke has two teams at work at the Y. M. C. A. Friday afternoons, when a short practise is held after the regular class of the school boys. D. L. Brown, as manager of the team, has arranged a schedule of a score of games with strong out of town school teams, and the local school boys will have several good trips. The team is fast working into shape, for the boys have no football team this year, and are devoting the time to basketball practise.

The city high school five of last year lost two men by graduation, but there is considerable good material on hand, including several of last year's "subs." The boys have not yet organized by electing a captain, and there has been no practise, but after the football season is over, the last year's five will get together and elect a captain and the work of practising for the league will be commenced. Manager Gus Nash has already scheduled ten games with out of town school fives, six of which will be played in this city. For these games, as for their practise, the boys will use the gymnasium at the school. The school schedule for the season follows:

Friday, December 21, Stuyvesant High School at Plainfield; Friday, January 10, Hasbrouck Heights Institute at Plainfield; Friday, January 17, Adelphia Academy at Brooklyn; Friday, January 24, Rahway High School at Rahway; Friday, January 31, Bayonne High School at Plainfield; Friday, February 14, Hasbrouck Heights Institute at Jersey City; Saturday, February 15, Summit High School at Plainfield; Saturday, February 29, Summit High School at Summit; Friday, March 13, Rahway High School at Plainfield; Friday, March 20, Adelphia Academy at Plainfield. February 7, February 21 and March 6 are open dates. All the games will be played at 3:30 in the afternoon.

Over in the borough, all members of last year's five are still in school but have not organized, or come out for practise. The manager is preparing a schedule of games with out of town teams.

CITY AND BOROUGH ELEVENS IN CHAMPIONSHIP FOOTBALL.

Corresponding to the interest being shown in the college football world today in the Yale-Princeton contest, local football enthusiasts of the city and borough schools are present in large numbers at Hope Common this afternoon, where the high school elevens of city and borough are engaged in a contest for the local championship of the gridiron. The two teams met early in the season, and the score was a tie, though the boroughites had a slight advantage. Since then both teams have been working hard, strengthening their weakenesses and learning new plays.

Lindsey Best, who is coaching the city school eleven, said today, "I am much encouraged by the showing the boys made against that heavy Laurenceville team Wednesday. They didn't win, but they played football all the time. I believe that if they play like that against the borough, they will win today." Benjamin Phelps, who has taken the borough eleven through a highly successful season so far, said: "I think the other team has it on us in weight, but the boys are going to fight all the harder, and at least can be depended upon to make a good showing."

Playing in Somerville.

The football eleven of the Holy Cross choir boys' club are in Somerville today, playing the high school team there. The team made the trip by trolley.

UNOCCUPIED TROLLEY SPEEDS THROUGH TOWN.

Boys Starts It Going, Then Jumps Off, Letting It Run Through East Rutherford.

Hackensack, Nov. 16.—Residents of East Rutherford saw yesterday the unusual sight of a trolley car, Newark and Hackensack, speeding along through the town without the motorman, conductor or a passenger. The car was standing in front of the barn in East Rutherford, where it was left by the crew while they went inside and waited for their regular schedule. When the time was up for the car to leave the crew emerged from the barn, only to find the car missing. Believing that some one had run it in the house, they made a search for the car, but were unable to locate it. The men then became alarmed and reported to the assistant superintendent that their car had been stolen.

For the fifteen minutes that followed there was no end of excitement. Men were sent in every direction to round up the runaway car, the telephone was worked with more alacrity than ever before, and several persons along the route from the barn to the White line crossing who were called up reported having seen the car go by, but none dared to stop its progress. Finally the car hove in sight, in charge of an old employe of the line. He said that while he was standing near the White line crossing the car came along. Seeing that it was without a crew, he jumped abroad and took charge. The only explanation that the trolley officials can give is that some mischievous boy, seeing the car standing at the garn, stepped aboard, turned on the power and then slid off again.
